A highly informative and educational address in which the mysteries of the X-ray were aptly described was given members of the Belleville Kinsmen Club by Mr. R. G. Williams, X-ray technician of the Belleville General Hospital at their fortnightly banquet held in the New Queens Hotel last night.

Clubmen listened with interest as Mr. Williams described the origin of what is now known as one of the greatest boons to humanity. He illustrated his address with pictures and photographs that brought out to the full the intricate workings of this marvel of science.

The speaker was introduced by Kinsmen Dr. Ralph Bird, with club appreciation being expressed by Kinsmen Don Rowe.

During the business session of the meeting Past-President Cleo Colling, who occupied the chair in the absence of President William Hurst, informed members that the annual Kid-Kar Derby would be held this year in affiliation with the General Motors Corporation. The winner of the Derby, he explained, will be sent to Akron to compete in the world's championship events, but not as the official Canadian champion.

Members by a unanimous vote expressed themselves as being in favor of a mooted softball league in which service clubs of the city will participate. Final plans for the holding of the club theatre night which takes place at the McCarthy Theatre next Monday night during which prizes of handsome silverware to the value of $175 will be given away, were made, the chairman pointed out.

Kinsmen "Buster" Lebarr acted as Sergt-at-Arms with Kinsmen Gardner Duff leading the community singing.

DRAFT JUDGMENT IS AGREED UPON

Action Arose Out of an Accident in City 18 Months Ago

Judgment for $383.00 was agreed upon by contesting solicitors in the Lepore vs. John Rigby and Harry J. Rigby damage action heard before the Honorable Mr. Justice Urquhart at the opening of the Non-Jury Sittings of the Supreme Court of Ontario in Belleville yesterday.

The action arose out of an accident, during which a motor vehicle driven by Harry Rigby struck a teen-aged lad named Lepore, resulting in serious injuries at the time. The accident happened over 18 months ago, while the damage action settled yesterday had been postponed from the Non Jury Sittings of one year ago, pending settlement of judgment.

Charles A. Payne, K.C., appeared on behalf of the plaintiffs and assured His Lordship the solicitors concerned had agreed upon a draft judgment of $383.00 against the defendants. Alan Sprague, solicitor for the defendents, substantiated the statement. His Lordship issued the court order as provided in the agreed draft judgment.

The plaintiffs in two divorce actions were granted a decree nisi in each incident, both divorce questions being uncontested. Roy C. Gatcum, Belleville, was granted a decree nisi from his wife, D. Buelah Gatcum of Trenton, without costs.

E. C. Waymark, Stirling, was granted a decree nisi in a divorce action against his wife Mabel Waymark, of this city, with costs against the defendant.

GOOD CAMPBELL LEAVES OFFICE

Reeve of Deseronto Has Sent Resignation to Council

When the Hastings County Council convenes for its summer session here on the third Tuesday in June, one of its most familiar faces will be missing. For at the last meeting of the Deseronto Town Council, Reeve Good. M. Campbell veteran councillor and a prominent figure in municipal politics of the county, tendered his resignation because of ill-health. It was accepted with expressions of sincere regret by members of the council.

Nominations to fill the vacancy caused by Reeve Campbell's resignation will be held on May 17th and if an election is deemed necessary, it will be held on May 25th.

Both Reeve and Mrs. Campbell have been in poor health for some time, the latter only recently having returned from Belleville General Hospital where she underwent a serious operation. They will leave for North Bay in the near future where they expect to spend the summer.

Reeve Campbell, who in fourteen years of municipal work, five of which have been spent as reeve of Deseronto and in County Council, will be missed by his colleagues in the county organization. For a number of years he has been an able representative on various committees, is an able debator and always had the well-being of his municipality and county at heart.

For six years he was a member of Thurlow Township Council and claims to be the first Conservative elected to that body. A member of Deseronto Town Council for eight years, he was elected reeve five years ago, a position he has filled efficiently and well.

He was for many years Indian Agent in Deseronto, being succeeded in that position by the late H. J. Eade.

S. A. Youth Group Hold Meeting

The Salvation Army's Youth Group held their first meeting of this season on Monday evening, at 8 p.m.

The meeting was opened by the singing of the hymn "What a Friend We Have in Jesus" after which prayer was offered by Miss Marjorie Alderman. The program then continued as follows—choruses led by Mr. Cyril Magor. Pianoforte duet by Miss Glenys Green and Miss Dorothea Alderman entitled "Over Hill and Dale". Announcements by Mrs. Major Alderman. Recitation by Miss I. Sharpe "A Darky's Theology" Scripture reading by Mr. Arthur Pudge. Address by Sergt. Major Hart. A pianoforte solo by Miss Jean Sharpe. The meeting was then closed with an old hymn "Take My Life and Let it Be" and Mrs. Major Alderman closed with prayer.

Sergt. Major Hart spoke on the topic "Maintain the spiritual glow and know the joy of Spiritual Health". He mentioned three stimulants for his topic —"Inspiration, regular habits of devotion having fellowship with other glowing souls and Christian service and activity".

The young people were congratulated on their good work in visiting the sick and those who were not able to attend church.

Police Blotter

Motorists who continue to disregard the city parking bylaw of one hour duration in the downtown area, are receiving police stickers when found in violation of Bylaw No. 3391, which pertains to violations of the hour parking restrictions in this city. Yesterday several delinquent motorists returned to their vehicles only to find police stickers affixed the windshields. The minimum fine of one dollar is being assessed in all cases, Chief Kidd stated today.

Activities proved rather serene in and around city police circles following the week-end of increased motorized traffic, that was noted on Sunday. No arrests have been necessary since. Last night, however, the least number of transients to seek shelter at the police station was registered at the police station when only five were accommodated.

SEARCHING DEBRIS MOTHER IS HAPPY AS SON RETURNS

Mrs. F. Simpson, of Trenton, Was Fearful 13 Year Old Boy Had Perished in Fire Which Destroyed House

Trenton, May 9 (Special)—While a frantic mother, Mrs. Frank Simpson, Herman Street, this town, and anxious neighbors, dug through the debris of the Simpson home which had been almost completely destroyed by fire a few hours before, fearful of finding the charred body of a 13-year-old son of the Simpson family in the half consumed frame structure, the youth came strolling on the scene shortly after nine-thirty o'clock this morning.

At two o'clock this morning fire which broke out from some unknown source completely destroyed the Simpson home and most of the contents with a loss estimated at $1,500 none of which is believed covered by insurance.

In the absence of the father who is at present confined to the Belleville General Hospital, the three small children of the house were awakened by the crackle of the flames, and hurried downstairs to awaken the mother. Almost at the same time, J. Donaldson, 15-year-old neighbor, returning home from a late party became aware of the fire and rang in a hasty alarm. He was later commended by the Fire Chief for such prompt action.

Firemen battled the flames with water sent through two hose lines of 1,000 feet each in an unsuccessful attempt to save the home.

The thirteen-year-old son of the family who had been fishing during Monday afternoon until late, arrived home in the evening to find the house locked and the family absent. He had stayed at the home of a neighbor during the night and was unaware of the fire which destroyed the home. This morning while a frantic search was being undertaken for his body in the charred ruins, he arrived on the scene.

MAKERS GIVEN PART OF BONUS

Kingston Cheese Board Endorses This Action in Their District

At the inaugural meeting of the Kingston Cheese Board on Saturday, the following resolution was passed:

"Resolved that the Kingston Cheese Board request the Ontario Farm Products Central Board and the Ontario Cheese Producers' Marketing Board provide a regulation that no licence be given to any individual or concern unless and until it may be established that there are no arrears to cheese companies by reason of purchase made prior to 1939 by any agent or person associated in business with any applicant.

The Board endorsed a resolution passed by the Central Ontario Cheesemakers' Association in regard to the bonus on high scoring first grade cheese manufactured in Canada, to be given by the Dominion Government.

The original resolution asked that, "We respectfully request the Federal Minister of Agriculture to express the opinion that the cheesemakers be considered as a party to this by allocating them twenty-five per cent. on all cheese manufactured by them, and eligible for this bonus."

In future, meetings of the Kingston Cheese Board will be held each week on Thursday afternoon instead of Saturday.

Royal Train May Stop Here Two Minutes

Belleville residents may get at least a two-minute glimpse of Their Majesties, the King and Queen on their passage through this city at the North Station of the Canadian National Railways on the evening of May 21st, according to latest word received this morning by Mayor Jamieson Bone.

Advice received by the Mayor stated that the Royal train would arrive at the station at 9.08 p.m., Daylight Saving Time, and would make a complete stop for a two minute period.

"While we have received no assurance that Their Majesties would appear on the platform at the station, we have been given to understand, and we are pretty certain that they will appear," stated Mayor Bone.

This information has been given the special committee of city council engaged with the preparations for the royal visit in Belleville, and the matter of decorating has been left in the committes' hands, it was stated.

Letter Containing Threat Message Is Received by Mayor Bone

Anonymous Writer 'Over-Stepped Mark' Says Chief Magistrate

REFERRED TO POLICE

Just one of many that have been received by him since accepting office, a missive filled with vindictive vituperation and threat, printed by block letters by an anonymous sender on a special brand of paper, received by Mayor Bone yesterday has been turned over to police of a Western Ontario town for discovery of the writer.

Dozens of the anonymous communications of similar nature have been sent the mayor during the past week, but none as threatening as yesterday's missive, it was reported by the mayor.

"Ordinarily I would pay no attention to any anonymous letter, but this fellow has overstepped the mark a little and I have referred it to the police of his own municipality.

"I'd like to meet one of these 'blackhanders' face to face, just to see what kind of creatures they are," he remarked.

MINING TO BOOST OUTBOUND TRADE

C. E. MacDonald Speaks to Chamber on Encouragement to Industry

Hamilton, Ont., May 9 (CP)—C. E. Macdonald of Toronto told delegates to the Canadian Chamber of Commerce's Foreign Trade Conference today that he was sure of the Canadian mining industry's ability byl steady growth to "provide a substantial proportion of Canada's outbound trade."

"Paying as it does over $100,000,000 a year in dividends, it is giving an excellent return to those who have had faith in it and stuck with it," said Mr. Macdonald, Sales Manager of International Nickel Company of Canada.

He said the mining industry is contributing to the export trade as much as wheat adn four combined, or nearly one-quarter of the Dominion's total trade, and he believed the industry had justified the faith of the many investors who had made possible its development.

"Some of you may say, 'yes but think of all the money that has been lost in mining.' My reply is that the mining industry, while it recognizes the gamble inherent in an effort to bring many mines into productio, it refused to recognize as part of its business the ups and downs and profits and losses of Bay Street (Toronto) and Wall Street operators.

300 Germans From Frontier Zones in Poland Expelled

Warsaw, May 9.—(CP-Havas)—Polish authorities have ordered the expulsion of 300 Germans from Frontier zones where they recently took up residence, it was officially confirmed today.

The action is being taken under the law for the protection of the frontier on the grounds that the presence of these Germans in the zone is not justified.

(The official German news agency said in Berlin that the frontier residents affected were not German citizens but members of the German minority in Poland. They were ordered to make their abode in the interior of Poland, it was added.)

Polish newspapers reported that 15 German citizens of Polish origin, active members of the Polish Union in Germany, have been expelled from the Kachubi and Pomeranian border zones.

3 APPLICATIONS FOR LIFE GUARD

Parks Board Will Make Appointment at Next Meeting

Applications for the position of Life Guard at Victoria Park for the year 1939 were received and considered at last night's regular meeting of the Belleville Parks Commission in the City Hall. Only three applications were received and following discussions upon the appointment, the matter was left in abeyance until the next meeting of the Board. Applications were received from George Semark, former Life Guard at Victoria Park, Tommy Peddar, well known professional swimmer and North American weight-lifting champion and also from B. J. Ritchie all of this city.

Accounts were passed and Chairman W. A. Woodley announced that 75 young trees had been planted around the city by the Board in its effort to replenish the rapid decrease of city trees owing to the extensive trimming activities of the Board during the past few years. "These young trees are all of sturdy growth and will doubtless prove valuable in a short time in making our program of tree replenishment successful," explained Commissioner Woodley. The Board voted to immediately commence the season's activities in grooming the city parks in preparation for the rapidly approaching summer season. "All of our parks must be cleaned and made presentable before Victoria Day," suggested Commissioner Armstrong.

Those present at last night's meeting were Commissioners Colling, Armstrong, Clapp and Chairman W. A. Woodley.

FOR CHARITY'S SAKE

'And the greatest of these is charity.'

Perhaps there is no place in the daily life of a smaller city where charity in all its forms can be seen to better advantage than in the daily police court, such as at Belleville. Wanderlings, erring youths, persons in despair and forgotten men in pitiful plight may be found at times. With seemingly few to turn to and guide them, not infrequently they appear on minor charges with an air of indifference towards life and their fellow-citizens, who they may think have forgotten them. It is of course to be noted that there also are seen in court persons to whom this description does not apply.

But there appears in police courts a uniformed individual whose presence always appears to give derelicts encouragement—he is the local Salvation Army officer. Belleville is no exception to this "Army" rule and from a reporter's observation perhaps Belleville is more fortunate than other places in this regard, because Major H. S. Alderman of the Belleville Salvation Army headquarters is a daily visitor at the city police station and to the city police court sessions where numerous cases are given into his custody by court officials following suspended sentences imposed by the court.

During the past year Major Alderman has made over 175 visits to the County jail where he gives advice and comfort to all races, colors and creeds without distinction. All are welcomed by the Salvation Army, none is refused shelter and advice. Mrs. Alderman in turn visits the women who from time to time find themselves incarcerated in the County jail and through her efforts these women are quite frequently rehabilitated upon their release through the efforts of Mrs. Alderman and the Army.

Each Sunday morning at 9.30 a.m. the sound of voices singing hymns of praise can be heard emanating from inside the grim grey walls of the County jail. Here the Salvation Army, under Major Alderman, holds service for the benefit of the inmates, thus keeping them in touch with the Bible and religion in an effort to bring them into more direct contact with Christian brotherhood and society. "I really do believe the only time some of these inmates ever attend church is when they are in our jails and the Salvation Army holds divine worship at which they must attend each Sunday," an official is credited with saying recently.

On many occasions since Major Alderman assumed his duties with the Belleville branch of the Salvation Army, Chief Kidd of the Police Department and Magistrate Butler of the Police Court, have turned over youths, who have gone slightly astray, into the care of Major Alderman with the most satisfactory results. Standing at the rear of every city police court proceedings, Major Alderman can be seen taking in the proceedings and often this kindly Salvation Army officer places a knowing arm on some poor unfortunate's shoulder to give him a word of encouragement and the necessary word of advice.

It is charity work of this type indeed which is one of the outstanding contributions of the Salvation Army where their work is done without cost to municipality and without remuneration to the Army for these efforts to help mankind. With the Salvation Army building campaign now being presented to the citizens of Belleville it is well to remember this—"And the greatest of these is charity."

GERMAN OFFERS ALLEGED

There was published a few days ago in the Transcontinental Press at Warsaw an article stating that Germany twice offered Poland a part of Soviet Ukraine and "compensations" in Lithuania if Poland would join in an attack on the Soviet Union.

This statement was accompanied by the comment that as the government of Poland saw no objection to the publication of these allegations as an explanation of the vague references made by Foreign Minister Joseph Beck on Friday to past German suggestions, observers concluded that the Polish Gevernment wishes it to be known that Germany planned to use Poland in the furtherance of plans for eastern aggression.

Col. Beck's fearless rejection of Germany's demands can therefore be understood.

Germany it is said has taken affront at the suggestion that Poland has as much right to make a demand on Germany as Germany on Poland. This is taken as an affront or insult as showing the equality of Poland and Germany.

The universe is but one great city, full of beloved ones, divine and human nature, endeared to each other.—Epictetus.

If you have gentle words and looks, my friends,
To spare for me—If you have tears to shed
That I have suffered — keep them not, I pray,
Until I hear not, see not, being dead.

If you have flowers to give—fair lily buds,
Pink roses, daisies (meadow stars that be Mine own dear namesakes), let them bloom and make
The air while I still breathe it, sweet for me.

For loving looks, though fraught with tenderness,
And kindly tears, though they fall thick and fast,
And words of praise, alas! can naught avail
To lift the shadows from a life that's past.

And rarest blossoms, what can they suffice
Offered to one who can no longer gaze
Upon their beauty? Flowers in coffins laid
Impart no sweetness to departed days.

GROVER WHELAN, CZAR OF THE NEW YORK WORLD'S FAIR, made a good job of selling the fair and providing the finances, but at estimating the probable attendance ahead Grover is a washout. He estimated an attendance of one million on opening day, Sunday, April 30, but the attendance was only 605,504. The one million mark was not passed until Thursday at 2:85 p.m. when a honeymoon couple came underneath the wire winners and were given a varied assortment of gifts, besides getting their names and pictures in all the New York newspapers, as well as outside papers. The official attendance figures up to Thursday as released give:

Sunday, opening day, as	605,504
Monday	152,000
Tuesday	102,000
Wednesday	91,432
Thursday	49,000

Looks like the attendance is on the toboggan, with fine weather too, but no doubt many peopl eare waiting until the King and Queen of Great Britain visit the Fair.

When we were boys the swimming season at the Ole Swimmin' Hole started Twenty-Fourth of May ,when the summer season was formally opened and boys who were lucky like Huckleberry Finn, could start going barefooted—others had to wait until school closed for the summer holidays. How would you like to recover and relive the joy of the day school closed for the summer. As far as memory serves there has never been anything before or since to equal that unadulterated joy of being free from the chains that bound us to the school house in those olden, golden days.

IS ANDREW HOGG BROWN LEGALLY MARRIED TO VALADA GREEN? Amos Jones does not know ,neither do many eminent jurists in the United States. One California Judge says that he frankly does not know whether Andy is married or not, but hopes for the best. In any event the question has become one widely debated. At the wedding ceremony in Harlem the preacher had reached the words I NOW PRONOUNCE YOU……when a shot rang through the church and Andy found himself wounded with a bullet in his arm. This soured him on "Puddin' Face" and her gangster pals, especially as she did not go to see him at the hospital, busying herself buying a trousseau and charging it to Andy ,assuming that he was her husband, running up bills of over seven hundred dollars, which will make a big hole in Andy's eight hundred dollar nest egg. Andy's best witness to date in the court trial was a detective lip reading expert who swore he was looking right at the preacher's mouth when the shot came and he did not say the concluding words, MAN AND WIFE, the words upon which the case revolves.

At a meeting of the city council last night considerable business was transacted. Mayor Platt and all the aldermen were present. The chief object of the meeting was to consider new tenders for the collection of garbage for one year. A recommendation that Thomas Harris be given the contract for $5,600.00 was unanimously adopted. A motion prevailed that asphaltic concrete pavements be constructed on Campbell Street, between Front and Pinnacle Streets and on portions of Burnham, Ann, William and Coleman Streets. The Board of Education was requested, by motion, to convey to the city the old Pinnacle Street school building and grounds. Mr. O. I. White and Mr. P. G. Denike were appointed to act on the Housing Commission, together with the Mayor and a bylaw will be prepared for that purpose.

Publisher Writes His Obituary

"Advancing years, broken health and fading eyes constitute sufficient reason for any man withdrawing from work at once so arduous and exacting as running a daily newspaper. These and other reasons impel me to this act. I have sold this newspaper property, and this is the last issue under my ownership. It is therefore fitting and proper that I say my last farewell as an editor and newspaper owner.

"More than 36 years ago I had a dream which was not all a dream as Lord Byron said. I made that dream come true. Wholly without the light of experience to guide my feet I rushed in where angels might well fear to tread. I established a newspaper here in the then new little mining town of Henryetta. And during all those long weary years I worked all the time save when asleep. My energy knew no bounds and my zeal knew no limit in serving Henryetta with a paper.

"Opposing papers came aplenty but one after another I brushed them from the picture without ever saying a harmful word of them or any of them. At least four of them were financed against me while nobody ever offered me any money to help me win my battles.

"Meanwhile Henryetta did not grow into a big, prosperous city I had seen in my mind's eye. Rewards were meager in most cases, but I never turned back. I went right on. In this connection I am reminded of an observation by Col. Pat Hurley, Secretary of War under President Hoover. One night Colonel Hurley was visiting me in the old brick building at 207 South Fifth. He gazed around the interior, counting three Linotypes and a perfecting news press. Then he blurted out: 'If Henryetta had grown as Tulsa had, the Free-Lance would be the Tulsa World of Oklahoma'. That told the story. Henryetta refused to grow big, and I had to carry the handicap of being a militant Republican in the midst of a town as Democratic as Baton Rouge.

"But the Free-Lance has served my life purpose quite well, at that. It fed, clothed, reared and educated my three children, all of whom were born after I began the Free-Lance. Thus I suppose I should not complain, for after all, that is the most important function of any man—to rear and educate children and thus contribute the highest conception of citizenship. The Free-Lance helped me do those things.

"Nor can I now, that years are creeping up on me, ask my sons to dedicate their fine powers to the service of this little city as I have. The rewards are not sufficient. They are young, well educated, well trained and ambitious. I feel that I should free them from any sense of responsibility. For so long as I might own and operate these properties, those boys would toil day and night to take the load off me. But now they are free to chart their own life course.

"The creative instinct is rife in every normal male person and Free-Lance is my own creation. You may then easily guess that I cannot give it up without sharp pangs. In his elegy Thomas Gray said:

"'For who, to dumb forgetfulness a prey this pleasing, anxious being E'er resigned—
Left the warm precincts of the living day nor cast one longing,
Lingering look behind?'

"In saying goodbye to Free-Lance I cannot refrain from casting a longing, lingering look behind. Free-Lance and I have been good soldiers in the battle of life. Acknowledging no master but God, we have been reverently humble before him but before no earthly power. We have never bowed the knee to Baal. We have taken our punishment without whimpering and now stride off the battlefield with head erect and sword untarnished. Such a soldier as Free-Lance deserves a military funeral. In fancy I can hear the staccato rattle of the rifles as the salute is fired, and can hear the bugle sounding 'taps' at the grave of a newspaper that has never known fear. And as those long, winding notes float out on the winter air my throat aches as I turn away and realize that never again shall I break a lance on the field of editorial combat. The Free-Lance is no longer my sword and buckler. I must say that long farewell, no matter how it hurts. I cannot take the Free-Lance to Heaven with me, but I pray God that those who control its destinies may remember always that it may never be prostituted to any unworthy purpose or serve in any but a righteous cause.

"The Free-Lance has served Henryetta people well. It has rejoiced when your babies were born. Watched them grow into manhood and womanhood. Has praised the loveliness of the bride and the manliness of the groom. And lastly it has wept at the bier of your loved and lost, and scattered rhetorical roses above the new-made grave of your dead. Yes, it has been faithful to you.

"But all this is past. As Bayard Taylor said of the Arab when tempted to sell his steed: 'The stranger hath thy bridle-rein. Thy master hath his gold.' Bah! what is gold? What is mere money when weighed in the scale against the vibrant, pulsing vehicle that I created 36 years ago and named Free-Lance? I fear I shall feel that more money paid for such a thing is blood-money.

"Of course I do not have to do this thing which grieves me so. I could go on and on to the bitter end. But why should I? I must some day give it up, and why not now while I seem to have several years of life left.

"But I shall not leave Henryetta. Or at least not for long. My heart is here. All my productive life has been given to building this little city. There is not a public building, a road, a bridge or a lake that has not had my active help. During the ten years I served on the board of education here I built seven out of the nine school buildings in our system. I built the senior high—signed the bonds that made that structure possible. I built the auditorium—not alone of course, but most of those years as president of the board. I organized and named the Masonic Lodge here—back in 1901 even before I was married. I helped organize the First Christian Church here. I feel that I have done my part as best I could, and I want to end my days here.

"Of course I could take myself out of Henryetta, but could not take my heart out. If I were in Timbuctu I should awake every morning in Henryetta. Before cold reason had taken the throne I should look out to see the tree-crested hills that encircle this lovely town. My life work is here. My friends are here and the precious dust of my dead rests in West Lawn Cemetery. And there by her side I shall finally come to rest when life's fitful fever has come to an end. The reading public will never hear my editorial voice again. My voice may be heard in lyrics many of which I hope to write. I may even write more ambitious poems. But when you read these lines, listen in spirit for the long, winding bugle notes blowing taps. Listen for faint echoes to those haunting notes. Goodbye forever.

THAT BODY OF YOURS

By James W. Barton, M.D.

Too Much Fluid in the Diet May Cause Vomiting in Infants and Children

I have spoken before of trying to act as a judge at a baby show. Apparently most of the mothers believed that the plumper the baby the better were the chances of obtaining one of the prizes. As judges we tried to take weight into consideration, but could not see that extra pounds of soft fat made up for shape of head and chest and contour of body as a whole.

While weight is rightly considered a good index of health in infants and children, overweight may cause symptoms unsuspected of being due to this overweight.

Dr. Temple Fay, Philadelphia, in the Pennsylvania Medical Journal, states that vomiting in a normal, healthy baby may be caused by too much fluid in its food.

"The worship of body weight has led to the sacrifice of many fine young brains. Until the amount of fluid is reduced, or the baby loses weight, the vomiting continues. What most of these fat, overweight vomiting babies need is a little concentrated food, or a period of starvation until the high tide (too much fluid) in the brain cavity has been reduced."

"If the baby's fontanelle (space between bones of skull) is tense and his double chin complete, reduction in the amount of fluid given may be all that is required. If the child has not too much fluid in his tissues and brain cavity, and is not overweight, and the vomiting continues, then some other condition such as intestinal obstruction or irritating food may be causing the vomiting."

A guide to the amount of fluid that may be safely given is found in the facts that cutting down on the amount of fluid leads to increased mental activity, whereas too much fluid results in mental torpor and finally stupor.

"The thin underweight child frequently comes through an attack of pneumonia or an operation with flying colors, while the plump baby more frequently does not."

The thought then is that when a healthy but very plump child has vomiting spells, not due to any apparent cause, the fact that too much fluid may cause the vomiting should be remembered?

GOLF MEDICINE

Dr. A. S. Lamb, director of the Physical Education Department at McGill University, has his own ideas about golf. He aired them at a luncheon of the City Improvement League.

"Public health," he said, "is better because of golf, but not because golf itself is healthful. Golf increases the blood pressure, ruins the disposition, spoils the digestion, induces neurasthenia, hurts the eyes, callouses the hands, ties kinks in the nervous system, debauches the morals, drives men to drugs, drink and homicide, breaks up the family, turns the ductless glands into internal warts, corrodes the pneumogastric nerve, breaks the edges off the vertebrae, induces spinal meningitis and progressive mendacity, starts angina pectoris, breeds winds on the stomach.

ADAM HOWLED

Did you ever look at the world about you and then feel an impulse to go out into the street and howl like a wolf? Most of us have probably felt that way from time to time. But we don't do it, being conservative, orderly and respectable folk.

Adam Wachowicz did. In Buffalo, police answered a call from neighbors and found Adam leading a canine choir of nearly twenty dogs, all howling in full voice, Adam loudest of all. It happened to be 4 a.m. of an otherwise peaceful Sunday morning.

Off to court went Adam, and the judge ordered him to stop howling for three years. Perhaps he figured that by that time we'll all be howling and it won't make any difference.

Sure, it's silly. But we'll bet Adam feels better, at that.—Regina Leader Post.

FATHER'S REVOLT

The sympathies of more than one parent are likely to go out to that Lethbridge district farmer who took drastic steps to keep his two sons at home during these days when farm work is pressing.

To be sure he must have been pretty angry to go to the lengths of smashing up a fine automobile in order to achieve his ends. But even with that display of temper against him, the doctor who examined him at the request of the court declared he was better equipped mentally than were the other members of his family.

Just why two strong sons should leave the old man alone all day to struggle with the farm work is beyond understanding. And when it is learned they were accompanied and abetted by the mother the whole business grows more than ever like a Chinese puzzle.—Edmonton Journal.

WEDDING PRESENT

The Crown Prince of Iran, son of the Shah of Persia, and the sister of King Fuad, who were recently married, received among their wedding presents a gift which takes the form of a caravan made by a Birmingham concern.

The vehicle is a mobile butler's pantry and cocktail bar, designed to cater for 40 people. It is fitted with water tanks ,three large petrol stoves, double-sized refrigerator urns, stainless steel sinks with water on tap, numerous cupboards, all of which are rubber lined and will carry upwards of 1,000 cooking and other utensils.

THE DEEPHOLE

A new deepest hole in the Atlantic Ocean, over five miles deep, was discovered Feb. 14 by the U.S.S. Milwaukee while she was participating in the recent fleet problem. The Milwaukee's sounding was made with a fathometer in the Puerto Rico Trough, an undersea chasm near the island of Puerto Rico which possesses already the reputation of having the greatest depths in the Atlantic Ocean.

Nares Deep within the trough was named for Admiral George Strong Nares (1831-1915), who as commander of H.M.S. Challenger recorded a sounding in that area of 3,875 fathoms on Mar. 26, 1873. Rear Admiral Albert Gleaves, United States Navy, in command of the U.S.S. Dolphin, obtained a sounding of 4,662 fathoms in the deep in 1902. This was the record depth until the Milwaukee found a hole nearly a half-mile deeper.

The Milwaukee's sounding was 4,780 fathoms, uncorrected for salinity, pressure and temperature. When corrected the depth will be in excess of 5,000 fathoms, and will be marked on new charts as "Milwaukee Depth".—U.S. Army-Navy Journal.

ANTIQUE FLOWER

On revisiting the garden of a house that he left in 1887, a gardener found in full flower a certain pink hyacinth that he had particular reason to remember. He knew to an inch the spot where it had flourished. By an odd chance his predecessors in the house had reason to remember that the hyacinth was established there when they took the house in 1870. It is known, therefore, that this pink hyacinth bulb, from which four flower-heads were cut last week, has been producing continuously for the past 69 years, and perhaps a good deal longer.

The scene of the most remarkable example of such survival in my own experience is a garden in the Isle of Wight. Up one wall of the castellated house grew a thick covering of ivy. When that was removed by a great ivy-hater there was found behind it and amongst it a Banksia rose whose existence had not been suspected.

Near the base was a leaden disc recording the date when the rose was planted, and the name of the little girl whose birthday it celebrated (she was a sister of Sir William Harcourt). At the date of the discovery of the rose it was over 60 years old, and when the competition of the ivy was removed flowered profusely for a good many years. The rose, like the pink hyacinth, was at least a septuagenarian. — London Spectator.

INCOME TAXES

The London Daily Mail publishes the following comparison between income taxes in Great Britain and Germany on an income of £250.

	Britain	Germany
Married couple with 1 child	nil	22 0
With 2 children	nil	20 0
With 3 children	nil	18 0
Childless couple	1 13 4	25 10

In addition the German citizen pays citizen tax, church tax, unemployment insurance, social insurance, super-tax on incomes over £400 a year. There is also a defence tax in certain cases.

All of which suggests that taxation in Canada is light when compared with Germany where the government has decided to provide guns instead of butter.—Calgary Herald.

Canada Can Profit From Admitting Refugees

Dollar and Cents Viewpoint in Welcoming Refugee Industrialists Driven Out of Europe — Rotarians Discuss Refugee Question

"Should Canada Admit Refugees"? a question which is receiving a great deal of attention in Canada just now, was up for discussion before the Belleville Rotary Club at the regular meeting Monday in Hotel Quinte. The guest speaker was Miss Constance Hayward, who certainly made out a good case for the admission of selected refugees who, she contended, would be an asset to Canada and aid in the development of this country. Miss Hayward was introduced by Rev. James Semple, who paid a high tribute to her ability. She is a student of international law, and is qualified to enter the diplomatic service, if and when the bars against women are let down. Miss Hayward spent four months at Geneva last year in connection with League of Nations work. She travelled all over Europe and is familiar with world politics.

Miss Hayward reviewed the situation in those countries from which refugees come and contended that a selected group should be welcomed to Canada and be an asset to this country, as industrialists with or without capital and as agriculturists, giving a number of instances where this has worked out very satisfactorily, both in England, Canada and other countries. Refugees have helped any country they settled in in every way, commercially and culturally, citing the Pilgrim Fathers in the United States, the Hugenots expelled from France, and others down to the time of the United Empire Loyalists who have helped build up Canada and left their mark upon every phase of life in this country.

Won Farm And Family

A White Russian came to this country, bought a farm for $2,800 on time, farmed it for seven years, acquired a wife, two children, a motor car and a radio besides a comfortable home, refusing $8,000 for the farm.

An open door policy was recommended in dealing with the refugee question, but Canada' could take with profit a carefully selected group. Some Sudeten families have come in, not as refugees but under the immigration laws of Canada, financed by British funds.

Canada Too Slow—Loses

Canada has lost much in being too slow to take advantage of opportunities afforded by this refugee question, said Miss Hayward, citing various instances where Canada might have secured promising industries with world markets if prompt attention had been paid. Mayor Houde of Montreal cabled overseas saying that Quebec would be glad to get industrialists who had been forced out of business by German aggression. Western provinces had also invited foreign industrialists to settle in Western Canada.

Millionaire Refugees

One industrialist from Europe had arrived in Montreal with $600,000 which he had placed in the Bank of Montreal some time ago against a rainy (or a Hitler) day, and he had added $700,000 to his capital since then, ready to be invested in Canada.

Canada could be made a second Vienna and Salzburg, world centre for medicine and music, attracting people from all over the world.

West Cries For Doctors

Every province of Canada had turned thumbs down on refugee doctors on the ground that there were too many doctors in Canada now. Miss Hayward disputed this, saying there might be too many doctors in the cities but there were settlements in the West which were crying for doctors.

Miss Hayward's talk was very interesting and convincing, placing the subject in a new and more favorable light than it has been subjected to thus far. Her argument was from the standpoint of dollars and cents profit to Canada with no sacrifice or charity on Canada's part, the refugees coming here for the most part being prepared to accept a lower scale of life than they had been accustomed to.

Canadian Becomes Photographer Of Royalty Very Unexpectedly

As Their Majesties Desire Canadian, Correspondent's Choice Falls on Laurence Audrain, Who Next Day is Given Sittings by King and Queen

By M. H. HALTON

(Copyright by Star Newspaper Service)

London (By Cable)—Three years ago a young Winnipeg man named Lawrence Audrain, aged 28, left Canada in a cattle boat in search of fortune. He found it very suddenly the other day when he was called to Buckingham Palace and Windsor Castle to photograph the King and Queen.

The first time Audrain ever took a photograph for a newspaper was a year ago. Today he is among the select and envied few who have had sittings from the royal family.

It happened like this:

Buckingham Palace telephoned me one day and said the King and Queen had graciously decided to accede to my request to give sittings to a Canadian photographer on behalf of Star Newspaper Service and all Canadian and United States papers. "Please be at Buckingham Palace at two-thirty tomorrow," said the official. I gasped. I had been longing for weeks to hear that news, but now I was flabbergasted. Gerald Richardson of Toronto, whom we had planned would take the photographs, had not left for England yet, I explained.

"Can't you find another photographer?" asked the Palace. "Certainly," I said, and named half a dozen famous London photographers I could have engaged. "Sorry," replied the royal secretary, "but the King and Queen want a Canadian photographer."

The only Canadian photographer I knew of was this young Lawrie Audrain who ran a newsphoto bureau called Europix. Occasionally I had bought pictures from him for Star Newspaper Service but I barely knew him. I had heard people say he was a genius with a miniature camera. I telephoned him and he nearly fainted with excitement.

At Buckingham Palace

Then he nearly wept. "What a tragedy to have such a chance as this," he said, "and only one morning to prepare." But it had to be. Next day we went to Buckingham Palace and were received by the King and Queen and the Princesses and Lawrie took his pictures. A little later Their Majesties gave us another sitting at Windsor Castle at which both Audrain and Richardson were present.

Audrain was educated at Machray School and St. John's Technical School, Winnipeg. He worked with the Hudson Bay Company, then the National Trust Company, then a brokerage firm. But he always wanted to see Europe. One day he was given a chance to cross on a cattle boat. A few weeks later he was in London. He worked three months with a financial firm here. Then he went on a banana boat to Jamaica and back while waiting for a job he had been promised as a research man in a London magazine office. A year ago he decided to form his own picture bureau. He found himself getting wonderful results, with small but powerful cameras. Experts told him he was born to photograph. Newspapers and magazines here started asking him for pictures and sending him on assignments. He was on his way up the ladder already when I phoned him and asked how he would like to photograph the King and Queen.

Other royal photographers have swanky and luxurious studios in Bond Street; Lawrie has a picturesque flat in Gray's Inn Road, where he lives with his widowed mother. They are a happy couple today.

"Gee," says Lawrie, "Who would have thought it?"

WHEAT AT 70 CTS.

House of Commons continued the debate on the government wheat policy. The debate goes into its fourth day today.

Makes Good Case

Miss Macphail said Mr. Gardiner had made out a good case for a higher price than 70 cents a bushel. She disagreed with the contention that Ontario farmers suffered as much from the tariff as western farmers. Prices of most farm products were higher in the east than in the west. The west had suffered by having always to buy in a protected market and sell on a world market. The prairie provinces would have been better off as a separate country free from the Canadian tariff structure.

"Agriculture in all parts of Canada is not paid anything like the proportion of the national income it should receive," she said.

There should be a two-price wheat policy. The proportion sold in Canada should bear a price commensurate with cost of production while the part exported should be sold for the price it would bring.

If Canada could not regain export markets for wheat difficult times were ahead but the whole burden should not be thrust on the west. Eastern farmers might say the west was getting too much but if western farmers were forced out of wheat growing and into the production of other farm products there would be a disastrous collapse of all farm prices.

Some Lack Food is Claim

Many people in Canada lacked food. The government should buy up some of the surplus wheat, establish a flour mill, and supply flour and bread to people both on and off relief.

The day produced a second Liberal, W. J. Ward (Dauphin), determined to vote against the government on the issue. On the other side, however, were three other Liberals, Dr. Thomas Donnelly (Wood Mountain), Walter Tucker (Rosthern) and S. J. Furniss (Muskoka-Ontario), who enthusiastically commended the government for its proposal.

Mr. Ward noted that speeches of Ontario farmers generally revealed a protectionist attitude. He said he did not criticise them because it was good economics, when they had industries in their constituencies.

He argued that the system of bonusing one branch of industry and not others could not be maintained indefinitely. Even if western wheat growers were aided to the extent of $15,000,000 a year, that would only be interest on the cost to the west of bonusing secondary industry.

Mr. Ward produced comparative statistics of net returns to Ontario and prairie farmers of various crops to show the advantage Ontario had, contrary to a suggestion made earlier.

West is "Milch Cow"

He traced the growth of eastern cities to show how they grew exactly as the west had developed. It was the west which was the "milch cow" in this country.

While he appreciated the efforts of the Agriculture Minister he was "terribly disappointed" in the 70-cent minimum price, Mr. Ward said.

Mr. Gardiner had said the average price for the last 30 years was 95 cents, he recalled.

The mortgage figures drew the true picture. In Manitoba farm land was mortgaged to 65 per cent of its total value.

In Saskatchewan, mortgages averaged $15 an acre.

"If that is the situation when wheat has averaged 95 cents, then 70 cents is about half enough and the government is far, far short of meeting the solvency of Western Canada," he said.

He could not grow wheat at less than 90-95 cents a bushel, with high yields, and make money. For that reason he felt he would not be fair to his constituents to accept this bill as one which would be satisfactory.

Will Not Meet Cost

Mr. Ward said he did not want to vote against the government because it had done a lot of things, but this bill was important to his constituents, since the price would not meet the cost.

Mr. Donnelly said that in his 13 years no bill introduced had met such universal praise as the acreage bonus bill. His constituents were telling him not to give up that measure, whatever else he did.

The United Kingdom, Australia both had acreage bonus plans as well as bushelage bonuses. The United States had its own acreage bonus, although based on acreage taken out of cultivation. Difficulty in administration was likely to result in a switch-over to the system proposed here. Dr. Donnelly agreed the act was not perfect but no bill ever was.

Commended Bill

He chided the C.C.F. members for changing front, trying to please everyone. In 1928 they had criticized an immigration proposal and now were advocating opening the immigration doors to European refugees.

He commended the acreage bonus bill because it would free farmers from the remoralization of relief, if nothing else. Under relief a family of five received about $250 or $260 while under this bill an average farmer would receive about $300 and be made self-dependent again.

"I don't see any justification for asking the government to say now what the price of wheat will be next fall," said Dr. Donnelly. No one could predict what the market would do. If it continued buoyant as at present the price might go to $1 a bushel.

"The price of wheat should not be set by any government until along about Aug. 1," he said. "I think the government is making a mistake in fixing a price of 70 cents a bushel now. It is possible 70 cents may be too low. We may want 90 cents when the time comes. Whatever the price is our friends of the C.C.F. will want more."

Cost Not Determined

No one could say what it cost to produce wheat. It was useless to quote arm-chair farmers and professors about the cost of production. Dr. Donnelly said it cost him $5 a bushel to produce wheat on a farm in one section of the country and a good deal less than $1 on another farm in another section.

Mr. Tucker reminded the House these bills were not supposed to remedy all the ills and injustices suffered in the west. Agriculture Minister Gardiner had made clear this legislation was not compensation for disabilities suffered under the tariff.

There was no doubt the west had suffered "terribly" under the tariff. Western farmers had had to sell against the lowest-priced competition, against subsidies, and had to buy at prices increased by tariffs and combines. Nobody could suggest the Agriculture Minister should change the whole setup by two or three bills.

Tariffs Raised

The attitude of the United States and, in smaller degree, Canada had been responsible for the closing of European markets. Germany had tried to pay for her imported foodstuffs in the only way it could, by selling manufactured goods, but tariffs had been raised all over the world.

People would fight before they would starve, so Germany had to occupy enough land to feed her people. She kept food imports to a minimum to use her exchange to buy war materials.

He reminded opponents that if the Wheat Board amendment, with the guaranteed minimum of 70 cents, were defeated, the government could set the minimum at any level if wished. It could set the price at 40 cents if it wanted.

If he believed, as some opponents apparently believed, that the government was out to betray the west, he would support the bill fixing the minimum at 70 cents to prevent the government making it lower.

As long as he could remember the people of Western Canada wanted some measure of crop insurance. The government was giving this insurance in the acreage bonus bill.

"This bill means more to the future security of the people on those western plains than anything done since confederation," said Mr. Tucker.

Against Money System

E. G. Hansell, (S.C.-MacLeod) said Canada's many problems would never be solved as long as the present financial system continued. With a proper monetary policy Canada would be united and the Social Credit party stood for a united Canada if it stood for anything. Under a proper monetary system the people would be contented and there was no dissension when there was contentment.

"This government has done more to assist agriculture than any government since confederation, not only by trade agreements but by reducing the tariff and by the bills now before the House," said S. J. Furniss, (Lib. Muskoka-Ontario). Farmers in the east had contributed just as much taxation as the western farmers and whatever bonus was paid on wheat came out of taxation and out of the pockets of eastern farmers.

He cited figures to show a comparison of returns to the farmer this year and last year assuming the 75 cent initial price would not be bettered. The return from a 70-cent price this year plus the acreage bonus on corresponding yields would about equal the return last year from the 80-cent price. With 10 bushels to the acre on a typical farm the return from wheat this year would be $840 and $816 last year. With 11 bushels to the acre the return would be $1,000 this year against $1,008 last year.

Simple Dishes Such as These To Be Served on Royal Train

Menus Will be Definitely Canadian in Character—Some Typical Recipes by James P. Morgan, who will be Chef to Their Majesties.

Meals of simple character but as definitely Canadian as the season and circumstances will permit will be served to Their Majesties, King George VI and Queen Elizabeth, and the members of their entourage during their long train journey on this continent commencing on May 16. Catering arrangements throughout the Canadian tour and during the visit to the United States have been entrusted to the dining car department of the Canadian National Railways and Chef Instructor James P. Morgan of the National System has been selected as chef for Their Majesties. All of the meats served will be Canadian produce and Canadian dairy products will be used throughout, Canadian butter and cheese being well known to British consumers for their choice quality, though French and Swiss cheese will also be served. Maple sugar and maple syrup will at times be included in the menus.

One essentially Canadian feature will be Buffalo meat. The joints, after passing Government inspection, will be carefully selected and properly hung so that they will be tender and juicy and of full flavor. The season of the year precludes game so that some items thoroughly in Canadian character will be missing. However, there will be ample supplies of choice domestic poultry, including the Brome Lake ducks and ducklings. There will be a variety of fish from Canadian waters, both salt and fresh, including the delectable Winnipeg goldeye.

Menus will be planned every day and submitted for inspection. As approved or changed they will be prepared in the train kitchens under the supervision of Chef Morgan.

Here are some recipes for typical dishes secured from the chef who will prepare the meals for Their Majesties:—

Chicken Broth, Southern Style

Raw chicken meat cut small, together with minced onions and shredded green peppers all fried together with butter, little flour then added and stirred, moistened with poultry stock, seasoned lightly with curry powder, salt and red pepper, boiled up and skimmed, then is added equal quantities of lima beans and sugar corn together with half their bulk of okras; simmered till done.

Split Pea Soup

Split peas soaked overnight put to boil in white stock with onions, celery, carrots and salt pork. When done thicken lightly with roux to prevent settling, remove the pork, rub the rest through a tamis, bring to boil again, season to taste, add the pork cut in small dice, serve with croutons.

Boiled Halibut Steak, Cream Sauce

The fish scalded and trimmed, cut in steaks, simmered in boiling salted water containing a dash of vinegar, served with either Lobster Clam Cream or Hollandaise Sauce.

Whitefish, Broiled

Take the whole sides fresh from bones, moisten with olive oil, season with salt and pepper, dredge with flour, broil well done over a clear fire, serve in portions with Maitre d'Hotel Butter, garnish with Parisienne Potatoes, Lemon and Parsley.

Braised Sirloin With Stuffed Tomatoes

Sirloin larded and braised, taken up when done, the liquor strained, skimmed, and mixed with Espagnole Sauce, minced fried mushrooms and Sherry wine, then rapidly reduced to a glaze; the meat served in slices with some of the sauce, and garnished with stuffed tomatoes and stuffed glazed onions.

Roast Capon Stuffed With Rice

Draw and wash the bird, wipe dry. Fill the inside with rice which has been boiled in stock, season with salt, pepper, nutmeg and a few herbs. When filled, truss breast, cover with bacon, and tie with string, roast and baste. When nearly done, remove bacon from the breast, brown, serve garnished with watercress and some Veloute Sauce.

Stuffed Breast of Mutton, Sauce Robert

Lean breast of mutton. Make pocket the entire length between the meat and rib bones, fill with a stuffing made of sausage meat mixed with minced onions, parsley, mushrooms and a few fresh breadcrumbs. Sew up the opening and steam until cooked. Serve in portions with Sauce Robert.

Apple Roly Poly

A biscuit dough containing a little sugar, rolled out thin, spread with minced apple, seasoned with grated lemon rind, cinnamon, or ground cloves according to taste, rolled up, the ends tucked in, tied in a cloth for boiling water (in a mold for steaming, in a pan for baking); serve with a sauce, or with sweetened cream.

Souffle Rothschild

Fill a souffle case in alternate layers with crushed macaroons, pitted cherries, and sponge cake. Pour over this a hot Sabayan sauce or a custard sauce flavoured with sherry. Let bake for ten minutes, put a spoonful of currant jelly on top, and cover this with light meringue; let brown and serve without sauce.

White for Spring

By ALICE ALDEN

It's still true that nothing gives you more of a costume lift than a new hat, particularly if it's white. An old but pretty custom in Manhattan and in every other town is to have at least one to dress up tailleurs, redingotes and jacket dresses. This season the urge is even stronger, due to emphasis on lingerie fashions and white gloves. Two white hats are shown today, along with a saucy cyclamen pink, all by Harryson. His colored homburg, upper left, is milan straw with taffeta bows in wine, pale blue and pink, and shaded pink veiling. The white shantung straw cartwheel, upper right, is set far back on the head behind two disarming daisies, ribbon streamers tie in Little Girl fashion. Sailors are numerous in the white hat collection, the gardenia-crowned model, centre, having its crown swathed in white veiling, which is either tied in a chin bow or in gandeau style at the back of the head.

Mrs. F. Webster Elected President Picton Club

Picton—The Home and School Club held its regular monthly meeting on Thursday evening in the Legion rooms with the president, Mrs. E. Ward, in the chair. The meeting opened with prayer and community singing. The minutes were read and the treasurer's report adopted. This showed that fifty dollars had been realized at the recent rummage sale and that the sum of $30 was left on hand after the children's milk had been paid for. Mrs. Harry Carter gave a paper on Historical Events of the past year which was most excellently prepared. Mrs. Otto of Bloomfield gave an informal talk on "Textiles" interspersed with humorous illustrations. These addresses were both very instructive and greatly appreciated. Mrs. F. Walden and Mrs. C. Newman were heard in a fine duet accompanied by Mrs. C. Walters. Members considered regretfully that they must decline the kind invitation of the King George Home and School Club, Belleville, to be with them on the evening of May 17th as the ladies did not like driving at night. Mrs. Walden read the report of the nominating committee which was unanimously adopted. The officers to be installed at the next meeting are as follows:

President—Mrs. F. Webster.
1st Vice-President—Mrs. W. D. Saunders.
2nd Vice-President—Mrs. H. Fox.
3rd Vice-President—Mrs. Mabel Todd.
Rec. Sec.—Mrs. H. Knapman.
Cor. Sec.—Mrs. W. Scott.
Treas.—Mrs. C. Rutter.

Social—Mrs. W. Lane, Mrs. A. E. Adams, Mrs. C. Colliver.
Pianists—Mrs. C. Walters, Mrs. J. LeHeup.

The National Anthem closed the meeting.

Thirty tables were in play in the Veterans' Hall on Tuesday evening when the Holy Name Society held a card party. The prizes for bridge fell to the skill of Mrs. T. J. Bourke and Mr. C. McCalpin and a most pleasant evening was enjoyed with refreshments served at the close.

A committee meeting was held on Tuesday evening at the home of Mrs. Lyle Robinson when plans were completed for the community dinner by members of the Evening Branch of the W. A. of St. Mary Magdalene's Church.

Shampooing Must be Done Thoroughly

RITA JOHNSON
Her beautiful tresses get thorough shampooing

By HELEN FOLLETT

The Health of the hair is affected unfavorably by malnutrition, worry, nervousness and digestive disturbances. It has a sympathetic nature and gets sorrowful when there's any hitch in the physical mechanism. Ordinary neglect will make it look sick enough to go to the hospital. Casual shampooing which permits soap scum to remain on the silky shafts will make the glorious crown dull and lifeless.

Boost the spirits of your halo by giving it loving care; the rewards will be many. Don't let the shampoo date go beyond a fortnight even if the finger wave is still blooming. On the night before the head ducking, part the hair at various places, trickle hot mineral oil along the partings, using a medicine dropper for the purpose. Grasp your scalp with fingers and thumbs, give it a rousing friction. Do circles, lift up the flesh. Work on the nape line; there are arteries there and the purpose of this dome mauling is to make the blood streams hustle.

For the shampoo select a bland soap, melt it several days before using. Have a rich, foamy lather. Apply the soap three times, have as many rinsings. Add two tablespoonfuls of vinegar to a quart of water, pour over the head, give a final rinsing. Unless you have a bath spray and a current of water strong enough to knock you down, the hair will not be clean.

GOOD MANNERS

MRS. CORNELIUS BEECKMAN

Good Taste in Home Decoration

Look at your entrance-hall . . . your guests do. Is it bright, welcoming? Or grim, inhospitable? Is it too dark, as most entrance-halls are? Give it a present of a lamp, with a shade that lets the light shine through brightly and becomingly. A welcoming light to your home. Have this lamp shed its light on something bright on the table . . . flowers, branches of green leaves in a vase or a growing plant. The feeling about your entrance-hall should be "this looks nice!"

I've noticed . . haven't you . . that fashions in clothes have an influence on fashions in decoration. Take this season, for example. Highlighted in clothes fashions are stripes—subtly-shaded, bold, two-toned, vari-colored, peasant, and crisp candy stripes. In home decoration, too, we find all of these in the fashion picture. In several years I have not seen such a wide choice of interesting stripes, in small and large scale, for upholstery and slipcovers, and never have I seen such alluring stripes for curtains and bedspreads. They are as yummy looking as the sticks of candy from which they are copied!

Many of the dress fabrics are in high style as decorating fabrics. Washable silks, very fresh and crisp. Frothy, light-hearted organdy is draped dramatically full for curtains and bedspreads. Daintily-embroidered batistes, coin-dotted cottons, make lovely dresses, make lovely curtains and bedspreads. We see old-fashioned poplins and cretonnes in both dresses and decorative fabrics. And the decorating world has returned the favor to the dress world by showing it how lovely and gay are clothes made of one of decorations, pet children, glazed chintz. Little girl dress fashions . . . and youthful home decoration.

Dull taupes and dull browns and uninspired rusts don't satisfy us any more. High-heartedly we prefer to live with alive shades of green, sunny yellows, radiant shades of blue, becoming shades of peach and apricot, rich burgundy, Venetian red, turquoise, subtle yellow or green, chartreuse. Perhaps this brave use of color in our homes is one of our answers to the challenge of this troubled world.

It's just appearing on the decoration horizon . . . . the making of decorative fabrics in the same design as wallpapers. Make an effective and harmonizing ensemble. We will probably see more of this.

Wise homemakers are paying more and more attention to lamps. Why, they sensibly argue, buy an uninspired pewter lamp base (even if they do live in an Early American house), which has no 'come-hither' and which gives no bright accent to the room-decoration, when, for the same price, they can buy, a bright lamp-base, plain or gaily decorated?

The Stars Say

For Wednesday, May 10

By GENEVIEVE KEMBLE

A RATHER routine state of affairs is forecast for this day judging by the minor lunar aspects. The mind may be introspective or inclined to ruminate on deep problems, but something of an unconventional nature may disturb the tranquility. This might also encourage psychic investigation, social experiments or adventures into the realm of the subconscious or metaphysical.

Those whose birthday it is are warned of a rather listless or routine year, with inclinations to move along lines of least resistance. This might be due to a somewhat depressed physical condition. But an element of romance or a quest of the unknown, the unusual or unorthodox, in social, mystical or even emotional expression, is likely.

A child born on this day may be a rather introspective type, although it may have a shrewd mind and certain tendencies to adventure and romance. It may be mystically inclined but would do well in a position requiring deep thought or subtle reasoning.

Back interest marks many of the newest dresses and suits. Schiaparelli makes a dark blue wool suit and achieves a sort of bustle effect with three loose tucks, the top one following the curve of the waistline, the other two lower down.

First choice for warmish days in town is a smart ensemble. A green and white polka dotted silk frock, the collar finishing in a self windsor bow is worn with a high waisted full length coat of pale green crepe, the skirt pleated all around except for a narrow strip in the centre.

Advice to the Lovelorn

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

Famous Authority on Problems of Love and Marriage.

A Father's Problem

Dear Miss Fairfax:

Since my beloved wife died last September, I have had three different housekeepers, trying to keep my little family together. There are four children, ranging in ages from two to ten. I have paid these women $45 a month, every cent that my salary will afford. For that I expect them to watch over the children and keep my very simple household in running order.

One woman drank, another let the children run the streets unguarded, even the little two-year-old. The third wanted to marry me. That seemed to be her idea of being a housekeeper.

I don't really want to marry, but if it's the only way of keeping my family with me I'd consider it. Do you think it would be better to put the children into an institution preferably one where religion is taught and the youngsters would be well-cared for?

My salary is only $150 a month, so you can see it is impossible to pay more than $45 a month for a housekeeper. I am appealing to you as a disinteresed party for whose judgment I have respect.

Widower

Until you can get just the right woman it seems to me that it would be safer to put the children in an institution. When you tell me that one of your housekeepers actually let the little two-year old alone on the street, it seems most unwise to risk neglect of that kind a second time.

Jobless But Understood

Dear Miss Fairfax

Quite a few men have fallen for me, but they seem to lack responsibility. They talk about marriage when they haven't jobs, and the ones that have jobs can't even support themselves. I am the spunky kind, and decline to be too agreeable just to keep a boy friend. Some of my girl friends feel the some way, and we got out among ourselves and have a good time.

I don't expect a fellow to spend a lot of money on me, neither do I expect to marry and keep the helpmeet at home. I've supported myself for a number of years, and would rather continue to do so than keep one of these gentlemanly house plants.

Independent

I like to get a letter like yours, which proves there are girls who see this highly important question of marriage clearly. Better be spunky, as you call it, than marry a "house-plant" who expects to remain home and be cared for, while the wife he has promised to love and cherish goes out to bring back the bacon.

Snare a sailor, especially if it is something like the model by Rose Valois which is of white moire, with a lovely brim and crown, and a red crown band and fragile black lace veil.

MISS NAPOLEON

By Violet M. Methley

But now....this was far more than a mere matter of fancy dress; it was reincarnation rather than representation. In this woman there was surely the spirit, underlying the mere bodily aspect of the man who had been her grandfather.

Standing there, Hall felt as though more than a century of time had rolled back. In that second's revelation he realised the inner meaning of the Napoleonic legend, why that one man was loved and feared and hated as no other has been in the history of the world, why his name still draws and compels.

The moment passed, leaving the American oddly dazed. Leonie had come quickly down the steps, was standing beside him, her eyes inscrutable, her lips smiling.

"I couldn't resist the temptation to strike the historic attitude," she said. "I wanted to make the most of my little surprise."

"You're simply marvellous," Chrissie declared. "It was stupid of me not to have seen the likeness before, I suppose—had you ever noticed it, Ranny?"

"I....no....yes.....I really don't know." Struan, too, Hall noticed, looked bewildered, but also decidedly sulkly.

"I don't believe you approve of me," Leonie challenged him, softly, provocatively.

"Can't say I do," he answered curtly. "I never have cared to see women dressed up as men, and as for dancing with them...."

"Well, that is easily remedied—you needn't!" Leonie smiled. "In fact, I'm not sure that I want to dance at all, so perhaps it is just as well that I've made myself so unattractive as a partner. For I'm afraid that you're not pleased either, your Highness."

The Maharajah stretched out his hands, palms upward, with a deprecating gesture.

"I....I am only an Eastern," he said stiffly. "It is because of that, I prefer women to be....women."

"Dear me, I appear to be thoroughly unpopular!" Leonie drawled. "Don't even you like me, Mr. Hall?"

"Like isn't the word," Hall answered quietly. "You've made me see visions."

"Ah!" she glanced at him. "Thanks, I'm glad you understand better than the others. But of course—you know more."

Moonlight Proposal

The words, the tone, sent a strange, exultant thrill through Hall. He felt himself set on a pedestal, and said so, lightly.

"And perhaps you will go further and let me be your escort as a reward," he added, with an instinct to relieve the tension which had fallen upon the little group. "Have I your permission, Maharajah Sahib? I know the gardens fairly well by now."

The Maharajah bowed.

"I am pleased," he said. "I must occupy myself with my other guests."

"Congratulations on a wonderful performance, Miss Valence," Hall said.

She gave him one swift sideways glance.

"It isn't usual to congratulate an actor until the end of the play," she said.

"You mean that you are going to keep up the part?"

"I feel more as though the part were keeping me up," Leonie answered slowly.

"Oh, that's the unconscious self-dramatist—you're entering in the role so thoroughly that it's obsessing you," Hall told her. "And that is a bit dangerous, don't you think?"

"Dangerous?" Again that quick look, almost without turning her head, a look only made possible by the abnormally wide setting of her eyes. "To myself, or others?"

"Both, perhaps, because," Hall spoke deliberately, "nothing can alter the fact that you are a woman—and a beautiful one. That's your real power, even if you won't allow it yourself—yet."

Leonie turned fully towards him, and there was anger in her eyes.

"I expected something better than this from you, Mr. Hall," she said. "You—who know so much more of me than the rest. I thought you realised that I don't care for flattery of that kind."

"You think you don't!" Hall found himself speaking without premediation, things he had never intended. He went on recklessly, conscious that what he had to say must be said now or never.

"At heart you are only like other women."

"I am not!" The last word burst from her with explosive force.

"Why should you take it as an insult?" Hall demanded. "What is there stronger than love?"

"I think I've answered that last question before—hate! And as to the first," her eyes and her voice mocked him, "Why, I hardly expected you to hold forth to me in the language of dime novels!"

"No? Well, I suppose under the skin we're all pretty much of the same crudeness. And I'm going to prove it to you even more forcibly than I have already."

"In what way?"

"This!"

Suddenly he had seized her wrists, pulled her round to face him.

"I love you, Leonie Valence; as woman to man, will you marry me?"

"You're mad!" but she was not trying to free herself.

"Can you swear that you're absolutely indifferent to me?" Hall asked.

"No; I like you." Her eyes met his steadily.

"Like!" His grip tightened. "If you dare use that word again!"

"Mr. Hall, I don't know you this evening. You're so unlike yourself."

"How can you say that this isn't my real self? Answer me this; is there someone else you care about?"

"No," Leonie answered deliberately.

"That's a lie! I thought you were more honest than most women!" Hall spoke bitterly, releasing his hold of her wrists.

"It is true," she told him quietly, "I feel about it as my grandfather did. I don't know what love is in the sense that you and others mean when you speak of it, as a passion so strong that it sets the whole universe on one side to place the loved one on the other—weighing it down. I'm certain that it is not in my nature to feel like that."

"Love doesn't stand analysis," Hall said dully.

"I've no use for anything that can't be examined closely—tested, to find what it's worth."

"You mean that the sole value of love to you lies in its usefulness?"

"Yes," she nodded. "I thought I had made you realizez that—from the first. But honestly, Mr. Hall, I didn't know that you felt like this."

"I didn't know it myself until tonight," he told her.

"Then it's most likely like all this....moonshine," she made a sweeping gesture with her hand.

"It isn't."

"At least, you'll believe me when I say that I haven't been trying to make use of you....your feelings ....consciously."

"Oh, I don't flatter myself that it would have been worth your while! And I won't trouble you with a further display of....my feelings."

"I hope not." She spoke gravely and sincerely. "Because I don't want to see you hurt. I....like you too much for that, in spite of it's being a word so forcibly forbidden! And now, suppose we go back to the others.

CHAPTER XII

Struan the Unhappy

The Maharajah's pig - sticking party were soon riding across the plain, having been joined by two officers from Jones's regiment. The morning sun was still so low that horses and men threw lanky shadows as they rode westwards towards a belt of scrubby jungle noted for pig.

Struan wondered drearily what had happened to him in these days. Before he was married he did not remember this uncertainty of temper. It seemed to him that he had been a cheerful, easy-going sort of chap then, who enjoyed life. He certainly didn't now.

There was a snorting and scuffling; violent movements in the grass. A dark-grey shape appeared almost under the feet of Zindia's horse, which snorted and plunged. The big tusker jinked and was off at right angles, but the Maharajah, with a masterly display of riding, dashed after him like a grey-hound on the heels of a rabbit. Both were away in a flash and then—a swift movement, a gleam of the spear-point and the pig was down transfixed cleanly and neatly.

There was a murmur of applause but the Maharajah sat his horse quietly after one glance at the bristly body, waiting for his spear to be released.

Suddenly, only a few yards away, in a narrow grass ride, appeared the apparition of a huge boar, his curved and upturned tusks gleaming. Behind him, as he guarded their retreat, the shapes of other pigs, squeaking and grunting, could be seen scuttling away. The big pig did not give way until the riders were close upon him, and even then he only backed slowly with truculent snorts.

"Yours, Struan!" cried the Maharajah, and drew aside courteously. Struan's horse leaped forward, closely followed by young Jones.

The boar swerved, turned and went galloping off along the ride, with the two horsemen on his heels. They had gone some little distance from the rest before Struan shifted his spear to get a firmer grip, pressed his horse forward, rose in his stirrups and thrust. At the crucial instant his horse stumbled and swerved sideways, sending the rider sprawling, and immediately the big tusker charged.

It was an ugly situation for the fallen man. But Jones bore down and pinned the boar just as its tusks were within a fraction of ripping Struan's thigh. It was a smart piece of work, and Jones had dismounted to finish off the big boar with neatness and dispatch almost as soon as the other man had regained his feet.

"Oh, all right! I couldn't very well do anything else, as I was here." Both words and manner were extremely off-hand and not calculated to cool Struan's already heated temper.

"You make it pretty plain that you're sorry you couldn't leave me to be gored," he snapped back.

At that young Jones's temper, too, went flying to the four winds.

"All right, if you like to put it that way, you can. You are about the last person I'd have chosen to help out of a hole!" he retorted.

"May I ask what particular reason you have for feeling like that?" Struan demanded, white with fury.

"Oh, no reason that you'd probably think adequate yourself! Just this—I consider your behaviour to your wife that of a confounded cad."

"You—you—" Shaking with rage, his face dark crimson now, Struan made a movement forward, then drew back, stood motionless, while Jones cantered off.

Mounting his own horse, he sat irresolutely, unwilling to rejoin the rest of the party. Then inspiration came. He would ride to the flying ground, put in a few hours' work and return to Khotalghar in the evening. That would give him time to recover, but already his anger had passed into numb, dreary self-disgust.

"After all, Jones only repeated what I'd been calling myself," he thought. "I've no right to resent what the young cub said—"

Struan broke off with a curse, cantered on towards the flying ground, hangars and bungalows, the horse's footfalls deadened by the thick red dust. He rode into the enclosure, tied up his mount, then walked across to his office.

A few steps brought him to the door—and to a standstill, his whole body rigid as he stared. Someone was in the office already, back turned towards the door, busy with the contents of his desk.

It stood unlocked, the roll-top up, the pigeon-holes and drawers displayed. The hands of the interloper were busy with the orderly piles of papers, flicking them over quickly and methodically, before returning them to their places, obviously searching for something.

A packet was returned to the pigeon-hole, one of the hands stretched out to open a drawer and as though that movement released something in him, Struan started forward and spoke one word in a strained unnatural voice:

"You! You!"

CHAPTER XIII

Leonie Unmasked

With one swift movement, Leonie Valence turned and faced him, her right hand darting to the pocket of her riding-coat.

The action and its lightning speed carried Struan's mind to another moment, to a crowded boat and the towering side of a ship. Instinctively he stiffened, almost expecting to see the gleam of a revolver barrel, to hear the crack of its report.

But Leonie's hand did not move. For one second her lips tightened, her eyes narrowed, so that, without stirring a finger, it seemed as though she were about to spring. Then her nostrils dilated with a long indrawn breath, her mouth relaxed into something like a smile, as her body relaxed, leaning back against the desk.

"Well?" The interrogation was almost soundless, expressed itself as much by her eyebrows as her lips.

Struan, his eyes never leaving her face, spoke with an effort that seemed to strain the muscles of his throat.

"What are you doing here?"

Leonie shrugged her shoulders without speaking.

"You've got to answer me," Struan persisted.

"Is there really any need? Sometimes explanations are a terrible waste of time and breath." She withdrew her hand from her pocket, let it drop loosely at her side.

"You mean that I'm to draw the only inference I can, that I'm to believe you—you What am I to believe?"

"What you can see with your eyes, I imagine," she answered him coolly, still without moving, still with that faint smile.

"Can't you make some excuse, give me some reasonable explanation of what you were doing? I don't want to think it's true that you had come here to steal, but how—what—?" Again he broke off helplessly.

"Really, I'm afraid my inventive powers aren't equal to the occasion; I can't think of a convincing lie, and I can't be bothered to!" She flung the last words at him fiercely, her brows contracting as though in bitter remembrance. "And since I haven't succeeded in finding what I wanted, what I took so much trouble to discover..well, really, I feel that I've been punished enough already by your arriving at such an inopportune moment."

"You were after the aeroplane plans?"

"What a brilliant flash of intuition, considering that I'd already practically asked to see them!"

"Why?"

"What an inapt question. Where's your knowledge of spy fiction?"

Struan's face grew grim.

"Do you mean me to understand that you intended to steal those plans in order to sell them to some other Power?"

"No!" Suddenly and unexpectedly Leonie's pale face flushed crimson with anger. "Don't dare to insult me by thinking that I meant to make money out of the business! I would not have touched a penny. What I meant to do was to give the plans to another country—to my own country."

"You must forgive me if I misunderstood those purely patriotic motives of yours, Struan sneered.

"You're still misunderstanding me. I did not act so much from love of my country as from hatred of yours."

She laughed cruelly, but Struan stared at her, whitefaced.

"Let's have this clear," he said. "Do you mean that you've been out for this all the time, that you came with us to India just for that purpose, to make a fool of me in any case, a traitor if possible? Is that the plain truth of the matter, if such a thing as truth is possible in this cursed business?"

"Yes," Leonie nodded. "That is—roughly—the truth. Believe me—or even if you don't, it's a fact—that I did not act out of any personal feeling, any private spite towards you or Chrissie...."

"Keep Chrissie's name out of it, please," Struan told her. "I'm fair game for you, I've deserved anything for my unspeakable idiocy. But I can't forgive you or myself for having brought her into it. And you—"

"Don't spare me! I can quite understand your feelings." Her tone was almost unconcerned.

"I'm not out to spare you—don't imagine it for a moment. But there are a few things I've got to know. How did you get that key to my desk, since mine has never been out of my possession?"

"Ah, chance was very good to me in that respect," she spoke reflectively. "You remember the day you were stunned for a few minutes by falling from your horse? Yes—well, when I rendered first aid I found the key round your neck, and took an impression of it with a bit of bread. From that it was quite easy to get a duplicate key made in Bombay."

"As simple as all that!" Struan laughed bitterly. "Well—what's the next move?"

"Mine, obviously," she answered without hesitation. "I'll have my things taken straight over to the hotel from Khotalghar. Naturally I can't stay with you and Chrissie any longer now. But—I'm sorry, Ranny, really I am."

"Sorry that you failed to get what you wanted!"

"Oh—that! C'est la fortune de la guerre," she shrugged. "No, I didn't mean about the plans—but let it pass."

"We Shall Never Meet Again"

As she spoke, Leonie moved away from the desk, took up the topi and gloves which lay on a chair. Her face was grave, her eyes inscrutable under bent brows, as she turned towards the doorway. Struan jerked aside abruptly as though to avoid any contact with her, and stood with head averted, and a curious expression passed over her face.

"So—I suppose we shall never meet again," she said.

"Never—if I can help it!"

"It's sad, though, after all that has been—all that might have been," Leonie's voice was very low, very gentle. "Aren't you even a little sorry?"

"For what?" Struan's voice was harsh and strained. "Do you expect me to take these pretended regrets of yours seriously? I'm not quite such a fool as that."

"Perhaps it is only now that I am not pretending."

It was almost whispered, soft as the touch of her fingers on his arm, as the shadow of a movement which she made towards him.

"Don't touch me! Go!—I tell you go!"

Without another word, Leonie left him, went to where her horse was tethered, mounted, and rode off across the plain.

She was still in riding dress when her shadow fell black across the sketch which Hall was making in the Maharajah's garden; he glanced up with a surprised exclamation.

"I thought that you were resting," he said. "What energy —but you look as though it had taken about the last ounce out of you! Here—have my chair."

"No, no—I'll sit here," and she sank after a pause, during which he watched her quietly.

"Nothing of importance," she laughed, "although I'm going to ask you to do something for me."

"You know I will, if it is possible," Hall said.

"Oh, it's nothing very difficult or dangerous. Rather a pleasant task—only to break it to Chrissie Struan that I shan't be their guest any longer."

"Why do you call that pleasant?" he spoke tonelessly.

"Because it is always gratifying to be the bearer of good news, isn't it?"

"You think that Mrs. Struan will be glad?"

"Undoubtedly."

"And—Struan?" The question came after a pause.

"More undoubtedly still!"

"You are leaving Pathapore?" Hall still spoke in the same dull voice, but his brush sent a streak of alien green zigzagging across the blue of the pictured sky.

"Not at the moment. I'm probably moving to the hotel until my plans are settled."

"I see. Very well, I'll tell Mrs. Struan. Any more dirty work you'd like me to undertake?"

At the unrestrained bitterness in his voice Leonie turned to look at him.

"I'm sorry, Wilson," she said gently.

"Funny! That's the first time you've ever used my Christian name!" Hall laughed mirthlessly. "Never mind! I'm duly flattered. And don't misunderstand me. I'm glad enough to do anything for you, to make the most of that rather humiliating confession."

"You're very unlike yourself today, she looked at him perplexedly. "Is it my fault?"

"No. My own entirely—even the fact that I've completely spoiled quite a promising sketch," he tore the sheet of paper from the block. "Tell me, would it help or otherwise if I shifted to the hotel? It's a dreary spot."

"Otherwise, I think," Leonie said. "At least, for the moment. But it's good of you to suggest it. Oh, there's one more thing. Would you tell the Struan's ayah to pack up all I've left there and have it forwarded to me at the hotel?"

"I'll do it. Is it forbidden for me to call upon you there?"

"Of course not. I shall be delighted to see you. Well, I've got a few things to do before we leave—that isn't till this evening is it? Good-bye till then.

It was some moments after Leonie left him before Wilson Hall walked slowly back towards the Palace in search of Chrissie Struan. He found her on the veranda, pale and heavy-eyed and sat down beside her.

"I feel pretty washed-out-too," he said. "But Miss Valence has been out riding already."

"Nothing tires Leonie; it makes her almost—almost tiring!" Chrissie's laugh was forced."

"Perhaps that's what she feels herself; it would account for something she's just told me."

"What is it?"

"Why ...." Hall spoke casually. "She asked me to tell you that she's shifting her quarters, but she's very anxious you shouldn't feel hurt. I believe she realizes too strenuous, for anyone, like yourself at the present moment, who ought to rest."

"You mean she's going away — right away?"

"Well, soon I gathered."

"Oh, I can't help being glad!" The words seemed to escape Chrissie involuntarily. "It sounds hateful—I'm ashamed of myself—"

"Why of course, you'd like your husband to yourself at present, I'm sure Struan will agree."

"Ranny? I—I' mafraid I'd forgotten him; I was only thinking of myself," Chrissie faltered.

Hand Casts Revive Vogue

hand casts that reveal the minute lines and skin texture which were lost in the old type of plaster casts are being exhibited in London. An artist has evolved a method of his own by which such details can be reproduced even in bronze. The new casts are supposed to disclose character and occupation much more clearly than do the casts which were made of notables in the Victorian era. Among the exhibits are the gigantic hands of Carnera, the pugilist, as well as those of artists, authors and stage stars.

MAJOR BOWLERS CLOSE SEASON WITH BANQUET

Belleville Golf Presented With Trophy and Accompanying Prizes

OFFICERS ELECTED

Newton Wilbur of the Tip Top Team Elected President

The Major Bowling League of the Recreation Alleys closed a highly successful season last night with a banquet at the Quinte Cafe and a social evening on the alleys. The season just passed was reviewed in detail, the cup and prizes were awarded and plans laid for another season, which may see a change in the personnel of the league. The Belleville Golf, who won the second half of the schedule and then went on to defeat the Deacons in the league playoff were presented with their trophy by Les Shiels, president of the loop and they also received practically all the prizes that were given for the Spring schedule.

Les Shiels presided at the banquet table and also conducted the business meeting which followed. Some criticism was levelled at some of the teams for not completing their schedule, while the Shoemen and Tip Top Tailor teams were congratulated for playing out the string with no hope of any reward of prizes. It was suggested, that next year a single schedule be played and that the top four teams compete in the playoff with the fifth and sixth teams playing off for the cellar position. It was also suggested, that some teams be handicapped or else split up the two hundred bowlers among the various teams of the loop.

Received Trophy

Joe Legault in receiving the trophy stated "he was quite happy about the whole thing" and gave unstinted praise to his team mates for the interest they displayed. The team received $30, while Deacons who won the first half of winter schedule received $20. Dave Tobe was given $5 for high average of 219 for the winter league, while Dave Stewart received $5 for high three string in the winter league, the total being 800. Joe Legault got $5 for high single of 365. The Belleville Golf team took all the honors in the spring league. Art Little getting $5 for high single of 375 with Pat Drumm collecting $5 for high three string of 860. Joe Legault received $5 for high average of 224, while the Belleville Fruit received $5 for high three game with 3546. The Belleville Golf in the second half had a team average of 3175 for fifteen games a fine record.

Frank Domenico, owner of the alleys and "Stub" Barrett each spoke briefly thanking all for the fine season and announcing some improvements for the coming season. The election of officers followed and Newton Wilbur was the choice of the meeting for president with John Fitzpatrick as vice president, Robert Miles as secretary and Art Little as treasurer. The new president thanked the teams for the honor conferred and asked for cooperation of every member in having a better season next year. The new executive will meet in the near future and decide on the suggestions advanced at the business meeting. Mr. Domenico announced the alleys would be at the disposal of the league for the night without cost and after thanking all who made the banquet a success the boys repaired to the alleys, where pins were knocked down far into the night.

A team composed of John Fitzpatrick, Walter Baker, Art Whalen, "Toots" Holway and Claude Tice rolled 3328 to win the sweepstakes. The teams were drawn from a hat and the boys are afraid that team will gang up and go in as a team next year in the Major Loop. Other sweeps were conducted during the night with Newton Wilbur right on the job carrying out the duties of his new office. The party broke up after the midnight hour. the boys voting the night one of the best held in a long while.

Pepper Martin Steals Home To Defeat Brooklyn Dodgers; Carl Hubbell in Fine Form

Cardinals' Win Puts Team in Tie for Second Place

TIGERS IN CELLAR

Yankees Ousted Out of First Place When They Lose to White Sox

(By Sid Feder, Associated Press Sports Writer).

It is also a good thing for St. Louis Cardinals that the old wild hoss of the Osage, otherwise known as Pepper Martin, can still run those base paths. Martin, the boys in the game say, is a ball-player's ball-player—the winning kid and the old hoss won a ball game yesterday, just as he won the 1931 world series, by running wild on the base lines.

He just stole one, but it was the big one—from third to home—and the Cards were on top 1-0 over Brooklyn Dodgers, a victory that boosted the gasless Gas Housers into a second place tie in the league.

In New York the Cubs beat the Giants 4-2 behind Bill Lee's elbowing and batting, but along in the eighth inning, when Gabby Hartnett's crew already had the game on ice they called old Carl Hubbell in from the dugout.

Now old Carl had an operation over the winter on that "meal-ticket" southpaw wing of his and the soupbone didn't come 'round. In two innings, the Cubs managed just two fly balls and a loud foul off him, so, from all indications, it shouldn't be long before King Carol is back on his throne—that little mound out there some 50 feet in front of the plate.

Old Indian Bob Johnson collected two homers to give the Athletics a 6-5 decision over Detroit Tigers. This was the Detroits' seventh straight setback and dropped them into the American League cellar. Chuck Klein's pinch-triple with the bases loaded broke up a ball game and handed the Phillies an 8-7 verdict over Cincinnati Reds.

New York Yankees dropped out of the American League lead in losing a 5-3 contest to Chicago White Sox. Lefty Edgar Smith, not only held the Yanks to seven hits, but he hit the single which drove the winning runs home. Boston Red Sox, rained out in St. Louis, climbed into the loop lead as a result.

Jim Tobin tossed a five-hitter for a 3-2 Pittsburgh win over Boston Bees, and Cleveland Indians did all their run-making in the seventh to trounce Washington's Senators 6-2.

SIX JUVENILE CLUBS ENTERED IN KI-Y LOOP

Seven Teams in Midget Series Will Compete This Season

BANTAM LOOP OPEN

Only One Team Entered and List Will be Kept Open for Time

With fourteen teams entered for competition the 1939 Belleville Ki-Y groups cleared decks for action at the Y.M.C.A. last evening, when applications for affiliation were received. Six juvenile clubs entered and seven in the midget series, but only one entry was received in the bantam series, which has been left open pending further possible entries, which may be made at the Y.M.C.A. this week.

The juvenile teams to enter the series were: Gossoons, East End Club, Orioles, West End, Friggsters and St. Michael's. In the midget series the following teams entered: Score-getters, East End, St. Mikes "Irish", West End, Personality Kids, Teef Benders and Flying Arrows. The St. Michael's bantams were the only entry in that class, however.

First major leaguer this year to turn in the very handy trick of getting "5 for 5", five hits in five trips to the plate, was Wilson Miles, ABOVE, rookie speed merchant who patrols an outfield post for Philadelphia Athletics. Miles took advantage of Detroit Tiger pitching to bang out two doubles and three singles in a recent game.

LEAFS TRIMMED BY JERSEY CITY

Bob Carpenter Goes Route Allowing but Seven Hits

(By The Associated Press)

A big youngster from Chicago, Bob Carpenter, seems to have provided an affirmative answer to the question of whether the surprising Jersey City Giants will stay up around the top of the International Baseball League standing.

Carpenter was no ball of fire last year after moving up from Greenwood, Miss., of the Cotton States League. But so far this season he's been a different pitcher.

When he held the last-place Toronto Leafs to seven hits for a 7-2 victory yesterday it was Carpenter's first complete game in three starts. But he lasted until the ninth inning the first time out and the eighth in the second and the Giants won all three games.

Bob's teammates gave him plenty of support at the plate yesterday—13 hits including two doubles and a single by Morris Jones—but they made four fielding errors which might have upset him and didn't.

The only other game on the card broke a three-way tie for fifth place, sending Baltimore to the top of the second division and dropping Rochester to seventh as the Orioles trimmed the Red Wings 8-4.

Red Ruffing—4-0

Bob Feller—4-1

Serving up the best brand of pitching in the American League thus far this season are these three top flight hurlers, all, incidentally, strikeouts artists. Ruffing is in his 16th major league year and for the past three has won 20 or more games for the all-conquering Yankees. He just keeps rolling along with as steady a brand of pitching as there is in the game. Tommy Bridges, in his 10th year with Detroit Tigers, appears to be headed for a good season after two years in which sickness handicapped his work. He was a 20-game winner three years in a row, when the Tigers were riding the heights and Schoolboy Rowe was getting all the publicity. Feller, the 18-year-old prodigy of three years ago, is the ace of Cleveland Indians' mound staff, and with his wildness curbed to some extent, is being mooted for top honors in the league by the time the season is over. All three of these leaders have led the circuit in strikeouts, in at least one season.

CORBY'S TEAM BLANK JUNIORS

Schrieder and Harris Have Too Much on Ball for the Losers

In an exhibition softball game played at the Collegiate grounds last evening "Chuck" Barnett's Corby's A.C. "mushballers" blanked "Red" Townsend's Citizen's Dairy juniors 7-0.

The big bats of the Corby's crowd boomed loud and often in the early stages as Murray, Reid and Cole clubbed home runs to give the winners a decided advantage. The Corby's nine bats were silenced when Steve Hook, the junior's new-found moundsman took over the hurling duties in the fifth, however. The Corby's crowd counted only two hits and one run after the fifth frame.

Conny Harris and Eddie Schrieder shared the pitching efforts for the winners, letting the juniors down with one stingy single, Yarrow getting a hit in the eighth off Schrieder for the lone bingle chalked up by the Townsend-led kids.

The score by innings:
Corbys A.C. .... 022 111 000—7
Juniors .. .. 000 000 000—0

Batteries: Corby's, Schrieder, Harris and Simpson and Knott;—Juniors, Carson, Hook and Doherty.

GEORGE RICHARDS TACKLES DUNLOP

Jewish Grappling Champ Has Taken on Weight Since Last Seen Here

Following a successful season of big-time wrestling in the U.S.A. George Richards, the Jewish grappling champion, returned to his native Canada, when the indoor sports season closed and was immediately signed to appear in Belleville against Al "Bunny" Dunlop, the former Cleveland badman of the squared circle, who has forsaken the white-trousered job of refereeing and returned to his first love, wrestling. Richards and Dunlop feature an all-star three-card bout to be presented at the Hume area on Friday night.

Since his last appearance in Belleville some 30 months ago, Richards has taken on considerable weight and today tips the scales at 228 pounds, just twelve pounds beneath that of Dunlop. For the past eight months Richards has wrestled in many states in the Union and on three occasions successfully defended his North American Jewish wrestling crown in Madison Square Gardens.

Eddie Kimiski, the Polish lad from Buffalo, who made such a decided hit with the fans last week and literally saved the show with his fine work, will return to meet Frank Slavick, another Polish lad, who was always a favorite in Belleville wrestling circles. The third bout brings together a new face, in Norm Briggars, of Toledo, versus Joe Conkle, the former Red Devil.

CALLING 'EM

Between the Lines

with
Ken J. Colling

It may be news to some, but it was an aspirin tablet, that got Lou Gehrig his big opportunity with the New York Yankees, just 14 years ago. At any rate here is the complete story, as told by Walter Gilhooly, sports Ed and columnist on the Ottawa Journal:

"On June 2, 1925, Wallie Pipp stepped out of the Yankee lineup to let a 21-year-old husky from Columbia by the name of Lou Gehrig play first base in his place. Pipp never got back. May 2, 1939, Pipp saw Gehrig, in his turn, step aside in favor of Ellsworth Dahlgren. How Gehrig came to move into the Yankee lineup is told by Pipp to Dan Daniel, baseball writer of the New York World-Telegram.

"The story of Gehrig taking my job often has been written but never has the truth been told. I'd like you to get the real yarn.

"As a kid in school I was injured in a hockey game. The disc struck over the left eye and injured the optic nerve. Vision in my eye was cut to 25 percent. I went through a long baseball career practically one-eyed.

"In addition to impairing my vision, that accident left me with a life-time of headaches.

"When I came into the Yankee clubhouse at noon on June 2, 1925, I had one of those terrific pains. I asked Doc Woods, our trainer, for a couple of aspirin tablets. It was my tough luck to have Miller Huggins pass just as Doc was handing me the pain-killer.

"I had not done so well, but the club was going worse than I was. As you know, we finished only one place out of the cellar that year.

"Huggins said, 'Wallie, if you're not feeling fit just take it easy. I'll let this kid Gehrig see what he can do at first base, and tomorrow you can go back.'

"Boy, was that a headache! It did not leave me for years. Gehrig broke in with a couple of hits. The next day Huggins asked me to continue my vacation. I looked at him the third afternoon and he hinted that he was doing me a favor letting me take it easy for a while.

"As you know I never got the job back. Those two aspirin tablets proved very painful to me and were responsible for Lou Gehrig getting his start.

"The day before Lou took my place, he was sent in as a pinch hitter. He got a blow, and I suppose Hug, who played hunches strongly, had that in mind when he told me to let my headache wear off on the bench.

"Gehrig batted for Pee Wee Wanniger, shortstop, who in May had replaced Deacon Scott. Scott had set the then amazing mark of 1,307 games.

"In June, 1925, Gehrig not only did not look as if he had a chance to chase me off first base, but it was doubtful if he would remain with the Yankees. He had been offered to the Browns in a trade. Tris Speaker told me that Hug had informed him of his intention to farm the big boy out to the American Association. Very likely to St. Paul, in which Hug had an interest.

"It just goes to show what a break will do for a ball player. Woods had to give me those aspirins at the critical moment of Gehrig's life.

"The breakdown of Gehrig reminds me of the total collapse of Scott, and emphasizes a fact which Lou has kept denying—that playing day after day for a record is the bunk. It takes too much out of a man. I don't know how bad Gehrig looked, but I want to congratulate him for his spirit in taking himself out."

Gehrig still insists that he did the right thing in playing day after day through more than 14 seasons to run up the most astonishing record ever compiled by a ball player. He told James M. Kahn, of the New York Sun: "My consecutive game record didn't cut one game off my career. An athlete's life is a short one. If you're going to make the most of it you have to crowd everything that you've got into the time you've got. That's the way you make the money. I wouldn't have made the money I've made if I hadn't played ball every day. I wouldn't have meant as much to my team if I had played 140 games a season or 145, instead of 154. And those 10 or 15 games a season I might have missed by not playing every day wouldn't have added an hour to my athletic life. A game I might have missed in August, 1930, wouldn't mean a damn thing to me right now."

Gehrig is still captain of the Yankees, and as such he comes out to the plate before game time every day to give the plate umpire the official batting order. When he came out at Detroit with the lineup the day he voluntarily withdrew, the Tiger announcer asked the crowd for three cheers for him. When the 10,000 spectators stood up and cheered the old Iron Horse he stumbled back to the dugout and cried in a corner."

We're telling You that weather permitting the local intermediate ballsters will swing into real action at the Fair Grounds this evening.. The Bay of Quinte League opens exactly two weeks from yesterday, so the boys had better get a hustle on as Walt Gerow's Napanee charges are getting in considerable pre-season practice these days.... Professional wrestling returns to the Hume arena Friday....They do say Max Baer is real serious about training for his bout with Lou Nova which comes off at the Yankee Stadium on June 1st.....The winner meets Joe Louis—and for what?

Gabby Hartnett has benched Billy Herman, Hank Lieber and Joe Marty—some say for not hitting: some for not hustling....Dr. Robert Dyer told a clinic of pro golfers in Chicago that Sammy Snead, Canadian open champ, is the Paderewski of golf...."His athlete's brain is completely developed," said the doctor...."He has muscle, sense, speed and rhythm."

Choice of Weapons

By ELIZABETH ALDEN

The drilling machine was in Vance Falls, sinking artesian wells for Amos Benson and Jim Richardson, so of course that's what we talked about in the store after supper.

A brisk little argument was getting under way when Uncle Tommie Wallace begun to chuckle.

"Speaking o' wells," he snickered, "j'you ever hear about the one Abr'am Hoxie dug on his place, the one that filled up in a single night in August after a two weeks' dry spell? You know where the Hoxie farm is, joining Jed Miller's to the east?"

"Jed don't like Abr'am much, either, does he?" Eddie Benson threw in for bait, with a wink at the others.

"Like him! Why, boy, the hate Jed's got on Abr'am's a beautiful, full-grown blossom like you won't often run across. Talk about your kentucky mountain feuds! Only up here in New England we use ridicule' stead o' pistols."

"What started the rumpus?" asked Eddie.

"Why, to get at the beginning you've got to go back before the drouth of nineteen-eighteen. Maine was dry, but you could have all you wanted come in from Boston any time.

"Seems Jed wanted to send for some hard stuff without his wife's knowing. Sallie raised a towse when he took so much as one drink, and if she ever found out he had a whole quart come—!

"A crowd of us was pitching horseshoes in Ilson's yard one Sunday afternoon and he asked for suggestions. 'Have it shipped in my name,' Abr'am offers.

"'Well, that's mighty decent of you, Abr'am,' says Jed, kinder surprised, because he's always had a notion Abr'am didn't like him. 'An' I won't forget you when it comes, neither'.

"So Jed sent for his whisky, check going with the order.

"Time for the stuff to come, he went down to the express office.

"'No, Jed,' Bob Parker told him after he'd hunted high and low, 'Nothing here for Abr'am today. He got a package yesterday though, I remember. From Boston. Likker, 't looked like'.

"Jed went on over to Abr'am's, chuckling to himself.

"'Couldn't wait, could you, Abr'am?' he started to joke him. 'Get pretty dry, or was you afraid I wouldn't give you any of that whisky, after all?'

"'What whisky?' Abr'am wanted to know, blank as a stun wall.

"'Why, that couple o' quarts I sent after in your name and that come yesterday. I just been down to the office and Bob said you got it.' He poked Abr'am in the ribs. 'You ain't drunk it all up so quick, have you, you old rum hound?'

"Abr'am grinned that mooncalf Hoxie grin that would madden a man without no other couse. 'I don't know nothing about any likker o' yourn. Package come for me and I too it. Guess a man's got a right to his own mail.'

"Well, Jed's temper flew in a minute, once he sensed how slick he'd had it played on him. 'You stole my whisky, you skunk'. And I'll get even with you."

"After a while ol' Mis' Hanscomb, Marietta's aunt, died and left quite a little passel o' money and Abr'am and Marietta begun to fix up their place.

"Marietta, she wanted water piped into the house, so Abr'am went back up on the ridge where he thought there'd be a good flow. It was clayey soil and pretty hard, slow work, so't Abr'am sunk quite a lot of money in that well, and still hardly a trickle. One night he went home discouraged, vowing he'd dig just one more day and then abandon it and start a new place.

"On his way down across the fields he passed Jed, leaning on his fence and kinder smilin'.

"'How's the well comin', Abr'am?' he inquired.

"'Humh!' said Abr'am, not stopping.

"But when he went up the next morning, the well was full—full of clear, cold water.

"Abr'am couldn't hardly believe his eyes. He scooped up some and tasted it, and then he give a whoop 't could 'a been heard a mile off.

"So he bailed it out and rocked it up—and never saw another drop in it."

"But how could that happen, if it filled up once in just one night?"

"Might be because Jed had hauled water over from the stream all that night with his oxen and dumped it in."

WALL ST. CLOSE

New York, May 9—(AP)— The stock market rambled in rallying territory today with leading issues posting gains running to two or more points. There were occasional subsequent slow-downs and some shading of prices. Volume again picked up later and, near the final hour, quotations were around the top. Transfers were about 700,000 shares.

TORONTO STOCKS

Toronto, May 9 (CP)—Prices were stronger all round today in the early stage on Toronto Exchange and the indices for the mining and the industrial groups were up about a point or more at noon and the western oils added about a half point, trading turned quiet around midday and volume for the first three hours aggregated 252,000 shares.

Western oils were led in the advance by Anglo-Canadian which moved up to 1.23 for a net gain of 28 cents on the news that a producing well blew in on the company's holdings at Steveville. Okalta, Home, Calgary-Edmonton and Foothills also firmed.

Most of the base metal leaders advanced moderately while Macassa was a gold feature with a gain of 35 cents to 5.05. Moneta, McKenzie, Hard Rock, Augite and Naybob were strong issues of the cheaper group.

Steels, golds, utilities and papers were stronger industrials. International Petroleum lost a half point on the news that the extra dividend had been cut by 25 cents.

Produce Prices Remain Steady

Toronto, May 9—Prices clung to former levels for all lines on the Toronto open produce market Monday, according to the Dominion Department of Agriculture.

Sufficient trading appeared on the butter market to keep receipts moving steadily at unchanged prices. Buyers continued cautious in making commitments, but offerings were rather small and the carry over from the week-end was light. No sales were reported in the Western make here, but prices remained firm as holders were not pressing supplies on this market. Bids of 21 1-4c were again turned down. Ontario creamery solids traded at 21c for No. 1 grades and 20 1-4c for 38 score. No change occurred in prints.

An easy tone prevailed on the egg market, although receipts were in fair demand. Exports to Great Britain are now under way. The Department of Agriculture in its weekly review states: "Shipments for export are increasing and are exerting a steady influence on the market. In all, some twelve or thirteen hundred cases left Montreal, last week for the British market and more than 2,000 cases are sold for shipment this week. At the moment it does not look as if all orders at hand will be filled at present prices." Yesterday graded shipments closed at 20 1-2c for grade A-large, 18 1-2c for medium, 18c for B's and 17c for C grades.

Cheese was offered freely to the wholesale trade at unchanged prices. New, large paraffined was quoted at 10 1-2c, twins at 10 3-4c and triplets at 11c.

Montreal Produce Steady

Montreal, May 9 (CP)—Offerings moved at mostly unchanged prices on open produce markets here yesterday, the Dominion Department of Agriculture reported.

Creamery butter prints to retailers sold for 21 1-2c to 22c a pound and solids for 21c to 21 1-2c. Western butter was unquoted. Quebec No. 1 pasteurized fresh in wholesale jobbing lots made 20 3-4 to 20 7-8c. Receipts: 452 boxes.

Ontario colored cheese brought 10 1-2c a pound. Receipts: 26 boxes.

Graded egg shipments in used free cases were offered at 21 1-2c a dozen for A-large, 19c to 19 1-2c for A-medium, 1[illegible]c for B-large and 17 1-2c to 18c for C. Receipts: 2,223 cases.

SPURIOUS COIN IS DETECTED

A spurious twenty-five cent piece of recent design has been passed in the city and was detected at one of the banks today. No other instance of coins of this denomination has come to notice. The coin is well-made and might deceive except for its depth of color and the ring. It is mostly of lead.

DUKE OF WINDSOR

London, May 9—(CP)— British newspapers published accounts today of the Duke of Windsor's peace appeal but almost without exception avoided editorial comment.

Two London newspapers gave front page prominence to the speech—The News Chronicle and The Express. The Daily Telegram carried a brief front page item.

The Times printed three-quarters of a column among other foreign news items and The Daily Mail carried the text of the speech under a large headline.

Daily Mail's Comment

The Daily Mail commented editorially that the tone of the appeal was "unexceptionable" and would "resound in all the chancelleries of the world." The editorial observed it had been said that the British Broadcasting Corporation did not carry the speech because "a broadcast of the Duke's voice so soon after the departure of the King might have led to entirely unfounded assumptions...."

"The issue would probably not have presented itself as a delicate problem if the court had been in London," The Daily Mail said.

Lord Beaverbrook's Daily Express said it understood the King talked to the Duke from the Empress of Australia the day before the broadcast.

The Daily Mirror, a morning tabloid, said Queen Mary listened to her son's broadcast.

Other Comment

The Evening News (Liberal) said: "He has been ill-advised. ......at best the project was ill-timed. At its worst, it was tasteless and capable of being construed as an intrusion upon a state occasion of greatest significance."

The Evening Standard (Independent) commented:

"The King and Queen of England are on their way to America. He (the Duke) should have let them speak first in the name of the citizens of our land."

The Daily Mail made the speech its main news story and the subject of its leading editorial in which it said the Duke "exercised the right of every private citizen."

The editorial added: "The objection that he should not have spoken to America while the King is actually on the way there cannot be sustained. It will be a month before the King reaches the United States."

The Daily Herald (Labor) in contrast gave the Duke a bare half column at the bottom of page two.

New York Papers View

New York, May 9—(CP)—A wish that the international skies will smile more happily upon the end of the voyage King George and Queen Elizabeth are making to North America than it did upon its beginning was expressed today in a New York Herald Tribunal editorial that also spoke of the "somewhat ill-timed message" broadcast yesterday by the Duke of Windsor.

The Republican newspaper felt the Duke's plea for peace "fell oddly in the midst of his brother's progress" across the Atlantic and added that "its unexpectionable sentiments were of a sort which have little meaning except when they come from men in positions of influence or responsibility such as the Duke of Windsor no longer holds."

While believing "the times are serious ones for royal visitings," The Herald Tribune said "Americans will be happy to receive with all cordiality the symbolic heads of the great commonwealth of nations whose ideals and interests so closely parallel their own."

Text of the Speech

The Duke's speech follows:

I am speaking tonight from Verdun, where I have been spending a few days visiting one of the greatest battlefields of the last war. Upon this and other battlefields throughout the world millions of men suffered and died. As I talk to you from this historic spot I am deeply conscious of the presence of the great company of the dead, and I am convinced that could they make their voices heard they would be with me in what I am about to say.

For 2 1-2 years I have deliberately kept out of public affairs and I still propose to do so. I speak for no one but myself, without the previous knowledge of any government. I speak simply as a soldier of the last war whose most earnest prayer it is that such cruel and destructive madness shall never again overtake mankind.

I break my self-imposed silence now only because of the manifest danger that we may all be drawing nearer to a repetition of the grim events which happened a quarter of a century ago. The grave anxieties of the time in which we live compel me to raise my voice in expression of the universal longing to be delivered from the fears that beset us, and to return to normal conditions.

Peace Is Vital

You and I know that peace is a matter far too vital for our happiness to be treated as a political question. We also know that in modern warfare the victory will lie only with the powers of evil. Anarchy and chaos are the inevitable results with consequent misery for us all.

I cannot claim for myself the expert knowledge of a statesman, but I have at least had the good fortune to travel the world and therefore to study human nature. These valuable experiences have left me with the profound conviction that there is no land whose people want war. This I believe to be as true of the German nation as of the British nation to which I belong as it is of you in America and the French nation on whose friendly soil I now reside.

International understanding does not always spring up spontaneously of itself. There are times when it has to be deliberately sought and negotiated, and political tension is apt to weaken that spirit of mutual concession in which conflicting claims can be best adjusted. The problems that concern us at the moment are only the reproductions on a larger scale of the jealousies and suspicions of everyday life. In our personal contacts we strive to live in harmony with our fellowmen. Otherwise modern civilization could never have come into existence. Are we now going to destroy that civilization by failing to do internationally what we have learned to do individually?

Harmful Propaganda

In their public utterances the heads of all governments are at one in declaring that war would be disastrous to the well-being of their people. Whatever political disagreements may have arisen in the past the supreme importance of averting war will, I feel confident, impel all those in power to renew their endeavors to bring about a peaceful settlement.

Among the measures that I feel might well be adopted to this end is the disparagement of all that harmful propaganda which, from whatever source it comes, tends to poison the minds of the people of the world.

I personally deplore, for example, the use of such terms as "encirclement" and "aggression." They can only arouse just those dangerous passions that it should be the aim of us all to subdue.

It is in a larger spirit than that of personal or purely national interests that peace should be pursued.

The statesmen who set themselves to restore international security and confidence must act as good citizens of the world and not only as good Frenchmen, Italians, Germans, Americans or Britons. The benefit to their own nation must be sought through the benefit of the wider community of which we are all members.

In the name of those who fell in the last war, I urge all political leaders to be resolute in the discharge of this mission.

I appeal to them in the name of the living, whose existence and happiness are in their hands. And I appeal to them especially in the name of the youth of the present day with all its incalculable potentialities of future service of the human race.

The world has not yet recovered from the effects of the last carnage which in each and every country decimated my generation.

The greatest success that any government could achieve for its own national policy would be nothing in comparison with the triumph of having contributed to save humanity from the terrible fate which threatens it today.

Somehow I feel that my words tonight will find a sincere echo in the hearts of all who hear them.

It is not for me to put forward concrete proposals that must be left to those who have the power to guide their nations towards closer understanding.

God grant that they may accomplish that great task before it is too late.

KREMLIN STUDIES

French-Russian military alliance.

Britain was understood to have favored Soviet assistance to all states on the western border of the U.S.S.R., promising British-French aid to Russia if such assistance involved her in conflict. The Moscow foreign office, while it was still headed by Maxim Litvinoff, had proposed a British-French-Russian guarantee to Baltic and Black Sea states.

No Bearing on Situation

An editorial in the Moscow publication Bolshevik, mentioning a "just and holy war for the triumph of Communism" if the Soviet Union were drawn into conflict, startled some observers. Others insisted such editorial expressions had no bearing on the Kremlin's attitude.

Diplomatic quarters still debated whether Litvinoff's resignation last week signified a change in Soviet policy—particularly with respect to Germany. Political quarters advanced the view that the Kremlin would take its time to decide on a definite position and that the determining factor would be neither affection for Britain nor a lack of it for Germany, but simply the vital interest of the Soviet Union itself.

GUSTAVE BLAIR

deter Blair. Hundreds of persons have claimed to be the abducted Ross.

"If my older brother (Walter) lives for five years, he'll seek me out and admit our kinship," he said.

Default Judge

Blair filed a civil action to establish his identity. He named as defendants Walter, Sophia, Marian and Anne, other children of Christian and Sarah Ann Ross. They did not answer the complaint and Judge G. A. Rodgers entered a default judgment.

Asked if he intended legal action to restore to him a portion of the family fortune to which he as "Charley Ross" would be entitled, he said: "There won't be any need for that."

Then he spoke in glowing terms of radio and film contracts which, he claimed, were given to him.

Blair said he has an unbroken chain of evidence to establish his true identity from 1873. Charley and Walter Ross were kidnapped July 1, 1874 by two men on the promise that they would be given fire crackers for Independence Day. Walter, two years older, was found a short time later in the northeastern section of Philadelphia. After three days the Ross family received the first of 23 ransom letters, demanding $20,000. Negotiations to obtain the child's return were unsuccessful.

Philadelphia, May 9—(AP)—"The whole thing is ridiculous," said a brother kidnapped at the same time as the famous Charley Ross today in refusing to accept an Arizona carpenter as his long-lost brother.

To questions about the claims of Gustave Blair, accepted by a court in Phoenix, yesterday as "Charles Brewster Ross," Walter L. Ross declared: "This man's claims are entirely unfounded and we intend to ignore the action of the Arizona court. Blair is evidently just another one of the cranks who have been bothering us for the last 65 years.

Philadelphia, May 9—(AP)—Mysteriously missing Gerald Brusco gave Philadelphia police another "little Charley Ross" case as daily radio appeals for his return were ended today and some searchers expressed a belief he had been stolen by a childless woman.

Since the six-year-old schoolboy wandered from home April 18, then disappeared, there has been no clue, no ransom note and no reason for his absence.

Giving up a fruitless search of nearby swamplands and abandoning the dragging of water-filled sink holes, police have concentrated on a house-to-house search of Gerald's neighborhood to test the childless woman theory.

STRIKING MINERS TO HOLD MEETING

1,400 Men Idle as They Refuse to Work After Dismissal of Miner

Springhill, N.S., May 9 (CP) — Striking miners in Cumberland Railway and Coal Company Collieries prepared today for a meeting to discuss the cause of the walkout which left 1,400 men idle. The miners tied up the two biggest pits in the Cumberland coal basin yesterday when they refused to work because the company dismissed a man convicted of driving an automobile while intoxicated.

Spokesmen for the miners said they had not been notified of the ruling under which the miner had been dismissed. E. B. Paul, the Company's District Mines Superintendent, said the ruling provided that "if a mn awas convicted of a criminal offence and served time in jail, his name would be struck from the payroll." It was not a new ruling but one that had been allowed to lapse.

The miner returned to work yesterday after seven days in jail. He applied for his lamp to go underground but officials, believing they did not have authority to re-hire a man discharged under such conditions, would not allow him to work. The working force on the back shift walked out immediately.

At a meeting of the Springhill United Mine Workers Local last night the men decided to remain idle. They asked for information from Union District Headquarters in Glace Bay, N.S., and called a meeting for today. Eddie Emberley, the Union's Cumberland County Board member, was expected to be present.

Welsh M. P.'s Want Name 'Wales' Used in Bills

Complain of Tendency To Leave Out Name

London, May 9.—(CP Cable)—Welsh members of all parties murmured approval in the House of Commons today whe nRhys Davies, Labor, and Sir Henry Morris-Jones, National Liberal, complained of the tendency to leave out the world "Wales" in phrasing bills.

They were appeased somewhat when a Scottish Conservative member, W. J. Anstruther-Gray, whose marriage bill uses the word England to denote England and Wales, assured the complaining members he was "the last person in the world to put any slight on the national feelings of the Welsh people."

The Bill, which aims to increase facilities for marriage between persons living in England and Wales on the one hand and Scotland on the other, passed through the committee stage without amendment.

Bennett's Name Is Mentioned

London, May 9—(CP Cable)—Sir Harold Webbe, who heads the Conservative opposition in the London County Council, today was nominated as his party's candidate in the by-election in the Abbey Division of Westminster May 17.

Nomination in the case of Sir Harold Webbe is tantamount to election. Sir Sidney Herbert, Conservative, whose death caused the Abbey by-election, had a majority of close to 13,000 over a Labor candidate in 1935.

The name of Rt. Hon. R. B. Bennett, former Canadian Prime Minister, was mentioned in connection with the Conservative nomination. Some party members in the division wanted him to stand. But his known unwillingness to enter the British House of Commons led to his name being dropped.

HOPE FOR RELIEF FROM DUST WAVE

Scattered Showers Are Predicted for Prairie Provinces

Winnipeg, May 9—(CP)— Forecasts of scattered showers in the prairie provinces today gave farmers hope for relief from dust storms which swept sections of Alberta and Saskatchewan yesterday.

Dust storms described as "black as night" forced southern Saskatchewan residents to use lights at mid-day yesterday and almost halted motor traffic in some districts. There was no indication whether serious damage was caused to crops. At Chaplin, 50 miles west of Moose Jaw, poles and fences were blown down by the high wind.

At Shaunavon, in southwestern Saskatchewan, street lights were turned on because of the thick dust.

"You couldn't see across the street," was the standard reply of telephone operators queried on extent of the storm throughout the south-country.

The storm raged for two hours in a black cloud of heavy silt at most southern points, coming up in a dark billow visible for miles before it struck.

SEARCH GOES ON FOR MISSING MEN

Andrew Goodwin and James Miller of Picton Believed Drowned Near Waupoos

Picton, Ont., (Special)—Identification of the eighteen foot skiff discovered standing on its end in forty feet of water near Green Island, two miles off Waupoos, Prince Edward County over the week-end and from which Andrew Goodwin, 50 and James Miller, 24, Picton residents are believed to have lost their lives, as belonging to Miller was made here last night by members of the staffs of Adams and Vandusen and the C.D.S. store.

Discovery of the boat was made by Morley Helmer, Point Traverse fisherman, as he arrived to lift his nets.

Dragging operations yesterday failed to locate the bodies of the missing men. Large search parties fully equipped left here this morning in further efforts to find the bodies in the deep water that is apparent near where the boat was discovered.

The discovery was the first indication of any tragedy and immediately two large fish boats went to the scene, but dragging proved unsuccessful. In the searching party were Miller's two brothers, George and John, and Goodwin's son, Teddy, Chief of Police Bert Biddle and Constable John Armstrong.

The two men had taken Miller's new boat for a trial trip, leaving Miller's home at Waupoos about 5 o'clock Saturday evening. Their non-return did not cause alarm as they were thought to be staying with friends on the island, half a mile from shore.

Sid Welbanks and Teddy Goodwin escaped a like fate when at the last moment they decided not to make the trip. The boat was discovered by Helmer a mile off Green Island, a rocky bar inhabited only by gulls, and two miles from Waupoos Island.

No reason for the runabout capsizing is known, since there was only a slight sea on the lake over the week-end. Grappling operations will continue tomorrow. Anxiously awaiting the outcome of the search are Goodwin's wife, his sons, Jack and Teddy, and daughter, Margaret, and Miller's young wife.

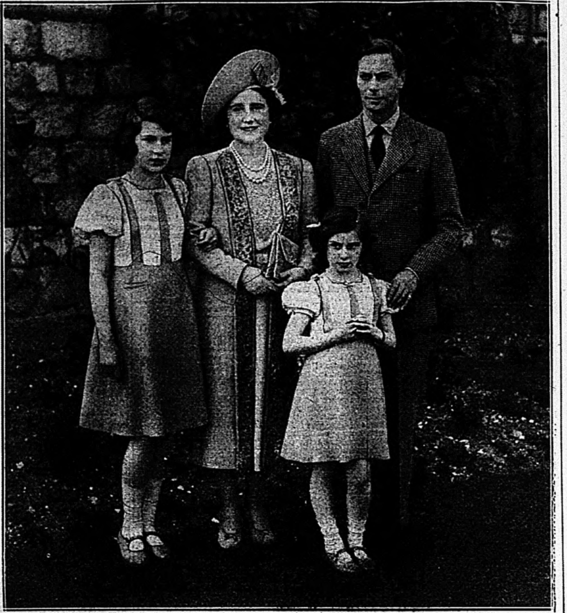
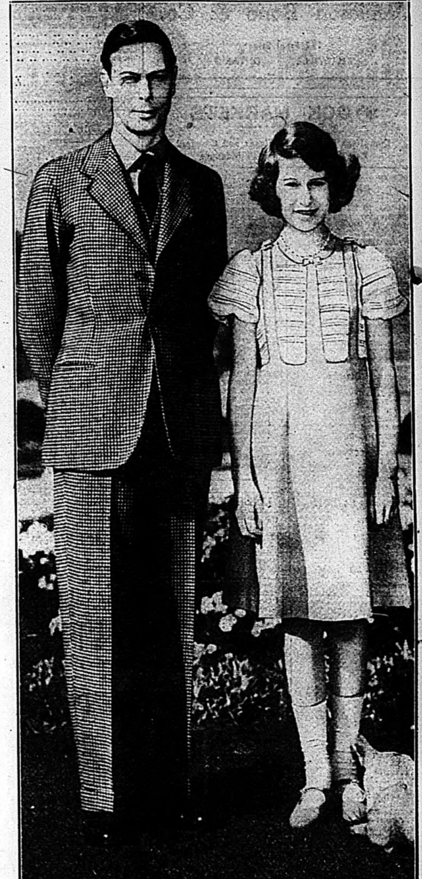
Canadian Photographers Chosen to Take Pictures of Their Majesties at Windsor Castle





Copyright Photos by Gerald Richardson, Toronto.

Shortly before embarking on their voyage to Canada and the United States, King George and Queen Elizabeth graciously consented to pose for the first photographs ever taken of the royal family by Canadian photographers. Historic Windsor Castle was the spot selected by the King and Queen to have these pictures taken, and by instruction of Buckingham Palace these pictures are being made available to newspapers all over the world by Star Newspaper Service. Two of these "royal command" photographs, taken by Gerald Richardson, Star Newspaper Service staff photographer, are shown here. King George and Princess Elizabeth are pictured, RIGHT, in the beautiful garden surrounding Windsor Castle. The King, Queen and the two princesses, Elizabeth and Margaret Rose, are pictured, TOP.

Moscow Not Veering Toward Axis Ivan Maisky Tells British Minister

London, May 9—(CP)—The diplomatic correspondent of Reuters news agency last night stated that Ambassador Ivan Maisky of Soviet Russia had called at the foreign office and formally advised Great Britain that his government's foreign policy had undergone no change as the result of Maxim Litvinoff's withdrawal as Foreign Commissar.

The interview was taken here as reassurance there was no truth in rumors circulated in Europe that Moscow was veering toward the Rome-Berlin axis.

Informed Russian circles here believed the permament Russian Foreign Commissar would be Vladimir Potemkin, Vice-Commissar who will arrive at Warsaw tomorrow after a tour of the Balkan countries. In the meantime Premier Molotoff has taken over Litvinoff's duties.

The Reuters diplomatic correspondent wrote:

"The fact that the British Ambassador at Moscow this afternoon saw the Russian Foreign Commissar and handed him the text of the British proposals shows, first, that British authorities have received satisfactory assurances that Litvinoff's retirement implied no change in Soviet foreign policy and, secondly, that they have hopes that the British counter-proposals will serve as a basis for mutual understanding.

"Although the British offer does not accept the Russian suggestion for what would virtually have been an alliance, there is ground for believing that it is based on collaboration on a reciprocal basis in the event of aggression against the central or south European states bordering Russia.

"There would be consultation and exchange of information, but at the moment there would not appear to be any specific proposals as to what shape they would take. Such collaboration could not be interpreted as constituting a policy of encirclement, it is pointed out in London."

Sunshine Starts Shopping Urge

When the bright sun shines from blue skies overhead, Belleville residents loosen their purse strings and become infected with a veritable shopping urge, it was observed yesterday along Front street by local merchants. While the bright sunshine flooded the downtown section crowds of shoppers strolled in and out of the opened doors of the stores and business in nearly all lines was admittedly good.

"It's remarkable the change that is noted in business when we are given a day or two of good weather. People actually become optimistic in the matter of shopping," stated Mr. J. McVeigh, manager of one of the larger Front street stores.

Life Behind 'Headlines' Told Y's Men by Ont.-Intell. Reporter

Highlights in the everyday life of a newspaper reporter, amusing and serious incidents that go toward the making of the daily edition of the press and actual experiences of life behind the "headlines" were given members of the Belleville Y's Men's Club at their weekly banquet last night by George H. Carver of the editorial staff of The Ontario Intelligencer.

The speaker was introduced to club members by Y'sman Homer Thomas, while appreciation of the address was given by President Harold Vaughan.

Featuring the meeting were three splendid piano numbers given by Y'sman Alec Gordon. These met with well-merited applause.

During the business of the meeting President Harold Vaughan received the unanimous support of the club in launching the annual "Treasure Chest". One thousand keys will be sold at the rate of ten cents each and the chest will be opened after May 29th. Appeals from the Salvation Army were dealt with while a letter asking the club to raise $300.00 for the purpose of sending underprivileged children to Kingston on the occasion of the Royal Visit will be dealt with later. Y'sman Joe Shortt led the community singing.

A COUNTRY CHALLENGED

Britain is speaking to-day as she only speaks when her patience has been exhausted. France is girding for the showdown which again seems inevitable. The voice of the United States rises in condemnation. And to Canada—as to other free nations within the British Commonwealth—has come the clear challenge of courageous action. This time the Dominion must not hedge or hesitate. This country's decision has been made easy by the dropping of the last shred of doubt from the designs of Nazism. Tremendous Economies Are Seen as Result of Unified Operations by Signers of Report

Report Speaks of Plan to Assure C.N.R. Same Share of Earnings as it Has Enjoyed of Average Earnings

Ottawa, May 10—(CP)—Unified management of the Canadian National and the Canadian Pacific Railways was recommended in a minority report submitted to the special railway committee of the Senate today by Rt. Hon. Arthur Meighen, Conservative leader.

This report, said Senator Meighen, represented his own views "and those who follow me on this committee."

"That is our finding, and ours only," he added. "It does not bind anyone sitting in the House, and it does not bind our party, for the leader of the Conservative party takes another view. But no one will ever doubt the sincerity of my attitude in this matter."

Sees Tremendous Economies

Mr. Meighen, reading from the report, declared his followers to have been impressed by the following consideration:

"(1)—That huge competing businesses struggling for a living in the same field can, in general, and probably always, effect tremendous economies by unified operations.

"(2)—That such unified operations as have in a minor way been put into effect in respect of our

Why the Weather!

By Major A. H. Thiessen

Fog drops! When we can not see objects 1000 feet away, due to the fog, the weather is called "foggy"; this condition is a great hazard to ships of the air and sea. Researchers are studying the size, number and composition of fog drops, a knowledge of which will aid greatly in determining how to dissipate fog locally. They find that there are about 80 fog particles per cubic inch and the drops vary in size from one ten-thousandth to five thousandths of an inch in diameter. The water content is, of course, very small: one-tenth of an ounce for every 1000 cubic feet of space.

POLISH SCHOOL IS DEMOLISHED

Fifty Germans Reported to Have Committed Act in Upper Silesia

Warsaw, May 10—(CP-Havas)—Demolition of a Polish school in German Upper Silesia by a group of 50 Germans was reported in Polish dispatches here today. Newspapers also gave prominence to stories of continuing agitation by Germans living in the Polish frontier zone.

Advices from Memel said three Lithuanian peasants were killed during a clash between German police and farmers in the village of Dovilai, in the Memel zone. The police were said to have fired on the peasants when they formed a protest parade after refusing to turn over their produce to the German Food Commissioner.

Polish minority leaders in Germany were said to have protested to Upper Silesia authorities over demolition of the Polish school in the town of Jedrzn. The doors and windows of the school were reported to have been smashed and all furniture and files thrown through the windows and burned.

Numerous arrests of Germans living in Poland who tried to cross the frontier into the reich or who provoked incidents between Poles and Germans were also deported.

POTEMKIN, BECK TO HOLD TALKS

Understood Russia "Ready and Willing to Improve Relations With Poland"

Warsaw, May 10—(AP)—Vladimir Potemkin, Assistant Commissar for Foreign Affairs of Russia, is stopping over, en route home from Turkey, Bulgaria and Rumania, ostensibly to improve Polish-Russian relations in talks with Foreign Minister Joseph Beck.

An official of the eastern section of the Polish Foreign Office greeted Potemkin at the station yesterday.

Reports were heard that a series of official conferences had been arranged.

Commenting on the Soviet decision to fill the vacant post of Ambassador to Poland, the newspaper Kurjer Czerwony, close to the foreign office, had said Russia was "ready and willing to improve her relations with Poland."

Any talks between Potemkin and Beck, it was believed, would get down to a discussion of hard facts regarding possible Soviet military assistance to Poland.

Infected Surgical Knife Brings Death to Doctor's Child in Embrace

Moline, Ill., May 10—(CP)—An affectionate embrace from her doctor-daddy proved fatal for 19-month-old Nancy McCreedy. She died Monday night after an infected surgical knife protruding from her father's pocket penetrated her abdominal wall as he swooped her into his arms.

Dr. C. O. McCreedy said he had used the instrument to lance an abscess and had put in in his pocket to keep it away from his sterilized lances. In some way the knife came loose from its wrappings.

The King and Queen are pictured here aboard the Empress of Australia on the high seas en route to Canada. Twenty-foot waves greeted Their Majesties on the first day of their historic voyage, but the King was reported to be enjoying deck tennis while the liner was buffeted by the heavy seas.

W. R. MOTHERWELL BOLTS PARTY ON WHEAT POLICY

Former Liberal Minister of Agriculture Will Vote Against Party

CONTENTIOUS QUESTION

Ottawa, May 10—(CP)—A former Minister of Agriculture in the Liberal administration, Hon. W. R. Motherwell, stood pledged today to vote against the government's wheat board policy.

The blunt 79-year-old member for Melville, Sask., was on record as opposed to the government's bill empowering the Wheat Board to set a guaranteed minimum price of 70 cents a bushel.

While he traced the government's apparent difficulty over wheat policy to the fact "there is a strong element in the cabinet against the idea of a Wheat Board of any kind" Mr. Motherwell urged government to revert to the original Wheat Board plan adopted unanimously by the Commons in 1935.

KINGSTON PREPARES

By LOUIS V. HUNTER

Toronto, May 10—(CP)—Ontario, flowering into early summer beauty, is primping for a welcome to the King and Queen that is infused here and there with the spark of ingenuity.

Everywhere in the province, from Ottawa and Toronto to the smallest centre where the royal visit extends, there is the hustle-bustle with preparations and decorations and not infrequently the maze of

King and Queen Prove Seamanship in Storm Which Rocks Liner

Day of Sunshine Succeeds Most Tempestuous Day in History of Empress of Australia, the Royal Ship—Crew Presented to Their Majesties

By R. K. CARNEGIE
Canadian Press Staff Writer

Aboard R.M.S. Empress of Australia, May 10—(CP)—The "floating palace" bearing the King and Queen to Canada ploughed steadily today through a sea that compared to yesterday's storm was tranquil. An easy, 17-knot pace was maintained.

A stiff wind blew from the southwest and the ocean still was flecked with white caps, but the 20,000 ton Empress had steadied down after the tossing it—and the royal passengers—received during the 60-mile-an-hour blow yesterday that sent big waves rolling over the liner.

Sun Shines Brightly

Under a brightly shining sun, a sharp contrast to the fog the liner and its cruiser convoy encountered early in the voyage, the Empress of Australia churned toward the west and the welcome awaiting Their Majesties in Canada. They arrive in Quebec Monday.

The deck crew of the Empress was busy early today rolling back canvas curtains and other equipment used to protect the passengers during the mid-Atlantic gale that upset tables and sent combers crashing over the ship. At the height of the stormy weather, just at dusk last evening, one of the convoying cruisers, the Southampton, was forced to hove to when a lifeboat

CROWN WITNESSES TO BE RECALLED IN MURDER TRIAL

Shea, McDermott and Miss Bromwell to be Examined by the Defence

BULLET DESCRIBED

Toronto, May 10—(CP)—Trial of Mickey and Alex MacDonald for the murder of bookie James Windsor Jan. 7 continued today with a juror, whose sudden illness caused a flurry late yesterday, in his place. The juror told counsel and Mr. Justice G. F. McFarland he was feeling better.

On application of defence counsel, His Lordship ordered the recall to the witness stand, at a time convenient to the crown, of John R. Shea, John McDermott and Lorraine Bromell, crown witnesses, regarding some new material in the hands of the defence.

Defence counsel also wanted Joseph Smith, another crown witness, recalled, but crown counsel Cecil Snyder would give no such undertaking, saying he did not know where Smith was at present.

Given Court Order

Defence counsel Frank Regan said he wanted to call William Bromell, who he believed is in the Ontario reformatory at Guelph. He was told to find out definitely and an order might then be made to bring Bromell, a brother of Lorraine, to court.

Through two crown witnesses—Miss V. Vincent, assistant to Dr. E. R. Frankish, medico-legal expert of the Attorney-General's Department, and Detective Sergeant Harry Glasscock—Snyder traced the possession of the fatal bullet after it was taken from Windsor's body.

Regan asked Glasscock if he was responsible for the information in a police circular on the murder. Glasscock said it was prepared by himself and Inspector Chisholm. He was only "partly" responsible for it.

Glasscock admitted he had described the fatal bullet as a .45, but now knew it was a .455.

Circular 'Rushed'

He said the circular was 'rushed' to get it before the public immediately after the crime. He told of receiving a radio alarm to go to the Windsor home the night of the murder. He was met at the front

IMPOSES TERM OF 15 MONTHS

Lord Wark Sentences Man for Illegal Possession of Explosive Substances

Glasgow, May 10—(CP)—Cormac MacGarrigle, 46, a member of the Irish citizen army, was sentenced today to 15 months' imprisonment for illegal possession of explosive substances.

Lord Wark, in pronouncing sentence, said a stricter sentence would have been given if he thought MacGarrigle had had any recent connection with the current campaign of terrorism.

"I take into account," the judge said, "what has been said by a witness for the crown: That the Irish citizen army which has been mentioned in this indictment is not an organization indulging, either in the past or the present, in such a campaign."

It had been stated during the trial that letters had been addressed to MacGarrigle as "the adjutant, Glasgow Battalion, I.C.A."

Vatican Acting by Normal Contacts To Secure Peace Says Statement

Vatican City, May 10 (CP)—A statement issued by a Vatican City News Service today decried the fact that "the most fantastic news is being spread concerning the steps which the Pope may have taken or may be taking for peace."

The statement said some reports went "so far as to affirm that the Pope might have invited the heads of governments and Foreign Ministers of Italy, France, Germany, England and Poland to meet at the Vatican in a conference to be presided over by the Pope himself to solve peacefully the pending question between Germany and Poland and all the others which might imperil peace."

In explanation of peace moves recently initiated by the Holy Father, the statement added:

"The truth is that the Pope always interests himself and today more than ever in the great cause of peace, but in the ordinary way, that is, through the normal diplomatic contacts.

"It is for this reason that in these days various nuncios have made contact with heads of governments and Ministers of Foreign Affairs to communicate to them the ardent wishes and the prayer of the Pope to the end that peace be not compromised and the questions which today exist between various peoples be solved through the peaceful means to which all, after all, declare themselves disposed."

Premier Assures Russia Plan Would Not Lead to Circumstances Leaving Russia in Lurch

Russia Not Asked to Commit Self Before Other Powers Are Actually Involved in War

By J. F. SANDERSON
Canadian Press Staff Writer

London, May 10—(CP Cable)—Prime Minister Chamberlain read a carefully-prepared statement to the House of Commons today in an effort to remove misunderstandings held by the Russians on British proposals for joint action by Great Britain, France and Russia against aggression in Europe.

The Prime Minister made two definite statements on the British proposals:

1. That Russia should intervene only if Great Britain and France actually were at war;

2. The British proposal would not lead to circumstances where Russia would be left in the lurch, unsupported by Britain or France.

The Prime Minister told Hugh Dalton, Labor, he could see no reason for Viscount Halifax, Foreign Secretary, going to Moscow for a "heart to heart talk." It would be better to wait for the Soviet reply to the British proposals.

Crew is Safe As Liner Abandoned

Manila, May 10—(AP)—Forced to abandon ship when it struck a reef and sank in the Sulu Sea, 66 officers and men of the British freighter Lindenbank were safe aboard the United States destroyer Pope today. The 5,057-ton Lindenbank sank in 600 fathoms.

An SOS was sent out shortly before a dozen white officers and 54 Lascars and Chinese seamen took to lifeboats.

The Pope reported: "Picked up all crew members from the S. S. Lindenbank. None missing, none injured."

IMMINENT NAZI PUTSCH RUMORED

2,000 "Tourists" Said to Have Arrived in Free City of Danzig

Free City of Danzig, May 10—(CP-Havas)—Rumors of an imminent Nazi Putsch to annex Danzig to Germany circulated in Polish circles here today.

These quarters said at least 2,000 young "tourists"—the same type of youth who crowded into the Sudetenland before Chancellor Hitler took that territory from Czecho-Slovakia last year—had trickled into the Free City from the Reich in the last few days and were being put up in private homes.

Danzig's Nazi administration abruptly and without explanation cancelled all police leaves. At the same time considerable groups of Danzigers who volunteered for service in the German army were observed returning here on furlough.

Few Hours Remain To Settle Strike In Soft Coal Fields

New York, May 10—(AP)—United States soft coal operators and miner's representatives resume contract negotiations today with only a few hours in which to comply with a firm request by President Roosevelt that they quickly reopen closed mines in 26 states.

A tentative agreement to put 400,000 idle miners back in the pits and thereby resolve a fuel and unemployment crisis, while continuing debate on permanent contract terms, seemed the likeliest reply to the President's demand.

Miners in the eight-state Appalachian region, producing 70 per cent of the industrially vital soft coal, racked their picks April 1 when an old contract expired. Miners in 18 outlying states quit work last week when negotiations for a new agreement were stalled.

Mr. Roosevelt declared public necessity demanded that a method be worked out by tonight for reopening the mines.

Ladies-in-Waiting Think of Birthday

London, May 10—(CP)—Two young mothers across the Atlantic in Canada will be thinking on May 27 of a small boy and a small girl each celebrating a birthday that day.

The mothers are Lady Nunburnholme and Lady Katherine Seymour, attending the Queen as ladies-in-waiting. The children are Charles Wilson, who will be four, and Mary Seymour, who will be seven.

Charles—Hon. Charles Thomas Wilson, to give him his full name—will observe his natal day in the nursery at Arthingworth, Leicestershire. His father, Lord Nunburnholme, will be there, even though his mother won't. And Charles' brother, Ben, aged 11, and sister, Charmiane, aged eight, will share in the fun.

Mary Seymour hopes there'll be a picnic on the Sussex seaside for her. Her mother already has planned a party even though she will be absent herself. Like Charles, Mary has a brother and sister—Cynthia, aged four, and Henry, an infant of two.

TO CHECK ALLEGED DISPOSAL OF GARBAGE IN RIVER AND LOTS

Complaints by the owners of some Front Street business establishments along Front Street whose locations border the east bank of the Moira River against the practice of other store managers and owners in disposing of their trash and garbage by throwing it in the river or vacant areas led this morning to a request by Mayor Bone to police of the local force to make a check-up of river pollution. A request for the city sanitary inspector to make an immediate check of the areas in question was also made by the Mayor.

THREE MONTHS' WORK NEEDED TO PROVIDE SUPPLY OF STONE

BUILDERS LOOK FOR GOOD SEASON SAYS ARCHITECT

If present building plans for the city and district materialize this summer, it should be an ambitious building season, according to J. Arnold Thomson, local architect, who reported today that while new construction was somewhat slow up to the present indications point to a better year for the trades.

ENGLISH SETTER IN DOG POUND

Found wandering at large, a fine bred English Setter pup was taken into custody by Thomas Thorne, city poundkeeper, yesterday. The animal was in need of food, apparently not having eaten in some considerable time. There was no dog tag attached to the animal, prompting Mr. Thorne to believe the canine did not belong in Belleville. It is a well bred and valuable dog, however, and will be destroyed unless some person desires a good English Setter dog.

TRANSPLANTING TOMATO PLANTS UNDER WAY

Transplanting of tomato plants is now well under way in the various greenhouses of the district. Warm suns of the past few days have been conducive to this important work and in view of the fact that approximately fifty per cent of the number of seedlings transplanted last year constitute this year's quota, due to reduced acreage contracted by canning factories, the work is expected to finish the first part of next week.

CANADIAN HOBO "KING" ON WAY EAST TO SEE ROYAL PARTY

Be-medalled with decorations given him by his faithful "subjects" William Pearce, self-styled "King of Canadian Hobos" passed through the city today enroute to Eastern Canada where he expects to see the King and Queen of England during their Canadian tour.

Tattered and torn, his clothing heavy with the tin and other metallic medals, his head held high in regal mien, the "King" paused to snatch a bite at a local restaurant before proceeding on his way. He expected to catch a train for points east, but no royal colors will adorn his "special".

"Sleep in the police station . . . I should say not. If I can't get my rest in the open, or people do not recognize my authority, then I continue on my way," the "King" haughtily stated. "Money, sure I have money, and I spend it, too."

The "King" expects to be in Quebec by the time the Empress of Australia docks there on May 15.

Two-Dollar Bill Performs Useful Duty in Short Time

A two-dollar bill with a tattered corner yesterday demonstrated to three Front Street businessmen the speed with which money travels in Belleville.

The bill originally tendered by a customer in a barber shop reposed in the till for but a few moments when a purchase was made in a nearby store by the barber. Shortly afterward the merchant tendered the bill to another merchant. Needing change for the bill, the second merchant entered the barber shop with the same slightly worn bill. But a few moments later the bill was tendered another customer who is believed to have used it in part payment for an article in a third store a short distance down the street.

Bonus on High Scoring Cheese Will Prove Incentive to Makers

J. L. Irwin, Dairy Grader, Reviews Regulations Respecting Bonus

MR. SHERIFF HEARD

More high scoring cheese than ever before will be made in this and other districts of the province this season, and cheesemakers, milk producers, dairy instructors and graders will all have to work in smooth harmony to assure this better product, J. L. Irwin, Dominion dairy grader for the Central Ontario district told a well attended meeting of the Prince Edward County group of the Central Ontario Cheesemakers' Association at the Y.M.C.A. last evening.

The new bonus this year of one cent on 93 grade cheese, and two cents on 94 score will provide an incentive for the cheesemaker and will do much toward improving the quality of the product, Mr. Irwin was firmly convinced. "There are always certain percentage of undergrade cheese each year, but this season we expect fewer because of the fact that all makers will be striving to earn this bonus.

"The makers and all concerned in the industry are on the spot in no uncertain manner this year, and excuses will not go for poor cheese under the new regulations" Mr. Irwin told the meeting.

Review Regulations

A full review of the new regulations which have been announced in conjunction with the bonus was undertaken by the guest speaker and members of the county organization. Faults of the past year and previous years have provided practical lessons on what to avoid during the coming summer, it was declared, among which faults were cited, foreign matter in cheese, broken rinds and unfinished texture. One of the matters, which has been complained of by buyers has been the placing of undersized or skimpy scaleboards in the tops and bottoms of cheese boxes with the cheese. The use of larger scale boards to overcome this difficulty was strongly urged by the grader.

Again reminding his listeners of the need for extra care this season due to the fact that a bonus will be paid per pound on only the highest scoring cheese, Mr. Irwin pointed out that just one poor vat might be the cause of the maker losing the grade on a whole consignment of cheese.

Geo. Sheriff, Prince Edward County dairy instructor also expressed the belief that more 93 and 94 grade cheese will be made in the province this year due to the new bonus. He urged all makers of his district to make cheese "just as well as you know how", and stated that any maker who could not engage in such competitive production this year should not rely on excuses to try and get by.

The present low price for cheese was no criterion of what might be paid this summer, and though overseas buyers have been holding back on purchases due mainly to the threat of war in Europe, cheese was one of the most important foods, and as soon as conditions settled a little better times in the industry could be looked forward to, it was his belief.

The meeting was presided over by county president Ernest Henderson, who expressed the appreciation of members for the talk given by Mr. Irwin and Mr. Sheriff. An invitation for the local grading staff to give a practical demonstration in Picton in the near future was made by the President.

Patriotic Decorating Becoming General Throughout the City

Stores, restaurants and even private business offices during the past few days have all been included in the general decorating scheme which is now being carried out by residents with the use of flags and bunting in honor of the visit of the King and Queen through here soon. Along Front Street this week hardly a store has not felt the general brightening up with portraits of Their Majesties being the feature of the decoration.

AMATEUR SHOW AT COLLEGIATE MUCH ENJOYED

Barbara Donovan, Jeanne Watson and Mary Lou Pigden Winners

GO TO TORONTO

Beaches Association Provides Splendid Evening of Entertainment

Barbara Donovan and Jeanne Watson, two diminutive misses, and dainty little Mary Lou Pigden, talented daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Henry Pigden, 271 Ann Street, will represent Belleville at the Eastern District Amateur Show semi-finals held in Toronto in the near future by virtue of sparkling performances that won major honors for them last night at the Amateur Show staged at the Belleville Collegiate under the auspices of the Belleville Beaches Association.

The Misses Watson and Donovan were awarded first prize with a clever rendition of Irish dances and vocal duets with both young ladies showing exceptional talent in individual solos. Mary Lou Pigden always a favorite with Belleville audiences took second prize with her clever exhibition of toe-tap dancing. All three young misses will get an all-expense trip to Toronto in the near future to compete for further honors with a free trip to the New York World's Fair and an audition with Major Bowes in the event they are successful.

The entire program of ten complete acts was outstanding in variety and versatility of the performing artists. Five-year-old Ronald Donovan led off the show with a vocal solo followed by the Redner Sisters of Ivanhoe, with guitar accompaniment to vocal duets.

Cartoon Work Applauded

A notable feature of the program was the splendid cartoon work of John Stephenson, local artist, whose caricatures of prominent world, and comic strip figures drew the enthusiastic acclaim of the audience. Mr. Stephenson returned, while the judges were arriving at a decision and showed further evidence of his talents with some clever humorous sketches.

George Shepherd's fine soprano voice was heard in two numbers followed by Jimmy Cowan in vocal and tap-dance performances. Mary and Gerald Bongard, clever brother and sister tap-dance act likewise drew unstinted applause with a sparkling act.

Walter Tayler, husky C. N. R. crew-caller, whose efforts have already won him a spot on the Ken Soble Amateur program next Sunday was called back twice after his outstanding guitar and yodelling act.

His strong voice and colorful strings accompaniment, brought him well deserved acclaim. Last but not least, and one that practically brought down the house was the three-piece "swing band" who dubbed themselves "Benny Goodman's Doubles." As the act progressed the band became "hotter" and the fine performance of the drummer of the trio had the audience applauding long before the act terminated. The boys played several numbers both "sweet and swing" before their listeners were satisfied.

Interspersing the numbers were several selections played by members of the Collegiate Band under the baton of Mr. Ross Hunter.

The judges were the Misses J. T. Priest, and A. Saunders of the Collegiate staff.

INVENTS STORY OF CROW WHICH PAYS FOR EXTRA 'SHOT'

Port Erie, Ont., May 10—(CP)—Johnny Thomas, veteran Niagara River fisherman, today entered his challenge to the Ananias Club for the best story of the year. Thomas said his father owned a small distillery at Chippewa many years ago and that a pet crow developed such a taste for liquor that it received a teaspoonful each meal. One day his father missed some silver money and, believing the crow responsible, cut off its whisky ration, Thomas said. The crow disappeared and later in the day hopped up to the bar, deposited 10 cents and cawed so loudly it was given an extra "shot" of liquor.

GOVERNED BY LAW ALL THROUGH LIFE

Kiwanians Hear Instructive Address on History of English Law

"Man is governed by law from his birth to the grave," said Alderman Ormonde Butler when speaking to members of the Kiwanis Club at their weekly luncheon held at the Queens Hotel on Tuesday. The speaker gave an interesting address on the History of English Law and Kiwanian appreciation was expressed by Charles Tripp after Bruce Lattimer had introduced the speaker of the day. Albert Boynton, immediate past president, occupied the chair as the president "Dick" Flynn had to leave before the meeting was concluded. Ted Hughes led the community singing and Harold Seldon collected the several fines.

At a meeting of the directors at the close of the luncheon it was announced, that the club had voted the sum of $75 to defray the expenses of taking the school children to Kingston on May 21st to see the King and Queen, who will visit that ancient city on that day. The committee in charge is very grateful for this expression of help and goodwill. In order to advance the art of chicken raising among the rural school children, the Kiwanis Club distributed 1,000 week old chicks on Tuesday afternoon under the direction of Herb Muir, chairman of the Agriculture Committee and his members, which include Earl Fry, Len Fozard, Arthur Sills and Charles Tripp. Four schools were selected in Thurlow and Sidney Townships and each of the ten pupils in the schools were given 25 chicks and 25 pounds of starter mash as feed, while the Swift Canadian Company supplied drinking fountains and feed troughs. In the fall each pupil must return 20 pounds of live poultry to the Kiwanis Club, the remaining poultry to remain the possession of the pupil.

Silver Cups Donated

A silver cup is being donated to the school making the best showing with their poultry, while the Kiwanis Club will donate individual cups to the pupils making the best showing in each school. Mr. Linn Fair, agricultural representative for Hastings County is assisting in this work and will instruct the pupils on the proper care of their charges and it is hoped in this way to increase the interest in poultry raising among the youth of this country.

Eddie Logan, speaking for the Chamber of Commerce, urged the members to boost the Paint Up and Clean Up Campaign, that is now being carried on by that body. What form of assistance the club will take will be decided by the directors in the near future.

Mr. Butler showed in detail how a person born into this world is governed by law until his death and how certain courts and statutes came into being. "The first English court was held when judges went about the country and stopping where jails were held hearings and general jail delivery and from this procedure the present Supreme Court sprung", said the speaker. "Practically all our law was founded on decrees issued at the time of William the Conqueror, who held the first King's Court. At that time the courts were known as Trials of Ordeals and the accused were judged by Fire, Water or Morsel." He dealt with the law of distress and the feudal system of land tenure, showing that a man although he holds a deed to a property, in law is not the sole owner as all land is owned by the King. The speaker showed how the Statute law came into effect being an offshoot of the Common Law, which was found to be too harsh in some instances. Mr. Butler also discussed the Statute of Limitations and how these affected debt. The address was most instructive and interesting.

PICKEREL FISHING OPENS ON MAY 16

Department of Game and Fisheries Has "No Intention to Advance Date"

Angling for pike and pickerel in this area will commence on May 16th according to an announcement made by Herb McCabe, game warden for this district through the Department of Game and Fisheries for Ontario. It was thought that the department would open the season on May 13th in order that anglers could enjoy a week-end at their favorite sport but the announcement of today will bring disappointment to many. The communication from the Department stated that pickerel and pike fishing would commence on May 16th and there was "no intention to advance that date". When the season opens on Tuesday next anglers can fish for pike and pickerel from a boat or a dam but cannot troll for these fish until July 1st.

SCHOOL CHILDREN WILL BEAR TAGS ON KINGSTON TRIP

Word 'Belleville' to be Printed on the Identifying Markers

SENIORS AS MONITORS

One thousand school children of Belleville expected to take part in the rail excursion from Belleville to Kingston on the morning of May 21st will be tagged with an identifying cardboard marker with name and the word "Belleville" distinctly imprinted, it was decided at a special meeting of the school children's excursion committee held in the Chamber of Commerce rooms yesterday afternoon.

Information received from the Stadium management at Kingston to the effect that only one supervisor may be appointed for each fifty children, to care for the children in the George Richardson Memorial Stadium during the ceremonies there in the morning led to the adoption of the suggestion that senior school children of the public schools act as monitors to assist the supervisors during the excursion. One monitor will be in charge of each ten or twelve children, it was suggested.

Reports from the various school principals revealed that up to the present a total of 965 children had so far been registered for the trip. Queen Alexandra School quota was reported at 220; Queen Mary at 120; King George at 200; Queen Victoria at 110, and St. Michael's Academy at 260. In addition 45 children from the Prince of Wales School of Thurlow, and 25 from the Foxboro School are expected to accompany the local pupils. There will be a further total of 150 pupils from the Collegiate and Vocational School, it was reported by Principal P. C. MacLaurin.

Efforts are being made by the committee to equip each child with a cardboard lunch box of standard size with the name "Belleville" printed clearly on the box, and a string or handle with which to carry it. The suggestion that arm bands be given to each supervisor and monitor for identification is also being entertained.

School chairmen on this special committee have been named as follows: Queen Mary—Mrs. W. N. Ponton; Queen Victoria—Col E. A. Geen; Queen Alexandra — Geo. Finch; King George—Jack Deacon; St. Michael's—Howard LaPalm; Prince of Wales School—Ken Bird.

The contingent of 1,000 children from Belleville will be just part of the total of 10,500 children and adults expected to be accommodated in the Stadium at Kingston during the morning of the 21st, according to word received locally from the Kingston committee.

Requests for accommodation have been made up as follows:—Kingston public schools —1,600; Kingston separate schools— 700; Smiths Falls —1,200; Belleville —1,000; Perth—1,000; Elgin, Westport and North and South Crosby —700; Napanee—850; Frontenac—1,150; Picton—650; Gananoque —500; Tweed—300; Sharbot Lake —100; Campbellford—350; press representatives—30; Queen's University—56; city's school board—60; sundry—300.

Full arrangements have been made for sanitary facilities for the children and no detail respecting their comfort and safety has been overlooked, it has been assured by the Kingston committee.

Whether the Belleville excursion train may be placed on the Pinnacle Street spur line near the Market Square has not been announced by the local office as yet.

MRS. R. MORDEN TO HEAD CLUB

Queen Alexandra Home and School Club Hold Annual Meeting

The May meeting of the Queen Alexandra Home and School Club was held at three o'clock on Tuesday at the school with the president Mrs. W. H. Finkle presiding. The meeting opened with "O Canada". The secretary's report was read by Mrs. Morden in the absence of Mrs. Hibbard. She also gave a report on the meetings held during the past year. Mrs. Bevis read the treasurer's report.

At this time Mrs. Finkle presented to the school on behalf of the club a motion picture screen which has long been needed. Mr. Anderson, principal, expressed sincere appreciation to the club on behalf of students and staff.

Play is Given

A three act play "Hansel and Gretel" was put on by Miss Young's class under the direction of Miss Lockhart. The familiar story had a new charm for the audience as it was presented by the talented group of children. The scene in the woods, of the realistic gingerbread house, was very realistic and interesting, the backgrounds adding to the appeal of the story.

John Merklinger took the part of Hansel, and the other leading characters were Shirley Coulter as Gretel; Ruth Blatherwick the mother; Donald Bevis, the father; Marjorie Williams, the witch; Victoria Ketcheson, the fairy. These were assisted by other children in roles of playmates, etc.

Between acts the Senior Choir under the direction of Mr. G. Maybee sang patriotic airs in splendid style. The children were highly praised for the afternoon's program.

Officers Elected

Election of officers for 1939-40 followed and were installed by Mr. Anderson as follows: Honorary President: Mrs. E. R. Logie; President, Mrs. Ralph Morden; First Vice-President, Mrs. S. Hagerman; 2nd. Vice President, Mrs. C. A. Cameron; Recording Secretary, Mrs. H. Seldon; Corresponding Secretary, Mrs. G. Wishart; Press Secretary, Mrs. R. S. Hamilton; Treasurer, Mrs. B. Bevis; Pianist, Mrs. Bassingthwaite; Social Committee, Mrs. J. A. Barclay, Mrs. Muir, Mrs. Meyers, Mrs. Blatherwick, Mrs. Neal; Finance Committee, Mrs. A. H. Ketcheson, chairman; Staff Representative, Miss Lockhart; Program Committee, Mrs. Finkle, Mrs. Rollins, Mrs. Trusdale, Mrs. Zeron, Mr. Anderson.

Lighting Criticised

Mrs. Bews called to the attention of the club and felt that citizens generally should know that the lighting in the school was most inefficient. On the dull side, measurements had shown that there was only 1.82 ft. candlepower where 20 is needed.

The prize for attendance was won by Miss Young's class. After the singing of "God Save the King", refreshments were served.

Mothers of C. G. I. T. Honored By Holloway St. Church Group

Banquet Held and Mrs. Morrison of Tweed is Special Speaker

TOASTS PROPOSED

The attractive Sunday School Hall of Holloway Street United Church was the scene of a happy gathering last evening at six o'clock when mothers, daughters, guests and leaders numbering 73 met for a banquet in honor of the mothers of C.G.I.T. The arrangement and work of the banquet were carried through by the girls and the leaders who are Mrs. Homer Townsend, Mrs. Marie Dracup, Miss Marjorie Hitchon and Mrs. R. E. Newman, supervisor. The excellent menu was prepared and served by the Woman's Association of the church.

The mothers were received in the church auditorium. Those on the reception committee were: Misses Ruth Oliphant, Marion Kilbanks, Doreen Rose, Misses Ileen Reid and Dorothy Craighead taking charge of the wraps.

The idea of spring and the National colors were very effectively carried out in the decorations. Ferns and cages of birds presented a pleasing sight as well as creating a cheery atmosphere. The tables were most attractive. Spring flowers centred the head table while red roses in bud vases with the C.G.I.T. monogram and dainty favors, basket of confectionery wrapped in red cellophane and tied with a place card were at each mother's and guest's place. The place cards for both mothers and girls were in blue bird design.

Opened With Sing Song.

The program opened with a sing song led by Miss Marjorie Hitchon with Mrs. E. Hubbs at the piano after which the girls repeated the C.G.I.T. purpose.

Miss Jean Sherry was toast mistress and wecomed the mothers and guests. Miss Shirley Oliphant proposed the toast to the Royal Family and the Empire. This was responded to by all singing "God Save the King". The toast to the mothers was proposed by Miss Roslyn Robertson and responded to by Mrs. E. Liddle. The toast to daughters was proposed by Mrs. E. Kilbank, responded to by Miss Gwen Burley. Miss Helen Brown proposed a toast to the church. This was responded to by Mr. Arnold Campbell, superintendent of the Sunday School. The girls and mothers in these toasts showed a lot of ideas that will help in a better understanding of the joys and problems of the home. The mothers voiced their appreciation to the leaders for their untiring efforts to the interests of their girls.

Ideal Friendship.

The guest speaker, Mrs. (Rev.) Lloyd Morrison, Tweed, was introduced by Mrs. R. E. Newman. Mrs. Morrison chose as a topic for her address, "Ideal Friendship". She has been actively engaged in C.G.I.T. and oYung People's work so had no difficulty in at once gripping the attention of both mothers and girls. This inspiring address, so full of understanding, information and advice, will linger long in the minds of those who were privileged to hear her.

Miss June Fitzgibbons expressed the appreciation of the leaders and girls to Mrs. Morrison, stating the address was a great challenge to them and would help them in choosing friends and forming friendship. In closing her remarks, she presented Mrs. Morrison with a beautiful bouquet of spring flowers as a tangible expression of appreciation. This motion was seconded by Miss Beverly Goodfellow and enthusiastically endorsed by all present. Mrs. R. E. Newman expressed appreciation to the Woman's Association for the delicious menu, so splendidly served, that had added much to the success of the banquet.

Mrs. Arthur Sills, president of the Woman's Association, made a fitting reply. Taps brought this delightful evening to a close.

THE DAILY ONTARIO INTELLIGENCER is published every afternoon (Sunday and holidays excepted) at The Ontario Intelligencer Building, Front Street, Belleville.

ROYAL VISITORS DRAW NEARER

Steadily the King's and the Queen's ship is making its royal passage over the Atlantic. Alreacy the vessel is over four days on her way and is about one half the way across. Meanwhile in the Dominion the last preparations are being made for the reception of Their Majesties. On Saturday the Empress of Australia will arrive in Canadian waters. On Sunday the royal visitors will be coming up the St. Lawrence and on Monday morning the King and Queen and the royal party will land on Canadian soil. On the afternoon of that day His Majesty will speak at the federal Government luncheon at Quebec. From that time forward the royal guests will be feted everywhere across Canada.

Canada is fortunate in its approaches east and west which are majestic and marked by grandeur of scenery. As Their Majesties come from the east they will find themselves in the older part of Canada and their emotions will be stirred with the thoughts of what older Canada did to build up this wide Dominion. Something of the solidarity of the people will be indicated in what they see as the vessel moves up the great river and they disembark at Quebec, which lives in the hearts of all Canadians. When they will have crossed Canada and proceed to travel by ship to Victoria, they will catch another majestic view of Canada as nature has built her on the west coast. Between these coasts they will find endless subjects of interest, history, romance, and an active loyal people everywhere, a typical New World nation.

CASH VALUE IN GOOD MANNERS

Think about politeness in terms of sentiment if you want to, but cold facts show that courtesy pays well in terms of hard cash. This is the verdict of Charles B. Hathway, writing in the current Rotarian Magazine. He cites examples of substantial fortunes resulting directly from thoughtfulness and good manners.

Clement George McCullagh, now one of the dominant public figures in Canada, impressed fabulously rich Bill Wright by his courtesy when trying to sell him some securities. Other salesmen had shown little respect for his privacy and feelings, so, attracted first by a single courteous act, eventually the two formed a history-making partnership, says the article.

Or consider the girl working in the safety-deposit department of a Detroit bank. A certain elderly gentleman came to the vault only three times a year to be served by the girl, yet when he died he left her $5,000 in recognition of her "unfailing courtesy."

Mr. Hathaway points to the examples of John Wanamaker and Marshall Field, the great merchants. It was the former who insisted that "the customer is always right," and in applying the principle to his stores made himself wealthy. Mr. Field, at the height of his success, would take time to tour his store, wait on customers, and hear their complaints. He profited greatly by applying courtesy to merchandising.

While commercialized manners are desirable, it is even more heartening to meet a person who is mannerly, not because he anticipates a profit from his acts, but just because he is mannerly. Outstanding in this way is the great Paderewski As one of the world's greatest musicians, he could indulge in any rudeness and have it charged off to temperament "But," the author points out, "his simple kindliness-manners, I call it—made him a national idol."

One corporation has a person who first interviews applicants for positions and reports on manners only. If one fails to pass the courtesy test, no amount of ability will earn him a place with the firm.

"I believe we have established the point:" Mr. Hathaway concludes, "we need not be sanctimonious when we talk about manners, or approach the subject as a semireligious, nonprofit proposition; we can admit that it is a good thing because it has cash value."

THE POPE'S PEACE PROPOSAL

The world will hope that some result will develop out of the proposal of Pope Pius XII for a meeting of great powers to consider a better understanding and to preserve peace. Everyone knows the problem is a great one, which has been allowed to develop for so many years and because there are so many factors and divergencies at work.

It would be a happy world if some means can be found to bring some agreement about the conference table which will remove any menace of impending war. Through fear that there might be a conflict much of the joy of life is passing, it is being stifled and smothered. All nations should see that the ways of peace are the natural ways, and that warfare is the enemy of mankind. However "realists" may argue that idealists are unpractical, he fact remains that the peoples yearn for peace with protection of their liberties and civilization.

MAY DAWNING

Through a golden sheen come spinning
Tender little things;
Purple lilacs in a churchyard,
Grace of swallows' wings.
From the willow, grey, are springing
Pussy-willows, fey;
Japonicas, tulips, bringing Fragrant breath of May.
Every branch and spray is bending
With its feathered choir;
Cardinals' sweet song ascending,—
Near, a white birch lyre!
And the oriole, entrancing,
High on flame-gold wing,
Sings his song of Spring romancing,
Till the echoes ring.

THE MALE OF THE SPECIES HAS TO TAKE A JOKE OCCASIONALLY, just to sort of even up on bridge and cold victuals stories about the better halves. Here's one to please the afternoon bridge clubs:

Mr. Goodfellow was a member of several clubs, a director of one or two companies, and generally a popular fellow. He had dined out night after night and had even spent week-ends with friends and business acquaintances. His wife and family had seen precious little of him.

What was their surprise when one evening he arrived home in time to join them at the evening meal. Mrs. Goodfellow, smiling brightly, arose from her seat at the table.

"Children," she said, "we have with us tonight a guest of whom you have all heard, even if you haven't met him often lately. He is a man who has a reputation for conviviality and cheer in every club and restaurant in the city.

"Tonight we are to have the honor of being numbered among the admirers of his entertaining and brilliant qualities. Children, it is with the greatest of pleasure that I present to you—your father."

ACTING AS A REGENCY FOR THE KING in his absence will be a Council of State composed of those adults next in line of succession for the Throne. Under the Regency Act of 1937 these would be the Dukes of Kent and Gloucester, the King's brothers; Princess Mary, the Princess Royal, sister of the King; and Princess Arthur of Connaught, granddaughter of King Edward VII, a cousin of George VI. Queen Elizabeth will also nominally be a member of the Council, according to the Regency Act, even though, as in this case, she is absent from England with the King.

TWO EMINENT MEDICAL PROFESSORS OF COLUMBIA COLLEGE, told members of the American Physiological Society that after making extensive experiments they found, to their surprise, "no difference in the degree of vasoconstriction between ten deep breaths of air and the inhalation of cigaret smoke." The deciding experiment consisted of seventeen men given standard and denicotinized cigarettes to smoke. Vasoconstriction (contraction of blood vessels) was the same in the case of either type. The scientists then asked the subjects to take ten deep breaths, when as stated above, they found no difference between deep breaths of air and the inhalations of cigaret smoke. Hence cigaret smokers can take several deep breaths again and keep smoking until some other professor comes along and tells how much harm comes from excessive cigaret smoking.

WHEN WE WERE YOUNG PRELIMINARIES FOR A FISTICUFF FIGHT included the eggers on placing a chip on the shoulder of one of the chaps in the argument—daring the other to knock it off. If that did not work a line was drawn, generally with a bare toe, daring the other to cross that line—you just dassent—if he did the fight was on. All of which proved that neither party wanted to fight very badly. All of which is recalled by the report that Mayor Jamieson Bone has been receiving threatening letters, anonymous of course, from brave souls whose courage is enormous if in hiding. Those kind of barking dogs seldom bite—they would be scared to death to come out in the open.

Mr. George F. Stewart occupied the chair and addresses were made by Miss S. Templeton, Prof. E. R. Doxsee, Mr. William Johnson, Mr. J. Arthur Marsh, and Mr. F. E. O'Flynn. An appreciative address was read to Mrs. Conger and there was a fine musical programme after which refreshments were served.

A correspondent asks us: "How did Pinnacle Street get its name?" We have always understood that the name was derived from the fact that in the early days, the hill upon which Bellevue Terrace now stands extended across the street, being the "pinnacle" of the thoroughfare. However, the correspondent says that its claimed that the name came from Pinnacle Street Church. Perhaps some of our oldest inhabitants can enlighten us on this matter.

Yesterday afternoon the fine barns and outbuildings belonging to Col. Ponton, deservedly the pride of their owner were completely destroyed by fire. A small blaze which had been kindled for the purpose of burning worms which were attacking fruit trees, in some way spread to the drive house and thence with incredible rapidity to the barns and sheds and residence. The boys at the D. & D. Institute observed the fire and hastened to the rescue with their hose and did yeoman service. To their efforts, in no small degree, is due the salvation of the residence. The fire brigade from Belleville was on the scene a little later and soon had two streams playing upon the flames. In spite of all their efforts, however, none of the buildings were saved. In the large newly erected barn two calves and a number of fowl were cremated, also a number of farming implements. The residence was damaged considerably by water.

The boys in the Harold community have formed a football club and are now ready to receive challenges. Following are the officers: Captain, H. R. Nugent; Secretary, C. G. Bailey; Treasurer; N. A. Heath; Correspondent, W. H. Heath; Executive Committee, C. F. Lloyd, W. F. Elliott and J. C. Collins.

New Method of Treating Dry Catarrh and Deafness

One of the meanest ailments with which mankind is afflicted is ozaena or the dry form of catarrh. In addition to the catarrhal symptoms, there is a most offensive odor which makes it almost impossible for these patients to mix with other people.

In 1937, Drs. Hector Mortimer, R. Percy Wright and J. B. Collip in an investigation of this ailment, reported their findings in the Canadian Medical Association Journal. They were able to show that this ailment was due to an inherited consitution just as in the case of sufferers with hay fever and some other ailments. That there is a relation between the genital or sex organs and the nose has been known for years and by the use of hormones (estrogen) these research physicians were able to help a number of these ozaena patients by putting this substance up the nose.

*As catarrh of the nose and throat is believed to be the commonest cause of deafness, the above named research physicians and Dr. D. L. Thomson, now report in the Canadian Medical Association Journal the successful treatment of a number of cases of constitutional deafness by the application of these sex hormone substances up the nose.

"The series investigated consists of 153 patients of whom 94 are females and 59 males. The average age of the females is 37 years, the youngest 11 years of age and the oldest 74 in the males, average age is 38, youngest 9 and oldest 76." It was found that not only may the two conditions—ozaena and deafness—be present in the same individual, but in one generation of the family ozaena may be found in certain members whilst others have defective hearing.

The two points we get from this research work are (a) that there seems to be a constitutional condition present that makes these individuals likely to have ozaena or deafness or both, and (b) this very fact makes it possible for the same method of treatment—estrogen—applied to the lining of the nose to greatly help both conditions.

Notwithstanding these findings, these research workers state that they do not suggest that constitutional deafness is due to any lack of gland substance in the individual.

It should be remembered also that this treatment was used in the catarrhal form of deafness only.

National Hospital Day Will Be Held On May 12

By Margaret Rhynas, President Women's Hospital Aids Association, Province of Ontario.

This day is commemorated by hospital-minded persons to honor the birthday of Florence Nightingale, Patron Saint of Nursing, who exerted the first great world-influence in hospital care for the sick and injured, and was adviser to the world in nursing. Her nurses went to the ends of the earth to establish the principles she had laid down, consequently it is fitting that this day is set apart to give opportunity to the community to know its hospital.

Mr. and Mrs. Citizen! boys and girls, will you join on this day in paying tribute to hospital service in your community—become better acquainted with its needs and its deeds.

Has it ever occurred to you that the doors of the hospital are never closed—the service and supply never cease—every unit working uninterruptedly so as to give unbroken care and treatment to those who are within its walls? The admitting service, the telephone service, laboratory, X-ray, diet, surgical, medical—not to say of the understanding and humanitarian attention given by the entire staff at all times.

Illness and accident do not choose daylight hours in which to strike.

Hence the hospital stands ready to have emergency service available to meet every need. Is it any wonder this Great Heart, Your Hospital should have the understanding and complete loyalty of every citizen, when so great and needful a service is given. Visualize your community without hospital service. We cannot count our hospitals in terms of material expenditures, but in health, preservation and the saving of human lives.

The foregoing is merely touching the hem of this sacred avenue of His great gift to mankind—for has not every field of science laid manifold gifts upon its altar.

There is an invincible hospital army ever spending itself to serve humanity day and night. We as lay people, strive to do our part as volunteer workers to make it easier for hospital superintendent and hospital board to run hospitals. It is the desire of every hospital auxiliary member to place a stepping-stone instead of a stumbling block to advance hospitalization in the community.

God bless your hospital, the doctors and the nurses too, who stand on guard, their faithful watches keeping, the long nights through. It matters not if you are prince or pauper, God stands beside you in the hours of pain; an army of white nurses do His bidding and you are helped to restore your health again.

SOUVENIR FIEND

The disappearance of an electric razor and other articles intended for the King's use from the railway yard at Montreal indicates some smart work by soufvenir-hunters who could not wait until the razor had shaved the Royal chin before making off with it.

King Edward VII, during his visit to Canada and the United States in 1860 as Prince of Wales, found the craze for souvenirs already well developed. His cabin on board H.M.S. Hero was invaded by visitors at various points on the tour and thoroughly ransacked for any objects which might be displayed to future generations.

Besides taking away items of furniture and portable fittings, the collectors helped themselves to handfuls of feathers from his bed—using scissors with reckless freedom—and tore pieces out of the curtains. By the time successive bands of the species had done their worst the Royal cabin had to be refurnished. —Manchester Guardian.

COST OF ROMANCE

Maybe the Puritan tradition is to blame; and maybe the climate. Or perhaps it has something to do with the stock market. At any rate, whatever the cause, officialdom in Canada has never seen fit to encourage the gentle pursuits of love.

The cost of marriage licenses; the construction of park benches; the pegged price of ice cream sodas; the hawk-eyed ushers in movie houses; the stern laws against mixed beer-drinking, all testify to an official hatred and mistrust of Amour. Officials, one begins to believe, are not born but sprout, like dragon's teeth, from the earth.

It is popularly known to the masses of the people that one may secure acquittal on French soil, if romance is given as the motive; Italy and Germany encourage love and motherhood with government grants (one German town is offering grants to spinsters who decide to add to the population); Russia bids her millions multiply—or else.

Even Venezuela now steps from an obscure place in the travelogues and the postage stamp albums and announces that love letters may be sent through the mails at half rate, if suitably dressed in pink envelopes.

How Anthony Comstock would writhe in his grave if such a measure were placed before Washington or Ottawa! Club women would ululate; senators bumble; thin, wailing cries would emanate from the whole massed army of respectability.

We Canadians live in a fine world of our own; its natural resources are simply marvellous; its politicians are beyond reproaches, human or divine—but it is not yet a world fit for Eros to live in.—Calgary Herald.

AMERICAN AMBASSADOR

I had a short, friendly talk with Mr. Kennedy (U.S. Ambassador to Britain), who recently returned from Rome. It is interesting to see the change in him engendered by practical experience. When I had the pleasure of meeting the new ambassador from America a few days after he had taken up his appointment in this country he was absolutely determined on his course. "I am not a trained diplomat and I don't intend to become one," he said. "I am a businessman and will always remain one. The only thing that interests me is trade and I am here to try and help trade between Britain and America." The smile on his face did not lessen the determined nature of his words.

To-day Mr. Joseph Kennedy is not only an able diplomat but absolutely gripped by the moves and counter-moves in the grim chess game of world events. He still feels strongly and refuses to hide his feelings. He is still forthright and despises the technique of inscrutability so beloved of the old diplomatic school. Yet he is measuring up as one of the great American ambassadors to the Court of St. James. Incidentally, he and Lord Halifax are excellent friends and admirers of each other. "That man has a glorious sense of humour." Mr. Kennedy confided to me. This is so important that I feel no hesitation in revealing it to the outer world. As long as the foreign secretary can still find some humour in things there is hope for the world.—Atticus in Financial Post.

"OAK-APPLE DAY"

The most important day in the life of the Royal Hospital at Chelsea for old and disabled soldiers is May 29, or Oak-Aopple Day. This day commemorates both the birth of the founder, Charles II, and his triumphant entry into London after the interregnum of the Commonwealth. After the defeat of the Royalist cause Charles escaped capture by hiding in an oak-tree, and with the restoration of the monarchy a sprig of oak leaves became a popular symbol of loyalty.

On this day Charles' statue in the Centre Court is hidden with oak branches, and the pensioners, having exchanged their winter blue coats for their bright scarlet summer ones, parade past it, afterwards dining off double rations and plum puddings which too, are decorated with oak leaves.—Coming Events in Britain.

THE FLATTERER

He told her that he had never imagined that any girl could be as lovely as she was.

That she had the most beautiful nature of anybody he had ever known.

That she was the most intelligent and cultured girl he had ever met.

That her eyes were like twin lagoons of purest azure blue.

That her figure was perfection itself.

That her hair was shimmering gold.

And that he never ceased to marvel at the fact that she was his.

So she decided that if she was all he said she was, then she could do a good deal better for herself.

So she gave the little pipsqueak his ring back.—South Wales Echo.

Annual Commencement Exercises Held by Tweed High School

Tweed.—The annual Commencement Exercises were held at the local High School on Friday evening. There was a good attendance of parents and friends of those who were being presented with medals and scholarships emblematic of their scholastic attainments and of prizes for their successes on Field Day.

An excellent programme was give consisting of physical training exercises by a number of students trained by Miss Jordan, and musical numbers by the High School Orchestra and Choir who had been trained by Mr. Reg. Wilson. All these numbers were greatly enjoyed.

Mr. S. R. Curry, chairman of the Board, welcomed the friends and regretted the limited accommodations provided by the school for an affair of this kind. He expressed the hope that before another Commencement is held provision will be made for the teaching of Home Economics and Manual Training with a gymnasium which may be used as an Assembly Hall.

Rev. H. L. Morrison, B. A., pastor of Tweed United Church, gave an excellent address in which he urged upon the students the desirability of taking as their objective not the beating of someone else's mark in their studies but the beating of their own mark. Mr. Morrison told a story of the famous golfer, Bobbie Jones, who followed the plan of trying to beat himself rather than his opponent, thus achieving such phenomenal success.

Everyone cannot lead the class but the attempt to do so may lead to jealousy and unhealthy rivalry, but if one tries only to beat one's self, victory will be the result. At the end of the year the student will be stronger and better mentally even if he does not lead the class.

Mr. Morrison also urged the students not to be disappointed if things do not come too easily, or to be over-elated if they do. They must learn the lesson that one cannot get through life on his wits but must settle down to hard, earnest work to do something worthwhile in the world.

Mr. T. N. Beatty brought a brief report of the proceedings of the Convention of High School Boards held in Toronto, to which he and Mr. Paul Rashotte had been sent as delegates. He advised students to have nothing to do with any correspondence course without first consulting the Department of Education. He cited the case of a Tweed boy who had spent $500 for a short course which was absolutely useless to him.

Rev. A. E. Pepper, rector of St. James' Anglican Church, also addressed the student body and gave them some very fine and timely advice. "Above all else," he said, "try to know yourself, your own capacities, potentialities and powers. Pupils must co-operate with the teacher if they are to get the most out of their course and be ready to go out into life to make their contributions."

The following was the complete programme:

1. Instrumental Number—The Tempest—School Orchestra.

The annual Bird Box Contest sponsored by Tweed Horticultural Society brought an excellent display of nesting boxes. The Society is to be congratulated on this enterprise which is but one of its numerous and worthwhile activities. In former years the bird boxes have been constructed almost exclusively by the boys but this year two enterprising young girls giving evidence of considerable manual skill captured first and second prizes for robin shelters. The Horticultural Society and the exhibitors are alike greatly indebted to those public-spirited merchants and other citizens whose generous donations made it possible to award substantial cash prizes.

The following is the list of prize-winners:

Class A—Open to Grades 7 and 8.

Martin Box—1. Charles McCaw; 2. Glenn Connor.

Wren House—1. Glenn Connor; 28. Archie Sinclair; 3. Charles McCaw; 4. George Barry; 5. Alton Robinson.

Robin Shelter—1. Glenn Connor; 2. Alton Robinson; 3. Charles McCaw; 4. Milton Elliott; 5. Raymond Holmes.

Blue Bird or Tree Swallow Box—1. Glenn Connor; 2. Alton Robinson; 3. Edwin Badgley; 4. Charles McCaw; 5. Richard Jones.

Class B—Open to Lower Grades.

Martin Box—No entries.

Wren House—1. Allan Shewring; 2. Maurice Leal; 3. Donald Woodcock; 4. Sam Fisher; 5. George Hall.

Robin Shelter—1. Elda Masters; 2. June Whitmore; 3. Wilber Pipe; 4. Walter Courtney; 5. Billie Beatty.

Bluebird or Tree Swallow Box—1. Vernon Pattison; 2. Milton McTaggart.

A total of fifty boxes was on exhibit, many of which showed considerable originality of design and excellence of mechanical skill in their construction.

Some hardy young swimmers braved the chill waters of Stoco Lake on Saturday afternoon to enjoy (?) the first dip of the season. This date is about ten days later than the record of April 27th established last year.

The local elementary schools observed Arbour Day on Friday, May 5th, when the grounds were given their annual spring cleaning. They now present an attractive appearance and await only warmer weather to bring the plants and shrubs into bloom.

The Wednesday half-holiday was observed last week. It will continue through the month of September. At the same time the local merchants resumed the practice of re-opening their stores on Tuesday and Thursday evenings, a practice which had been discontinued during the winter months.

The final meeting of the Young People's Union of the United Church was held on Monday evening with a good attendance. The Young People took advantage of the occasion to make a presentation of a leather diary to Miss Bessie Gordon who has been selected as one of the eight delegates from the United Church in Canada to attend the World Youth Conference in Amsterdam, Holland, this summer.

The following address was read by Miss Goldie Godfrey and Miss Gertrude Moffat made the presentation:

Dear Bessie,—

While we are gathered here for one purpose, namely, our last meeting together for a short while, we felt that we could not let the opportunity pass without showing in some tangible way, our appreciation of the honor that has come to our Society in having one of its members chosen as a delegate to the World Youth Conference in Amsterdam.

We, as a group, are very proud that the honor was given you, Bessie, for we feel that you are thoroughly capable of ably fulfilling those requirements. We realize that along with the pleasure that is assured, a great deal of work is involved which will require much initiative, time and meditation. We wish you every success in anything you may undertake.

As a small token of our good will and esteem, we ask you to accept this gift, not for its intrinsic value, but for the thought and spirit with which it is given. Each day, on your voyage, whenever you may use this gift, think of our Young People's Union back home and remember that our best wishes are with you.

June Brown, President.
Grace Reeves, Secretary.

BROCKVILLE IS DISAPPOINTED

Cancellation of Stop of Royal Train is Announced Today

Brockville, Ont., May 9—(CP)—Officials and citizens here expressed marked disappointment today over the cancellation of the scheduled royal visit on the night of May 20. Mayor C. G. Macodrum went to Ottawa today to interview officials in regard to the change

It had been planned to mass the 2,000 school children of Brockville at the Union Station to extend a welcome to Their Majesties as the royal train proceeds from Ottawa to Kingston. The arrangements called for a stop of 10 minutes here and plans for the program were practically complete.

An illuminated address was to have been presented to the King, while a bouquet was to have been offered Queen Elizabeth on behalf of the citizens.

It was expected Mayor Macodrum, his mother, Mrs. D. Macodrum, Hon. H. A. Stewart, K.C., M.P., and Mrs. Stewart; W. B. Reynolds, M.P.P. and Mrs. Reynolds; Judge M. B. Tudhope and Miss Tudhope; Alderman N. S. Cuthbertson and Mrs. Cuthbertson; Alderman L. C. Dunn and Mrs. Dunn and possibly Rt. Hon. Senator George J. Graham and Mrs. Graham and Hon. A. C. and Mrs. Hardy would be presented to Their Majesties here. It had not been officially learned whether Senators Graham and Hardy, with Mrs. Graham and Mrs. Hardy, would be presented in Ottawa or Brockville when cancellation of the proposed royal visit to Brockville was announced.

Ottawa, May 9 — (CP) —Planned stops by the King and Queen at Brockville and Cornwall, Ont., have been cancelled to give Their Majesties more opportunity for rest, Dr. H. L. Keeneyside, Secretary of the inter-departmental committee on the royal visit announced today.

SAYS ITALY WILL PROVE STRENGTH

Mussolini Declares Decision of Hearts Greater Than Armaments

Rome, May 9.—(AP)—Speaking in connection with an Army Day parade, Premier Mussolini declared today that Italy would prove the strength of her decisions "when the hour comes".

"The force of our arms is great but still greater is the decision of our hearts and when the hour comes we shall prove it," the Premier told cheering troops and civilians.

He spoke briefly from the balcony of Palazzo Venezia after a military parade that gave German army leaders, headed by Colonel-General Walther von Branchitsch, a further opportunity to appraise the Fascist war machine which Mussolini has agreed to harness to Germany in a military alliance.

Medals for Service

Just before the military spectacle rolled down via Del Impero, General Alberto Pariani, Army Chief of Staff, broadcast "an announcement of the award of 18 gold medals and a large number of silver medals to Italian officers and men who served in Spain.

Diplomats watched the parade from stands near the point where King Victor Emmanuel and Mussolini reviewed the troops.

Troops chosen for the display were from the Rome Garrison, with some other units. In all they numbered 20,000 men and 1,200 officers. Equipment included 300 cannon, 700 machine guns, 300 tanks, 1,100 motor vehicles, and 2,300 horses and mules.

In Milan, Premier Mussolini's newspaper Il Popolo D'Italia quoted the German Foreign Minister, Joachim von Ribbentrop, as saying he was convinced the agreement converting the Rome-Berlin axis into a formal military alliance furnished the best possible answer to those "degenerate democrats who are always afraid of being attacked and see an aggressor in everyone."

Sweet Voice is Invitation to Romance

By HELEN FOLLETT

NOTHING invites romance as quickly as a sweet, compelling voice. Cupid fights shy of the girl whose voice is rasping, who shouts when she talks, who whines or drones. It is surprising, with all the expensive beautifying going on, that women don't pay more attention to the sounds that emerge from their pretty, tinted lips.

Poise and serenity of soul have much to do with the modulated voice of good tonal qualities. The high-strung, nervous woman acquires strained, tightened vocal chords that do not function normally. She places the voice too high or uses too much volume. The result is torture to the human sound receivers.

Note how you space your words.

Don't rush them along pellmell as if you were afraid somebody might interrupt you, get the floor. Note the tone levels, have regard for clear enunciation. Mumblers are a trial, so are those individuals who stick to one key, whose speech has no delightful variations.

Voices reflect character in a way. Note the plaintive voice of the whiner, the loud voice of the stern, bossy woman, the strupy tones of the flattering hypocrite.

If you fancy your voice lacks quality of charm, a vocal instructor can teach you how to improve it.

Campers of Past Year Renew Friendships

Lusty voices rang out at the Y.M.C.A. last evening as the campers of past years at the Belleville Boys' Camp, Moira Lake, gathered to renew frinedships and learn of the plans and improvements for the 1939 camp.

A complete and varied program arranged by Secretary Joe Shortt, included activities on the gym floor, a plunge in the cooling waters of the pool culminated by a delightful supper in the auditorium, which was prepared by the Women's Auxiliary of the "Y".

Seated at the head table were H. W. Ackerman, of the Camp Committee, N. A. Beach, of Albert College, George Ferguson, of the Belleville Collegiate and Mr. Ed. Shortt of Peterboro, all of whom spoke. A suitable program of entertainment included Mrs. Grace Leeman, plainst, Harold Williamson, baritone, William Connor, piano and Ed Shortt, monologue. Mr. J. E. Shortt led the community singing.

Additional equipment and adult leaders have been obtained for this year's Belleville Boys' Camp, which opens the first two weeks in July at Moira Lake. The camp is for boys 10 to 15 years of age who reside within the Belleville district and is under the control of a city wide representative committee of local citizens and for the welfare of Belleville kiddies.

Advice to the Lovelorn

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

Famous Authority on Problems of Love and Marriage.

The Marks of a Gold-Digger

Dear Miss Fairfax—

For three years I went with her, during which time I gave her everything she asked for. In fact, I spent a small fortune on her. About six months ago, while we were out together, she left me flat and went home with a strange man. I haven't seen her since. Now she tells my friends that she loves me, and wants to come back with me.

Would you advise me to take her back, and if I do, would she be faithful? I really think a great deal of her, and would like to have her for my wife. I am 32, and she is 24.

Tony

If you're a glutton for trouble, Tony, you will probably become reconciled to this girl, and you may actually marry her. But I think you will regret it. To leave a man for an absolute stranger, and go away with him is a sufficient warning to watch your step.

"Oh, Dear, What Can the Matter Be?"

Dear Miss Fairfax—

What ails some bachelors? They would sooner string along a dozen girls, than go "steady" with one, settle down and be taken care of properly. Here's my story:

I've known a certain young man for a number of years, and we've grown very fond of each other. I am 22, and he's thirteen years older. I suppose when you're as much in love as I am, it's hard not to show your feelings, and I'm afraid I showed him how much I cared. Since our last date he hasn't showed up, or explained why he doesn't want to see me any more. All he says is that he's too old for me, but I said that didn't make any difference at all. We are very congenial.

Marge

This young man of yours probably doesn't want to marry, or else he doesn't want to commit himself until he has considered the subject thoroughly. Don't be too impatient, and scare him away. It is seldom that a girl's youth is an insurmountable objection.

Happy Couple

Dear Miss Fairfax—

My husband and I sincerely enjoy your column. In one of your recent articles you ask some of us, who are happily married, to write to you. We can qualify. My husband and I have been married twelve years, and have been through lots of trouble. Sickness, loss of dear ones, in-law trouble, and all the things that make up life. But after twelve years together, we can truthfully say we have a deeper love and understanding for each other, than in the first years of our marriage.

By making others happy we find life beautiful, and it makes us happy too.

E. C.

Congratulations to this couple who are not only happy themselves, but who are unselfish in their happiness. We'd like to hear from a few more happy couples.

BABY'S CRY IS NOT ALWAYS TEMPER

DISTINGUISH between your baby's cry of pain and cry of temper. When it's the "pain cry" give Baby's Own Tablets at once. Mrs. May Mundy, of Toronto, finds they work every time.

"I am the mother of nine children, three of them prize babies, and Baby's Own Tablets have been my only medicine in raising them to the healthy children they now are. As soon as my children became a little feverish I at once gave them Baby's Own Tablets and in a very short time the fever disappeared and the children were normal again."

Equally effective for diarrhoea, upset stomach, simple croup, teething troubles and other minor ailments of babies.

Easy to take as candy. Quickly effective. Safe and harmless. Contain no opiates or stupefying drugs. Each package gives an analyst's report. Get a package today. Sickness often strikes in the night. 25 cents. Your money back if you are not satisfied.

Discusses Purchasing Board

Hamilton, Ont., May 10—(CP)—Senator Iva Campbell Fallis, addressing the annual Ladies' Day luncheon of the Kiwanis Club, declared yesterday that if the federal defence purchasing board functioned correctly, complete public confidence would be restored in the awarding of contracts. She believed this would eliminate such inquiries as that into the Bren gun contract.

Interesting Program at Madoc High School Literary Meeting

GOOD MANNERS

MRS. CORNELIUS BEECKMAN

When you Dine in a Restaurant

Whenever it is possible, a man checks his hat and coat upon entering a restaurant. A woman waits until she is seated until she removes her coat.

Even then she does not actually remove her coat, but instead slips her arms out of the sleeves, and throws her wrap back over her chair.

The headwaiter is the official host of a restaurant, and when he greets you with "Good evening. How many, sir?" you return his greeting, tell him the number in your party, and your preferences regarding the position of your table. If the location you wish is not available, it is best to take the table he suggests unless you see one you very much prefer. The headwaiter leads the way, the woman follows, then the man. If there is no headwaiter, the man walks ahead to find the table he considers the most suitable.

The headwaiter or the woman's escort if no waiter is near, pulls out the chair for her which faces the other diners, or the entertainment. A mannerly escort waits behind the woman's chair until she is seated and assists her with her coat before he takes his seat . . . he does not leave this personal courtesy to the waiter. A woman should not put her purse or gloves on a restaurant table; she should put them on her lap (if she can make them stay there!) or on an extra chair. A man rises when a woman or a man stops at his table to speak to him or his companion.

A word to a woman table-visitor—Since a man must remain standing while you are on your feet, do not thoughtlessly carry on a lengthy conversation. Do not think that your "Don't stand, please" will permit a mannerly man to act on such a discourteous suggestion.

A woman does not rise unless the table-visitor is an older or very famous woman.

Most important it is that the woman adopt the point of view that she is the guest, not the host. Therefore, she tells her escort . . . not the waiter . . . her choice of foods. Only the woman who does not know what's what gives her order directly to the waiter. Also a woman tells her escort when she wishes some extra service during the meal—cream, water, or whatever it may be.

The host relays the orders to the waiter, being careful, when the orders differ, to mention the woman's order first.

If you smoke at table, use an ash-tray; the waiter will bring one, if there isn't one on the table. Do not use a saucer or a plate, or flick the ashes on the floor, or extinquish a cigarette by dunking it in a cup. When you have finished smoking, be sure to put your cigarette out, completely. Don't leave it smoldering in the ash-tray, for the smell of a dying cigarette is not pleasant where food is being eaten.

If you drop a piece of silver or your serviette during the meal, don't pick it up; the waiter is asked (by the host) to replace it.

When they are about to leave, the man helps the woman on with her coat, and, as they leave, she precedes her escort. Both bow curteously to the waiter, and the headwaiter if he is at the door.

Courtesy Tips

Look Pleasant, Please!

Haven't you noticed that people who don't take small courtesies for granted, whose habit it is to say a quick thank you" for a courtesy, no matter how small, are pleasant-looking people? And that the people who take courtesies for granted are frequently unpleasant-looking, tight-mouthed people? Look about you for a week . . . and see if this isn't true. And then decide which kind of person you want to be. It's a choice of two G's . . . Gracious or Grumpy!

A VERY lively day, with many exciting events, is forecast from interesting if dubious planetary operations. There is a probability of sudden upheavals, peculiar frustrations and the lack of co-operation of employers, superiors or others sought for ready support. With proper approach and discreet control of impulsive or erratic inclinations, these sources may be influenced to assist in putting over desired programs. Personal associations should be lively and happy.

Those whose birthday it is may anticipate a particularly lively and productive year, despite definite upheavals, opposition and peculiar impediments. Deal tactfully with employers and superiors, whose aid is sought, refraining from impetuosity, eccentricities and overzealousness. Social factors may influence and also bring gratification to business and the private life.

Picton, May 10—Carl Smith escaped injury when a car he was driving left the road south of Picton Monday night, smashed into a fence and turned over. The car, a new one and owned by Don Browne of Bloomfield, was completely wrecked.

Mr. and Mrs. Peter Addison Mabee, who are Canada's longest married couple, having been married for over 76 years, have received an invitation to be present in Kingston on May 21, when the King and Queen make their visit there. Special seats are being reserved for the couple and if possible they will be presented to Their Majesties. Mr. Mabee at 98 is well and active, but Mrs. Mabee at 96 is not enjoying the best of health. They were congratulated by the King and Queen on their anniversary and would like the opportunity to say 'thanks'.

The Town Council is investigating the possibility of taking advantage of the Dominion government's plan whereby, with assistance from the province, money would be available for municipalities for undertakings of a permanent nature. The local council is interested in a sewage disposal system in Picton, a matter that has been considered for many years. The Council held a special meeting last night and this was one of the matters discussed. Council also promised co-operation to a Toronto manufacturer who wished to locate in a small town. Regarding Daylight Saving Time, it was disclosed that as far as the statutes are concerned Standard Time applies and stores may remain open until one o'clock Sunday morning if they desire.

Permission was granted the Salvation Army to hold a tag day on May 27 as part of their Self-Denial campaign.

CHAPTER XIV

As Woman to Woman

Standing in the amber-scented dusk of the women's apartment of Khotalghar Palace, Leonie Valence wondered how much longer the old Maharani would keep her waiting. Pencils of sunlight, through the fretted woodwork of the shutters, touched here some vivid embroidery, there a brass or silver bowl, flickered over the girl's pale-grey dress.

But her face and eyes were shadowed under a wide dark purple hat, as she remembered her words to the Maharajah and his answer half an hour before.

"You'll leave me to make friends with your mother alone?"

"My mother is not an easy person, Miss Valence. She was once very beautiful and ruled my father—as she still wishes to rule me." He laughed softly, shrugging his shoulders. "She is masterful, prejudiced, obstinate. If she makes up her mind against you as my son's governess—"

"She musn't then; that is all," Leonie had replied calmly—and now she was still waiting the Maharani's pleasure, or displeasure.

A hoarse cackle came from what had seemed mere piled cushions on a divan; they stirred, took shapeless form as a figure, swathed from head to foot in dark blue, waddled forward, chuckling.

"You are patient, Englishwoman! I've been trying to tire you out."

"Yes, I am patient, your Highness—but not English," Leonie said.

"Eh?" The muffled shape moved nearer; black eyes glittered through the slitted veil.

"I hate them—as much as you do yourself," Leonie answered in careful Urdu.

"How do I know that you are not a spy in their pay," she demanded. "My son has a bad name with the authorities. They fear his influence—and mine; they would gladly depose us."

"I cannot prove anything, of course, except by my actions, but I think you will find those speak for themselves. I will put myself in your power. I will tell you what came to India."

The Maharani listened as Leonie told, deliberately, the story of her attempt to secure the aeroplane plans, omitting Ranny Struan's part in the drama.

"H'm. You failed there then?" she commented.

"Yes. But I shall not do so again. If I can help here at Khotalghar, if we can influence his Highness to throw all his weight into the scales against the British, that will be something worth doing."

"Why should you expect to influence my son?" the Maharani asked suspiciously.

"Through his son, your Highness, the boy he loves," Leonie answered quietly. "I will teach Krishn what you wish, if you allow me to become his governess. That is why I want to be here, that is my whole purpose."

"You will make him hate the English, too? Good! Perhaps you are right, perhaps it is a wise plan ....I will suggest that you also become my son's secretary—his confidential secretary, eh? You can move freely, go where I cannot, hear and see what I cannot. Men come to the Palace from all parts of India, that much I know, but I may not be present at their meetings, I am only told what my son pleases! If you were there—yes."

The brilliant black eyes were now thoughtful, speculative; Leonie was startled by their power of expression, lacking the help of all other features. The Maharani spoke at last decisively.

"It is well. You may come to the Palace. I will tell His Highness my son that I am satisfied."

It was the outcome of that decision which Leonie gave Hall that same afternoon on the veranda of the green and white bungalow which was Pathapore's premier hotel, overlooking the dusty compound.

"I am lucky to get the job. I can't afford to be idle, or to go on allowing myself to be spoilt by the Struans. I felt I must make a fresh start, and here's my chance, since the Maharani approves of me. You'll explain to Chrissie, won't you? I don't want to seem ungrateful."

"You've said good-bye to her?"

"Yes, and she wished me good luck. I hope you'll do the same."

"Of course. And—you'll let me know if I can ever help you in any way?"

"I will—and thank you. Who knows? I may be most glad of your help sometime, although you commit yourself dangerously by offering it."

Wilson Hall walked back wearily to the Struans' bungalow. His lips had a bitter twist as he remembered the past interview, realized that Leonie Valence was only another of the many girls and women who looked upon him as a perfectly safe friend. Safe? How he loathed the word and all it conveyed, the inference that he was no more than the dry mummy of a man. And safety as regards others did not mean immunity for oneself.

Well, it would be soothing to his jarred, raw nerves when he got back if Chrissie would play for him.

But when he reached the bungalow, a glance at Chrissie told Hall that she was in no mood to play. She was pacing restlessly up and down the long matted drawing-room, pausing to twitch at the fold of a curtain, to re-arrange a flower vase, to turn over a magazine.

At sight of Hall her face brightened.

"Oh, I'm so glad to see you," she said. "I....it was horrid!—I've been quarrelling."

"With Struan?" The words escaped Hall involuntarily, and Chrissie's pale cheeks turned crimson, as she shook her head vehemently.

"No—no!" she said. "Of course not. About him.........it was Tim Jones. But what he said was....oh, unbearable!"

"Perhaps he didn't mean any harm," Hall suggested. "After all, he's very young."

"I know, and I want to make every excuse, truly I do," Chrissie said rather piteously. "But what he said about Ranny,...."

She paused, biting her lips. Hall drew a chair forward.

"Sit down—and tell me just as much as you want to," he said.

"We had a horrid quarrel before he left, and that makes me miserable," Chrissie confessed. "I'd always liked Tim; I shall miss him about the place."

"Oh, he'll be back soon I feel certain. Honestly, I wouldn't make too much of it. And don't be too hard on him if he comes back to apologise—as I'm quite sure he will."

"But what he said about Ranny ....and Leonie was unpardonable."

"That reminds me," said Hall, "I've a message for you." In a few words he explained Leonie's plans, trying to treat the matter lightly, while Chrissie's relief was rather pathetically obvious.

"I'm glad she's got somewhere to go; I was feeling so responsible," she said. "After all, Ranny and I brought her out here. But I can't understand her taking a post like that."

"I suppose she's tired of our humdrum life," Hall laughed. "And expects to find romance, glamour, adventure in the maharajah's household."

"No," Chrissie shook her head. "I don't think Leonie is like that."

"Neither do I, as a matter of fact, but she probably has some purpose of her own in going to the palace——"

"Who has?" The question came harshly from the shadowed veranda and Chrissie started as she answered.

"Oh, Ranny, is that you? It's Leonie—she's suddenly decided to go as governess to the maharajah's little boy, and I can't think why."

"Can't you?" Struan's mouth was set grimly.

"No. Can you? Is there—have you—is anything wrong?" Chrissie faltered, her hands twisting nervously in her lap.

"Nothing. On the contrary I'm glad not to meet her again."

"Why, Ranny, have you and Leonie quarrelled?"

"You might call it a quarrel—yes."

"I'm sorry......"

"You've no reason to be." Struan's laugh was utterly unmirthful. "Don't look so, miserable, Chrissie; she's better away from here—only by rights I should not let her go quite like this."

"What do you mean, Ranny?" Chrissie looked perplexed.

"Oh, nothing!—because that's what I'm going to do—nothing! I ought to tell what I know; there's not the slightest doubt about that."

"Tell who? I don't understand—do you, Mr. Hall?" Chrissie's puzzled glance turned from one man to the other.

"Of course he doesn't!" Again Struan laughed roughly. "I don't myself."

"But what prevents you from telling whatever it is?" Chrissie asked.

"Nothing—nothing in the world. Except myself!" Struan retorted.

CHAPTER XV.

Island Conspiracy

In the lake at Khotalghar there 's an island, a low green mound, at only some fifty yards distance from the bank, with which it is connected by a fragile-looking bamboo bridge.

A place less outwardly suited for secret meetings could not be imagined, but the little green island had another aspect, which might have been discovered by anyone lingering on the lake's shore one moonless night some six weeks after Leonie Valence left the Struans.

A tall dark figure, walking noiselessly, crossed the bridge, pausing at the island end, where another greyish shape crouched. Neither spoke, but the newcomer made movements with his supple brown hands.

Still moving quickly and noiselessly, the tall man passed out of sight, along a narrow path, skirting the island upon the lakeward side, until he reached a narrow gap in the green slope. But, passing through it, the secret of the island appeared. The low hill was hollowed out into a shallow cave, the dimness lit only by hurricane-lamps set in the corners.

Three persons were there already, seated upon rugs and piled cushions strewn upon the beaten-earth floor; three persons who presented strange contrasts. One was an enormously fat man with a pallid, oily face, buttoned into a tight black frock-coat.

Next to him, motionless as a bronze statue, sat, crosslegged, an almost naked figure, a mere skin-covered skeleton, the head skull-like in its gauntness, lit by huge dark eyes. Elf-locks of greasy hair hung over the face, and a chaplet of amber beads dangled from neck to waist.

The third person in the cave was the Maharajah of Khotalghar.

He looked up as the last comer entered, casting a quick suspicious glance around him.

"All is well, Meta," the Maharajah said.

"Are you sure all is safe, Maharajah—ji?"

"It is absolutely safe," the Maharajah answered, "the sentry at the bridge lets no one pass without the countersign and he himself is a deaf-mute."

The other answered with a grunt, seating himself near the doorway. His face showed sallow and peevish with deep irritable lines from mouth to nose and scoring the low forehead.

In quick succession, with the same silence and secrecy, two other men arrived, one, small, wiry and very dark-skinned, with beady eyes, the other, a massive erect figure, with the shoulders of a well-drilled soldier, his black beard divided in the middle and brushed back towards the ears.

He seated himself beside the Maharajah, before speaking in a deep voice.

"We are all here?"

"No," Zindia answered. "There is one more to come—a new comrade."

"To be trusted?" the soldierly man queried curtly.

"Upon my word of honor," the Maharajah answered quietly.

"That should be enough," the man called Meta said grudgingly.

"I trust so indeed!" The Maharajah spoke sharply.

"None suggested otherwise," Meta said sulkily. "But I have no time to waste; the sooner we get to business....the better!"

"Nothing need delay us," Zindia said coldly. "The person of whom I spoke....Ah!" He broke off, as a slim figure entered.

There was a general murmur, a quick, angry exclamation from Meta.

"A woman!" he cried. "What does this mean?"

"It means that this is the new associate of whom I spoke," the Maharajah confronted the suspicion in the man's stare unflinchingly. "For whose good faith I answer."

"Who is she?" The soldier's eyes were more insolent than his voice. Those eyes roved quickly from head to foot over the figure, in Indian dress, gown and sari of night-blue silk. But under the sari's folds the face was pale, the level eyes grey and unyielding. The Maharajah spoke coldly, sternly.

"She is of my household, one whom I have chosen to teach my son, since it is necessary that he should speak the English language."

"Heugh!" Meta's exclamation held insult. "I heard that you had a white mem-sahib in your house! So this is she!"

"This is she, as you say," Leonie spoke in her quietest voice, her Hindustani correct enough, if hesitating. "And not less faithful to the cause for the color of her skin."

"That is what we have to make certain," the black-bearded soldier said with a laugh, but Leonie's eyes met and held his calmly.

Yankees Also Win on Three-Run Rally in Ninth

CUBS DOWN GIANTS

Dizzy' Dean Enlivens Proceedings by Getting Himself Ejected

(By Sid Feder Associated Press Sports Writer).

The story goes that Ted Williams is the new President of the Major Baseball League Screwballs Aid Society.

One tale is that he hit a line smash deep to right centre in one game, steamed around third and headed for home as the coach frantically tried to wave him down. "Don't tell me," he shouted. "I got up to here by myself, so I certainly don't need your help now."

Then there is the one about Ted dropping an easy fly and becoming so peeved at himself he picked up the ball and threw it over the right field fence as enemy runners scampered gleefully around the bases.

But in all the stories of this new chief of the Zanies, the story-tellers forget one thing—Ted is only a Zany when he has no bat in his hands. Ted is a pretty shrewd article when he's at the plate.

Perhaps, right-hander Ed Cole didn't know that yesterday when Ted came to bat in the 10th inning, with the score tied 7-7 between St. Louis and Boston Rd Sox, and two on base. He tossed one in, Ted belted it onto the roof of the pavilion and he and his mates had a merry time running around the bases to close a 10-8 Red Sox win.

Sox Needed Win

The Sox needed the win to stay in first place in the American League. The Yankees, having been knocked down to second place the day before, got back at Chicago White Sox with an 8-6 win, largely on a three-run rally in the ninth. Those were the only two games on the junior circuit card, the others being rained out, as was the Pittsburgh-Boston party in the National League.

Headlining the senior circuit program was a get together between Chicago Cubs and New York Giants, with the ex-prexy of the same escrewball aid society, Mr. Jerome Herman Dean, enlivening the proceedings by getting himself "shooed" from the premises for "needling" the umpires. Diz wasn't working, just sitting on the bench tossing remarks. Four other Cubs pitchers did the heavy duty and finally wound up with an 11-7 decision on a four-run eighth inning splurge, as the Giants' hurling fell apart. St. Louis Cardinals defeated Dodgers 13-1 and Cincinnati trounced Philadelphia 8-4.

THELMA GOLDEN HAILED IN N. Y.

Hurls Toronto Softball Team to Three-to-One Victory

New York, May 10 (CP)—Gotham softball fans hailed Thelma Golden of Toronto today as the best girl pitcher to display her wares in these parts.

The tall Langley-Lakesides speed ball artist won her spurs before a horseshow crowd of 12,000 at Madison Square Garden last night when she came up with a seven-hit hurling job and drove home the first Toronto run to pace her mates to a 3-1 victory over New York Roverettes, Queens of the Gotham League.

It was a tribute to Goldy's pitching wizardy and her soundness at bat that a deep bank of white shirt fronts still lined the indoor diamond when she had fogged through her last pitch close to midnight.

In a celebrity game before the girls' affair Bob Ripley's "Believe-it-or-not" nine outslugged Lowell Thomas' "Nine old men" 7-3 in spite of the fact the great Babe Ruth believe-it-or-not—was fanned twice by an "old man" pitcher who turned out to be a ringer.

The Ringer was hustled unceremoniously from the diamond by the outraged "Believe-it-or-nots" when some one identified him as Cannonball Baker, recognized as the best softball pitcher in the game.

JIMMY SLATTERY TO TRY COMEBACK

Many Old-Timers Say He is Greatest Boxer Since Jim Corbett

New York, May 10 (AP)—Jimmy Slattery, who the old-timers around cauliflower canyon still insist was the greatest boxer since Jim Corbett, is serious about a ring comeback and the State Athletic Commission, after a perfunctory physical examination, has granted him a boxing licence.

The commission's action yesterday really meant only that it was willing to give the 34-year-old Jimmy a chance to see if he could get himself into any kind of shape. He'll have to pass another and stiffer exam before they let him enter a ring.

"I won't try to fool you," said the tired-looking former fighter. "Maybe I can get the old legs in shape again, and maybe I can't. If they don't come around I'll give it up, much as I need some money. I'm not going to let some young squirt knock my head off."

Between the Lines

Ken J. Colling

Paul Kritchell, chief scout of the New York Yankees, recently published an article in the Country Home Magazine, citing a few requirements necessary to be considered of major league timber. Although it might be far-fetched to vision Belleville ballisters cavorting about in major league uniforms, just as miraculous incidents have occurred on baseball's firmament in years past. The players usually scouted by Kritchell and his major league contemporaries are usually teen-aged youths on the sandlots and in college baseball. Kritchell himself has travelled over 300,000 miles in his 20 years of ivory hunting and has looked over approximately 80,000 prospects.

The requirements, as set down by Kritchell in his opinion, might be interesting to read and are as follows:

"Outfield—A good throwing arm, speed of foot, and most important, the knack of taking a good cut at a pitched ball. An outfielder should be able to spice his batting average with a generous sprinkling of doubles, triples and home runs.

Infield—A good pair of hands for ground balls, a good arm to throw out runners at first base, and a fair hitting eye. Infielders are not expected to chip paint off the fences with line drives, although power at bat makes them much more welcome.

First Base—First sackers are not listed with infielders because of the vogue to have a big bruiser of the Jimmy Foxx, Hank Greenberg, Lou Gehrig school at the initial corner. In short, one who can dig a badly thrown ball out of the dirt and who can hit like a Missouri mule.

Pitcher—I want size and weight in pitching prospects. The right numbers are five-ten to six-two in height and between 180 and 200 pounds in weight. The sine qua non, of course, is a fast ball. Everything else can be taught.

Catcher—A catcher must be able to throw to second base and he must be able to hit. He must also be smart enough to call for the right pitch. But here, too, if the prospect can throw and hit, the brains department can be developed."

As a final and absolute requirement for every great big league ball player Kritchell lists "love of the game."

"Combined with ability," he writes, "he must possess a burning love of baseball. To be a star, you've got to eat, drink and sleep baseball. Rogers Hornsby, who was probably the greatest right-hand hitter in history, never saw a movie during his big-league career because he was afraid it might strain his batting eye."

That Kritchell knows what he is talking about is evidenced by the fact that he has discovered among others such famous stars as Tony Lazzeri, Mark Koenig, Billy Werber, Leo Durocher, Buddy Hassett, Red Rolfe, George Selkirk and Lou Gehrig to mention only a few.

We hear that Charley Gehringer has received, as fan gifts, everything from automobiles to salt and pepper shakers, but ironically enough, Charley, who has been with the Tigers ever since breaking into the Big Tent—15 years ago—never has come in for a travelling bag....Bill Owen, who will umpire in the Mid-Atlantic League this season, is coach of the Jersey City Giants of the American Football Association.

"How do you expect me to stop wrestlers, who practice the same ring tactics as I do myself?" bellowed Al Dunlop at us when we took him to task for some of his refereeing decisions last week. "I'll tell you what I'll do. I'll quit this refereeing business here and now you get in there and see if you can do any better," threatened Dunlop, but we promptly replied—"no dice," "you finish the job you started." Dunlop finished, but he announced afterwards it was his first and "my last" crack at trying to decide between two other grapplers. "I'm going back into the game and you can get me any opponent you think can beat me," shouted Dunlop over his shoulder as he left the Hume arena last week. In the selection of George Richards, the Jewish champion, as Dunlop's opponent for Friday night's show local fans will doubtless agree a suitable opponent has been obtained. Richards, who wrestlers in the States as Sammy Stein, has just returned to Canada after eight continuous months of wrestling in the U.S.A. during which he appeared on several top-notch cards in Madison Square Gardens.

Do you remember when Andy Blair, second oldest player with the Maple Leafs hockey team in point of service, was sold to Chicago Black Hawks for a reported price of $7,500 three years ago after playing with the Leafs since the 1928-29 season. He was a sensation in his first season, but the forward pass rule cut down his scoring and also when the National Hockey League took in New York Americans' franchise at the annual meeting at Detroit three years ago today. William B. Dwyer, who was forced to relinquish control for financial reasons, had failed to exercise his option to retain the club April 15.

We're Telling You That—It's too bad more interest isn't being shown towards the Belleville intermediate ball club, there's plenty of material available, but the managerial assistance seems to be lacking somewhere.... Although Corbys A.C. are predicting a New York Yankee position for themselves in the city "mushball" loop, Frank Sedore's Oilers don't seem to be worrying any too much about the strength of the Corbyville nine....Reg Moncrief wants the proposed sports stadium built in connection with the Belleville Beaches, which aren't getting any too many breaks from the city at large, he says....The Peterboro seniors open their inter-city senior schedule at the Liftlock City on May 27th.

LIGHTS MATCH ON FLOODED STREET
TO PROVE NEW NON-SKID TIRE SWEEPS WET ROAD DRY!
THIS SIMPLE TEST AMAZED ME...THE LIFE-SAVER TREAD SWEPT THE WET ROAD SO DRY I COULD ACTUALLY LIGHT A MATCH ON ITS TRACK!
No wonder you get the QUICKEST NON-SKID STOPS you've ever had!
HERE, at last, is a tire that automatically sweeps wet roads dry—so dry that you can light a match on its track! Here is a tire that turns the "skid trap" under your car into a DRY TRACK. It's the new Goodrich Silvertown with the Life-Saver Tread that once more won "hands down" in independent non-skid tests conducted by Pittsburgh Testing Laboratory—tests of the regular and premium-priced tires of the six largest tire manufacturers.
A DOUBLE LIFE-SAVER
And just as this new Goodrich Safety Silvertown gives you the greatest skid protection ever offered, it gives you still another feature that for years has been a sensational life-saver—the famous Golden Ply blow-out protection! This exclusive Golden Ply invention is a layer of special rubber and full-floating cords, scientifically treated to resist internal tire heat. By resisting this heat, the Golden Ply scientifically protects you against high-speed blow-out dangers.
NO EXTRA COST. You might expect to pay more for this double protection, but remember, both the skid protection of the Life-Saver Tread and the famous Golden Ply blow-out protection are yours in Silvertowns at no extra cost. For safety tomorrow—get Silvertowns today.
QUICKER STOPS! Here's the Secret:
Goodrich engineers tested tread designs by the hundred. Finally they developed this Life-Saver Tread that acts like a set of windshield wipers. As the row upon row of never-ending spiral bars roll over a dangerous film of water, they sweep the water right and left—force it out through the deep drainage grooves—make a dry track for the rubber to grip. No wonder this new Goodrich Safety Silvertown will stop you quicker, safer on a wet pavement than you've ever stopped before!

Dad: MAKE YOUR SON THIS Sporting Offer
and he will be sure to pass his EXAMS
SAY to him:—"Son, I know you want a C.C.M. Bicycle. I was going to reward you with one if you passed your midsummer exams. But I'm going to be a good sport and buy you one right away so that you'll have all the extra time between now and midsummer to enjoy it. But I'll expect you to prove you are a good sport, too, by studying hard and passing with good marks. If you fail we will have to take the bicycle back to the dealer."
The C.C.M. Company and the C.C.M. dealer will back you up in this offer, Dad. They will allow you the full price you paid for the C.C.M., if your boy (or your girl) fails to pass at midsummer. (Claim must be made within one week of the announcement of the term's results.) But he will not let you down. When your boy says he will do a thing he will do it.
This year's C.C.M.'s set the pace in style, beauity and easy running. With working parts of specially hardened steel, machined to hair-line accuracy, they run with marvelous quietness and smoothness. To pedal a C.C.M. requires little effort, and the free-running C.C.M. Coaster Brake enables a rider to frequently coast long distances without any foot-work.
All models have seamless tubular steel frames; plated or enamelled steel rims; rustless steel spokes; bright parts chromium plated over a 20-year nickel foundation; Dunlop Fort or Imperial Tires; and other C.C.M. features. For quality and value a C.C.M. is still the big bicycle buy of 1939. 17M was swamped.

KING AND QUEEN

The King and Queen apparently enjoyed the stormy weather. Both are good sailors and they spent some time on deck late yesterday watching the boisterous sea.

On Rolling Deck

Their Majesties walked the deck last night with the sure, elastic steps of persons accustomed to a rolling ship. They were in deep conversation during the greater part of their stroll together, stopping here and there to talk with members of the royal suite; asking how they were enjoying the trip.

The King and Queen were most solicitous about those who were kept in their cabins by the storm. In keeping with their desire for as little formality as possible, passengers remained seated in deck chairs as the King and Queen walked past instead of standing as ordinarily would be expected.

Too Rough For Cinema

The sea was so rough that scheduled cinema was cancelled last night. The sailors played darts on the lower deck. Only experienced seafarers would have been able to throw darts successfully in that weather.

At 1:35 p.m. Greenwich Mean Time (9:35 a.m. EDT), the Empress of Australia was 620 miles east of Cape Race. The sky was again overcast but visibility was good.

Members of the ship's crew were presented to the King and Queen at noon. As the crew was being assembled, His Majesty paced the deck with Vice-Admiral Sir Dudley North and smiled greetings at members of the ship's company.

Presentation of Crew

As the time for the presentation approached the King went to his cabin and reappeared with the Queen. Captain A. Meikle, Commander of the Empress, introduced each of his officers, the chef, butcher, nursing sisters, head steward, stewardess and other members of the crew.

His Majesty shook hands with each and chatted with everyone.

Ship's officers agreed yesterday's storm was one of the worst they had encountered on the Empress. The waves at times rolled entirely over the towering liner. A whale was sighted today, but no ships other than the convoy cruisers Glasgow and Southampton.

Blossom Time in the Niagara Peninsula

Spring hit Ontario rather suddenly and the Niagara peninsula is already bursting with colorful blossoms. This year a festival will be held at Grimsby and the annual competitoion to select a blossom queen will be held. This young lady is practising for the all-important festival and makes a pretty picture as she stands with a background of blossoms.

AT THE McCARTHY

"Almost a Gentleman"

How a dog's affection and a woman's love bring about the redemption of an embittered man forms the basis of "Almost a Gentleman," new dramatic film offering which opens next at the McCarthy Theatre.

James Ellison, who scored so splendidly recently in the comedy-feature "Next Time I Marry," has another excellent role in the film, opposite Helen Wood, lovely new "find." "Ace" The Wonder Dog of the screen who recently was at the McCarthy Theatre in "Orphans of the Street," plays his greatest role to date as a "four-footed detective" and June Clayworth and Robert Kent, popular juvenile feature players also do excellently in their respective roles in this production "Almost a Gentleman" which is the greatest dog story in years. A picture every dog lover will enjoy from start to final thrill-packed last scene.

"THE SHADOW"

Daring circus aerialists, swinging through space high above the crowd, the crack of the whip, rollicking clowns, the wild clamour of jungle animals and the nasal twang of the circus sideshow are highlights of entertaining appeal, to all who will see "The Shadow" the second big feature offering in addition to "Almost a Gentleman," coming next to the McCarthy Theatre. You've heard the "Shadow" on the radio, read about the "Shadow" and now you can actually see him on the screen, which is a promise of the most exciting time you have yet been afforded while in a motion picture theatre. Rita Hayworth, Charles Quigley and Marc Lawrence head a cast of outstanding Hollywood personalities appearing in the film "The Shadow," which is said to be a most colorful chronicle of circus life and easily the most exciting picture audiences of all ages have witnessed so far on the silver sheet. Preceding the features and shown at each performance daily another episode of the splendid chapter play "Flying G-Men" will also thrill McCarthy Theatre patrons.

"The Lady Vanishes"

One of the most entertaining productions so far presented in the McCarthy Theatre is now having its final showings and for your benefit we urge you to see it. "The Lady Vanishes" is the title of this thriller which critics are universal in their claim that it is the best directed picture of the year and also is easily the most thrilling picture ever made. Walter Wanger's production of "Tannhauser" an excellent musical featurette and a Floyd Gibbon's True adventure story "High Peril" complete this outstanding screen programme now showing for the last times.

AT THE BELLE

"HOUND OF THE BASKERVILLES"
"EVERYBODY'S BABY"

Sir Arthur Conan Doyle's "The Hound of the Baskervilles", one of literature's most shocking, spine-thrilling mystery stories and the greatest of all of Sherlock Holmes' astounding adventures, has at last been transcribed to the screen.

Tall, spare, hawklike Basil Rathbone, in the perfect-fitting role of the great detective, is co-featured with Richard Greene and Wendy Barrie in the 20th Century-Fox production which will be presented next at the Belle Theatre.

In this great story the master of a thousand mysteries pits his cunning against the giant unearthly beast that roams the fog-shrouded English moor with blazing eyes and bared fangs, terrorizing the country-side, striking horror into the hearts of two young lovers and leaving a trail so terrifying that only Sherlock Holmes dare follow.

Nigel Bruce plays the famous Dr. Watson, the great detective's constant companion, Boswell an amazed observer. Also included in the cast are Lionel Atwill, John Carradine, Barlowe Borland, Beryl Mercer, Morton Lowry and Ralph Forbes.

"Everybody's Baby"

It's a joy at the Joneses when America's Favorite Folks celebrate a "blessed event" in the latest hit of the 20th Century-Fox series, "Everybody's Baby", which is the companion feature with new laughs, new fun and even a new Jones.

There's plenty of fun and excitement in this joyful, Jones-full hit and with one riot, two false-alarms and a free-for-all it's the happiest entertainment event the movies have offered in quite a few weeks. Of course, Bonnie's baby makes Dad a Grand-dad and all the kids uncles and aunts. So, they all lend a hand in bringing up the howling new addition to the family and, with a thousand new Jones laughs, it's the family's howlingest hit.

All the Joneses are present in their new hit, Jed Prouty, Shirley Deane, Spring Byinton, Russell Gleason, Ken Howell, George Ernest, June Carlson, Florence Roberts and Billy Mahan. Also featured in the cast are Reginald Denny, Robert Allen, Claire Du Brey and Marvin Stephens.

Bid Farewell to Stirling Resident

Stirling — On Friday evening, May 4th, about fifty friends and neighbours gathered at the home of Mrs. William Waller, Front St., Stirling, to bid her farewell when within the next few days she leaves the district to reside at the home of her son. Mr. F. T. Hulin acted as chairman for the evening and fittingly expressed the sentiments of those present in the matter of Mrs. Waller's departure from Stirling. Friends of the neighbourhood were well represented and St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church ladies were also present, each testifying to the worth of Mrs. Waller's faithfulness in church work. Midway through the pleasant evening an address on behalf of the gathering was read by Miss Neva Hagerman and the presentation of many lovely and useful gifts made by Miss Norma Sarles.

The Address

Dear Mrs. Waller:—

The occasion of our meeting here tonight is both a sad and happy one. Sad because we are met to say farewell to you, and happy because you are going away to enjoy the happiness of living among your children. It is therefore with mixed feelings that we wish you every success in your new home.

We are not going to sing your praises, as that would be unnecessary, but shall only say, that while you have been amongst us you have endeared yourself to us all by your never-failing kindness, hospitality and consideration, as well as your constant cheerfulness, good fellowship and sympathy, qualities which will make you friends wherever you go.

Though you will be no longer with us, we are assured that neither you nor we will soon forget our friendship, the pleasant comradeship and intimacy of several years. These things will be treasured memories to us all and it is not with fear that you will forget that we ask you to accept from us this gift, in token of our high esteem and regard. If gifts are valuable according to the feelings of the giver then this although trifling will perhaps command itself more to you than other precious objects, solely because it is the gift of friends.

Now we add more to than this —wherever you go, you will take with you our goodwill and our friendship. Whenever you return you will find us ready to welcome you wishing you long life, Good luck and prosperity.

Signed on behalf of your friends, neighbours and St. Andrew's Ladies' Aid.

Mrs. Claude Belshaw

NAZI PISTOLS

past have been accused by Left-Wing circles of heading the so-called "Cliveden Set" which was said to have favored the appeasement of Chancellor Hitler. They have consistently denied the existence of any such group.

A letter expressing Lord Astor's views was published in The Times. The same issue of the newspaper printed a statement denying that an editorial of last Thursday implied that Great Britain would avoid a European war over Danzig by pursuing an appeasement policy similar to that of Munich.

The Astor family has large holdings in The Times. Major J. J. Astor, brother of Lord Astor, is chairman of The Times Publishing Company.

Astor Letter

The Astor letter said, in part:

"Today any attempt to make concessions to Hitler unless accompanied by all around (including German) disarmament, would be bitterly resented by a vast majority.

"Anyone reading German papers or listening to German broadcasts can see that a policy of unilateral appeasement or a semblance of vacillation is seized upon by Goebbels' propaganda machinery to convince doubting Germans that we do not mean business and that we will yield to a squeeze and to make other countries doubt the value of our guarantees."

Lord Astor recalled that a letter to The Times last week from Lord Rushcliffe, former Labor Minister, had said there were three alternatives: "Conference, indefinite deadlock, war" and said Lord Rushcliffe "rightly rules out the last two as undesirable."

Nazi Pistols at Conference

"A conference with Nazi pistols pointed at one's head can lead to no good end. There must be a cessation of military and economic threats and the stirring up of discontent in other countries."

The Times' special statement dealt especially with a sentence in the 1,500-word editorial last Thursday. The sentence was: "Danzig really is not worth a war." It caused considerable controversy.

A German demand for return of the Free City of Danzig is one of the principal points of controversy between Germany and Poland. Great Britain has pledged aid, if necessary, to protect Poland's independence.

The Times said that anyone who took the trouble to read the article in question as a whole instead of tearing an isolated sentence from its content must have given the passage its obvious—and indeed its only possible—sense."

In diplomatic quarters there was confidence Russia ultimately would join Britain and France in guarantees to smaller nations.

Chesterville came to the front rapidly in the afternoon to touch 1.07 for an overnight gain of 12 cents. Siscoe was active also and about 10 cents higher. Smelters, Nickel and Hudson Bay posted gains of fractions.

Anglo-Canadian was the strongest of the western oils, adding 6 cents or more and Royalite at 38 was up a fraction. Home and Monarch firmed slightly.

WALL STREET CLOSE

New York, May 10 (AP)—Stocks held to higher ground today as traders cautiously sparred for fractional profits.

Unexplained Element Affects Cheese Color In Certain Districts

What special element or mineral has the grass or soil of the County of Peterborough that is absent in Hastings and the counties of the east?

Cheesemakers, who gathered from throughout Prince Edward and Hastings at the Y.M.C.A. last evening and discussed this matter in an informal talk, would like to know.

It was revealed that colored cheese made in the Belleville and Prince Edward areas could not be depended upon to keep its true color for more than a year. But colored cheese produced in Peterborough County and the factories throughout that northern section retain their good color for two years or more.

Makers use the same standard color almost everywhere, and the cows are fed the same fodder and pasteurage. But there is a difference somewhere, and so far it remains a mystery in spite of efforts of makers to learn the secret.

P. O. Association Votes Against Building Any School Addition

At a meeting of the executive of the Belleville Property Owners' Association held last evening a resolution was passed to be presented city council asking that no addition be made at present to any Belleville public school.

The resolution as worded points out: "That since public school registration is down twenty-five per cent since the year 1934, that any addition to any of the public schools in Belleville is totally unwarranted".

It was felt by the executive organisation that if overcrowding of classrooms is now experienced in Belleville that this trouble could be remedied by the re-zoning of the children from the various wards.

Through a second resolution passed at the meeting city council will be asked to advertise in advance all streets named for oiling this year and in future.

Too much oiling has been done in Belleville in recent years at too great a cost to the taxpayers, it was reported by several of the members. Many of the streets receiving this oiling year after year did not need such treatment due to the fact that little traffic is reported over these roads, it was protested. Through the fact of advertising all streets in future it is felt that ratepayers of the various streets in question will be given sufficient time to protest against such oiling.

Bancroft Lodge Honors 8 Members Of W. Wiggins Family

One of the most unique events in the history of the local jurisdiction took place at Bancroft on Monday night when eight members of the family of Mr. Walter Wiggins, prominent local insurance agent, all members of Bancroft Lodge A.F. & A.M. were honored at a banquet given by members and officials of the lodge in the Masonic Temple in the northern county village.

Sixty guests representative of Belleville, Madoc, Tweed, Napanee and other district lodges attended the function which was featured by the initiation of the youngest son of Mr. Wiggins. Four other sons and two sons-in-law occupied chairs during the initiation ceremonies.

Dr. W. Embury, well-known physician of Bancroft, proposed the toast to the "Wiggins Family" which was responded to by Dr. Harold Welsh, M.P.P. for East Hastings, who was the guest speaker of the evening.

Other speakers included Messrs. Gordon Jones and M. Morrison. A number of the Belleville Masonic fraternity including P. C. McGuire, Lorne MacDougall and other attended the function.

Deputation From City To Interview Minister On Sinking Fund Matter

Mayor Jamieson Bone, Alderman McLean Haig, City Solicitor A. B. Collins, and City Treasurer H. B. Stock left the city this morning for Toronto where at two o'clock this afternoon the local deputation will interview the Ontario Minister of Municipal Affairs at Queen's Park with a view to having the city cease assessing for bonds for which provision has already been made.

This is in connection with the sinking fund matter against which the city has waged protest for some time past in being forced to provide for these funds out of the assessment when enough money is already on hand to pay these off.

"If we get what we want on this matter, we will be able to put on another two mill decrease in the tax rate this year," stated Mayor Bone.

SLUGGED AND ROBBED

Toronto, May 10—(CP)—Joseph Reycraft, manager of a Queen Street shoe store, was slugged into unconsciousness last night by a man who robbed him of $119, a ring and a gold watch. As Reycraft collapsed to the floor of the store, the thug rifled the cash register of $34. He took a wallet containing $85 from the manager's pocket and pulled the gold watch from his vest.

BANCROFT COURT IS LENGTHY ONE

Several Jail Terms Meted Out in First Session Since Last Winter

Extensive police court proceedings were presented before Magistrate J. L. Lloyd at Bancroft yesterday, which resulted in convictions, fines and jail terms respectively being meted out by the court. County Crown Attorney B. C. Donnan K.C., conducted the prosecutions, the court having been the result of extensive adjournments, owing to the lateness of spring.

Allan Sprague, Faraday Township, was given three months in the common jail being convicted of the theft of standing timber, to the value of $383.00 The timber was the property of Chancey Ashley of this city, the court was informed.

Convicted of obtaining money under false pretenses Elvin Fransky, Bancroft, was sentenced to serve two months in the common jail. The prosecution established Fransky had obtained the sum of $190.00 from Gordon Jones, also of Bancroft, by misrepresentation. Provincial Constable Palmateer, of Bancroft, presented the cases and preferred charges.

Lloyd Brace, McCarthy's Mills, paid a fine of $20.00 and costs after being convicted of shooting beaver out of season, contrary to the Game and Fisheries Act, while Charles Wasmund, Maynooth, was fined $20.00 and costs after being convicted of being found in the possession of a beaver pelt under the same law.

Johnson Hare and Samuel Cowain, both of Bell's Rapid's, were given suspended sentences respectively after being convicted of the theft of timber, valued at $90.00. The pair paid the costs of the proceedings as well.

Thomas O'Brien, was fined $100 and costs after being convicted of the possession of illicit liquor, contrary to the Excise Act. Several other minor cases were heard during the afternoon-long session of police court, the first to be held in Bancroft since last winter.

Travelling Bag Left on Parking Lot For Whole Day

If Diogenes were alive today his search for an honest man he might terminate right here in Belleville at least I. C. Marritt, Toronto traveller has reasons to believe this to be so.

After spending Monday night in a local hotel Mr. Marritt returned to his parked automobile on the parking lot immediately north of the police station. Apparently Mr. Marritt placed his club bag on the ground while unlocking the motor car door and then forgetting his club bag, entered the vehicle and drove easterly on business. Upon his arrival in Brockville shortly after 6.00 p.m., last night, however, Mr. Marritt discovered his club bag missing.

Remembering having placed the bag on the ground while unlocking his car door, Mr. Marritt telephoned Belleville city police, who upon receiving the call walked out of the police station, crossed the road and there on the ground where Mr. Marritt had left his club bag many hours before, was the bag, untouched and unharmed.

A large number of motorists avail themselves of this particular parking lot every day, but none had observed or interfered with Mr. Marritt's bag, which was later found to contain all of his travelling goods intact. Police are holding it.

Windsor was still living at the time, doubled up in the hallway. His temples and hands were pale, indicating to the officer internal bleeding. The telephone downstairs had been torn from the wall and Glasscock used the extension phone upstairs.

Horace Green, a juror, took ill suddenly and the trial was adjourned briefly while he was taken from the room and given treatment.

The trial was adjourned until two o'clock this afternoon after a doctor examined Green and advised that the juror be given a rest.

Police Blotter

Scrap metal, including some 360 pounds of bare copper wire, was stolen from the premises of the Belleville Metal and Waste Company property some time last night. The metal taken was valued at over $100.00, Sergeant Arthur Booth was informed this morning.

The robbers gained entrance to the building by means of entrance through a skylight in the roof and left with the loot through a rear door, which was opened from the inside. Several motor car radiators were also taken, but the most valuable goods was copper wire.

A feminine shoplifter was reported active in Belleville last night when a box of chocolates was reported stolen from off the display counter at McKeown's drug store. According to the reports of the store clerk, two women entered the store, on making a purchase of tablets. As the two women left, however, the clerk observed one box of chocolates was missing. The women hurried across the foot bridge. Police were afforded a description of the women, but subsequent patrolling of the city streets failed to result in apprehensions.

Only nine transients were given shelter at the police station last night.

ASKS SOVIET

In Touch With France

To Clement Attlee, leader of the opposition, Mr. Chamberlain said Britain was keeping in closest touch with France.

The Prime Minister's statement was prompted by Mr. Attlee asking if he had seen the communique issued at Moscow last night. This communique mystified British official circles, who concluded the Soviets were misunderstanding the British proposals.

The Prime Minister referred to Anglo-French pledges to Poland, Rumania and Greece. Russia was not invited directly in them, but Britain suggested to the Soviets they should make similar declarations almost simultaneously.

Soviet Scheme Broader

The Soviet government suggested "a scheme at once more comprehensive and more rigid." This obviously referred to the Russian proposal of a triple military alliance which Britain and France have felt would result in difficulties because of the attitude of Poland and Rumania that they do not want Russian troops fighting on their soil

Britain and France consulted again on the Russian proposal and made certain modifications of their original scheme.

"In particular they made it plain it was no part of their intention that the Soviet government should commit themselves to intervene irrespective of whether Great Britain and France had already, in the discharge of their obligations, done so.

Question of Intervention

"His Majesty's government added that if the Soviet government wished to make their own intervention contingent on that of Great Britain and France, His Majesty's government for their part would have no objection."

Russia's position in regard to Poland or Rumania, to whom Britain and France already have given separate guarantees, thus would be the same as in the Soviet-French pact with the old Czecho-Slovakia, where Russia was obligated to aid only if France did so.

Answering a question, Mr. Chamberlain said the mutual assistance pact between Britain and Poland did not exclude the possibility of an alliance between Britain and Russia.

Rush Conscription Bill

After answering questions, the Prime Minister moved a resolution designed to eliminate red tape and enable the government to rush through Parliament Bills conscripting youths of 20 and authorizing the government to call up reserves secretly.

"Our proceedings are being closely watched in other quarters and anything that might appear dilatory might have a very discouraging effect on our friends in Europe", he explained.

Beginning a statement to define the status of the lengthy negotiations, h said:

"The Government recently accepted a definite obligation in respect of certain European states (Poland and Rumania) and they did so without inviting the Soviet Government to participate in them in view of certain difficulties to which any such suggestion would inevitably give rise."

He referred here to Polish and Rumanian objections to having Soviet troops on their soil in the event of war.

Full Details Withheld

Mr. Chamberlain said that since conversations were still in progress between London and Moscow he could not give full details.

However, he said "I think it right to place the House in possession of the general line on which the conversations have been proceeding."

A communique issued in Moscow last night by Tass, the official Russian News Agency, indicated Russia held the view the British proposals had been one-sided.

The Prime Minister said that Britain proposed, following her guarantees to Poland and Rumania, that Russia should make, on their behalf, a declaration of similar effect in the sense that in the event of Great Britain and France being involved in hostilities in the discharge of their own obligations, the Soviet Government would express their readiness also to lend assistance."

Soviet Asks Clearness

"In particular they (Britain) made it plain it was not part of their intention that the Soviet Government should commit themselves to intervene irrespective of whether Great Britain and France had already, in the discharge of their obligations, done so.

"The government added that if the Soviet government wished to make their own intervention contingent on that of Great Britain and France His Majesty's government, for their part, would have no objection.

"Lord Halifax saw the Soviet Ambassador yesterday who explained to him (Halifax) that the Soviet government were still not clear whether, under the proposal of His Majesty's government, circumstances might arise in which the Soviet government would be committed to intervention unsupported by His Majesty's government or France.

"Lord Halifax assured the ambassador this was definitely not the intention of the proposals made by His Majesty's Government

"The British ambassador in Moscow had an interview two days ago with M. Molotoff (new Soviet Foreign Commissar) at which the latter promised that the Soviet government would give careful consideration to our proposals and we are now awaiting their reply."

Stalin's Recent Statement.

Mr. Chamberlain said that a declaration such as Britain proposed. "If the Soviet government feel able to make it, seems to his Majesty's government to be in accord with the recent pronouncement of M. Stalin that it is the policy of the Soviet government to support countries which might be victims of aggression and which were prepared to defend their own independence."

He added: "The Soviet government suggested a scheme at once more comprehensive and more rigid, which, whatever other advantages it might present, must, in the view of his Majesty's government, inevitably give rise to the very difficulties which our own proposals had been designed to avoid."

Original Proposals Modified.

The Prime Minister said that after Britain received the Soviet counter-proposals Britain "pointed out to the Soviet government the existence of these difficulties and at the same time made certain modifications in their original proposals."

Labor members cheered and ministers shouted, "Why," when Hugh Dalton asked, "Would it not be a good thing in order to speed up these very slow negotiations for Lord Halifax to proceed to Moscow and have a straightforward discussion with M. Molotoff?"

Mr. Chamberlain replied, "I think we had better await the reply of the Soviet Government to see whether further steps are required."

A communique issued yesterday through Tass, the official Soviet News Agency, suggesting that Britain's plan was one-sided puzzled some observers here. Some believed the communique indicated Russia wanted more than was contained in the note submitted Monday to Foreign Commissar Vyacheslaff Molotoff by the British Ambassador, Sir William Seeds. The communique was the first public acknowledgment in Moscow that negotiations again were in progress.

Tass Agency Statement

The Tass communique cast some light on the British plan, in these words:-

"In these proposals it is not said that the Soviet government should guarantee each neighboring country of the U.S.S.R. separately. It is said that the Soviet government should give immediate assistance to Great Britain and France in case the latter are involved in military operations in connection with engagements assumed with regard to Poland and Rumania.

"However, in the counter-proposals of the British government nothing was said about any assistance which would be received by the Soviet Union on the basis of reciprocity from France and Great Britain if the Soviet Union likewise were involved in military operations as a result of assumed engagements in regard to one or another of the countries of eastern Europe."

SENATOR MEIGHEN

railways have already shown large percentage reductions. In the case of pool trains, for example, there has been shown an operating savings of 33 per cent, though such pool trains still carry the waste of duplication in terminals, yards etc.

"(3)—That in addition to savings in year to year operations new capital requirements for one singly-managed system should be very substantially less than new capital requirements for two competing systems.

"(4)—That assuming the public interest can be protected and essential services maintained, there would seem to be strikingly important opportunities for savings by some plan of unified management in respect to two such systems as now exist in Canada.

Objectives Aimed at

"To ensure the full conservation of every essential public interest and public service, and to safeguard the interests of Canada, the undersigned recommend insistence on the conditions enumerated below in respect of any system of unified management which may be worked out. The undermentioned stipulations are not advanced with any thought that they are all-inclusive. We believe, however, that conditions in Canada, both as affecting the Dominion on the one hand and as affecting the C.P.R. on the other, are such that all necessary and reasonable provisions can be arrived at and agreed upon. The following objectives should be secured:

"There should be no obligation, legal or moral, implied or expressed, whereby the country assumes any liability in respect of C.P.R. obligations or securities, either as to capital or interest.

"Any plan of unified management adopted should be such that the resulting operation can in no sense be dominated by the C.P.R.

Assurance to C.N.R.

"Out of the earnings, up to the average aggregate earnings of both systems over such a period of years as may be agreed upon, the C.N.R. must be assured the same share of such earnings as it has enjoyed of such average earnings;

"Out of earnings above such average earnings, which presumably will be earnings due to economies effected by unified management, the C.N.R. should receive not less than one-half;

"New capital investments, limited as they will be to joint requirements should be provided for on a basis of definite and individual responsibility for respective shares of the capital on the part of the C.N.R. (or the Dominion of Canada), on the one hand, and of the C.P.R. on the other;

"Both parties should agree to such enlargement of the powers and supervision of the Board of Transport Commissioners as may be deemed necessary to protect and serve every public interest;

Protection of Companies and Labor

"In view of the very extensive economies to be attained, and to the end that the process may not involve undue hardship on anyone, provision should be made for the due protection, by both systems, of labor adversely affected by such economies, along lines lately followed by the railways of Great Britain.

"Agreement to all provisions should be obtained from each separate class of security holders of the C.P.R. and of the C.N.R., insofar as such latter security holders are not already protected by government guarantee."

The report concluded with an expression of opinion on the part of its signatories "That on the evidence submitted this country can look only to a system of unified management for relief."

The evidence had demonstrated that relief could in fact be obtained under such a system, provided complete absence of political interference was assured in the statutory terms creating such a system. The report emphasized that all this could be done with "ample and complete protection of all public interests."

Mr. Meighen regretted the impossibility of an unanimous report.

Domestic Problem.

The C.N.R. constituted for the nation "its most obdurate and perilous domestic problem," he said. Canada's outlay to Dec. 31, 1938, on the C.N.R. had exceeded $3,300,000,000, of which the greater part was brought about by yearly deficits. He reviewed those for last year, reminding the committee that the government had written off $838,000,000 as well as failing to receive interest on its advances to the system.

It was fallacious to argue that maintenance of the C.N.R. resulted in giving employment to persons who would otherwise be on relief. Nothing indicated that this excess in expenditure went to those otherwise in need of it, and pursuance of such a policy would lead to "unrestrained wastage in all government departments".

It was inadmissible that the railway deficits were apparent rather than real, and that they were compensated for by the services rendered. Adequate services could be given and were being given by the C.P.R. at no cost to the nation, said Mr. Meighen.

The three methods of voluntary co-operation, enforced co-operation and unification had been suggested to the committee. With regard to voluntary co-operation, five years of effort had produced economies of a "very minor order", Mr. Meighen said.

Suggestion for inforced co-operation was "useless" and the sooner the people realized that co-operation would never effect any substantial economies the better.

With regard to the proposal for unification, it had been objected that such a plan would create a "huge and possibly an oppressive monopoly".

Arguments Against Monopoly.

"To this objection the following arguments from the evidence apply," said Senator Meighen. "For many years large sections of the Dominion not served by both railways have lived under the monopoly, if such it be called, of either the C.N.R. or the C.P.R., and have done so without any perceptible disadvantage.

"The railways have long been stripped of all powers which might rendered any monopolistic feature injurious to the public interest. The Board of Transport commissioners holds by statute supreme authority over them and controls all abandonment of lines, withdrawal or reductions of services, as well as of increase or decreases of rates and fares.

"The development of transportation by means of motor cars and trucks (public and private) and by air and water traffic, has created conditions where even under unified railway operation there would be very effective competition anyway, and competition quite difficult to cope with.

JAMES MILLER'S CAP IS FOUND

Floating on Lake About Five Miles from Where Boat Capsized

Picton, Ont., May 10 (Special)— A cap identified as the property of James Miller, twenty-four-year old youth who with Andrew Goodwin, 50 is believed to have drowned when their eighteen foot motor skiff capsized in Lake Ontario off Waupoos on Sunday, was discovered by Robert Corey, fisherman, floating in Lake Ontario last night, approximately five miles from where the tragedy is believed to have occurred.

Identification of the cap was made by George Miller, brother of one of the missing men.

Powerful underwater lights are being procured by Miller and Daniel Goodwin, Maynooth, brother of Andrew Goodwin, to be used in the search for the bodies. These lights, it is claimed, will on a bright night illuminate the lake bottom in the vicinity of the scene of the tragedy, where fishermen claim, the water is exceptionally clear.

Arrangements are under way, it is reported, to bring a plane from the R.C.A.F. base near Trenton, in the event the bodies are not discovered today.

Parties including Provincial police from Belleville, local police and groups of civilians are conducting a tireless search in the hunt for the missing men. Dragging operations are gradually increasing in a widening area in the hope that underwater currents may have carried the bodies of the missing men some distance from the place where their boat capsized.

Monarch of all he surveys in the equine world following his overwhelming triumph in the Kentucky Derby, Johnstown is seen as he arrived at Maryland's Pimlico track for the running of the Preakness on Saturday. With the Derby tucked away, Johnstown will be striving for a second leg on the 1939 "triple crown", the Derby, Preakness and Belmont Stakes. Last horse to win all three was War Admiral two years ago.

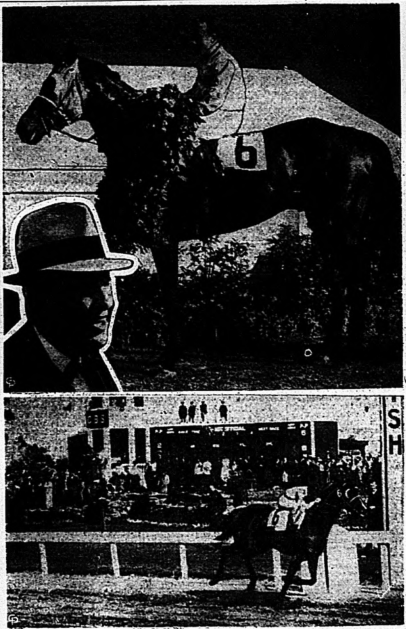
Tiger Safari on Long Island

Here is the end of the first tiger hunt ever staged on New York's Long Island. The big cat, "Colonel", chewed his way out of his wooden cage at the Ringling Brothers' circus at Woodside and roamed the streets, terrifying spectators, until cornered, as shown, ABOVE, in the backyard of a private residence. Circus workers with nets, poles and guns induced the tiger to return home.



The 'big three' of this year's Kentucky Derby, seen after the race, everybody happy. Standing with the wreath of victory around his handsome neck is Johnstown, the winner by a wide margin and the shortest priced favorite to come down in front since Agile in 1905. Up on the winner is jockey Jimmy Stout, successful in the blue ribbon event after three fruitless tries in previous years. Inset, is Jim Fitzsimmons, known in turf circles as Sunny Jim, and sunnier than ever at the conclusion of the race, after Johnstown, the horse he had trained, finished the winner.

Pope Pius Offers Vatican Facilities for Peace Conference

Pope Pius XII has offered to call a peace conference in Vatican City of the prime ministers and foreign ministers of France, Great Britain, Germany, Italy and Poland, according to reports from Paris. His Holiness is reported to have offered to put his palace and staff at the disposal of the plenipotentiaries, but he himself would take no part in the discussions other than to place himself at the disposal of the conference, through his secretary of state, as conciliator, if needed. If such a conference takes place, among those that will attend it will be; Josef Beck, Polish foreign minister, TOP LEFT; Premier Daladier of France, TOP RIGHT; Chancellor Hitler, of Germany, LOWER LEFT; Premier Mussolini, of Italy, LOWER CENTRE; and Prime Minister Chamberlain, LOWER RIGHT.

Port of Southampton, England

When British and United States airlines begin regular transatlantic air service this summer the port of Southampton, England, and Hattie's Camp, Newfoundland, will be the busiest of places. Hattie's Camp will be used as the last "jumping-off" place for planes eastward bound over the Atlantic and the first port for planes west bound. Southampton will be the goal for planes taking off from America and the starting point for westbound ships. British Imperial Airways already is conducting extensive courses for its Atlantic pilots. One class, conducted by Squadron Leader E. F. Godsave, is shown in session at the Southampton air school.

Jake's Luck

By MARTIE RAMSON

Ya can say what ya want about guys havin' a lot of tough luck, but if ya ask me, I think that Jake Daubert was the original "Hard Luck Kid."

Poor Jake tried a million ways to make a killin', but like Jake himself will tell ya "Some guys are just lucky, everything they touch turns to gold, but me, everything I touch they tell be ta put back."

Jake owns two horses. They're good horses, mind ya. But there's two things Jake can't do. He can't win a race with a purse bigger than a grand and he can't get better'n even money on his nags every time they run. The horses in their own class were outstanding, and to race them in races for grade A horses—well, there's no percentage in that for Jake 'cause they wouldn't win and he'd only be blowin' the entry fee. So Jake figgers what he can do to get a price on his horse in the fourth race of Saturday's meet. The purse is only a grand and Jake can't see where he can make any money after he pays stable expenses, entry fees and the jockey. So he's gotta get a win ticket on Lobo and get a price that'll make him some dough.

It's fifteen minutes before three o'clock and post time for the fourth race in three twenty. Lobo is up on the odds calculator at two to one. Doran, a swell lookin' little bay horse is in there at three to one and Home Girl is five to one. Home Girl beat Lobo once, but it was on a muddy track, and the track today is dry and fast which Home Girl one. Jake likes this and pretty soon goes out an' gets ten fifty dollar tickets on Lobo to win. Jake knows darn' well that there ain't nothin' wrong with the horse's foot, 'cause don't like, so the only real worry Lobo's got is Doran. Pretty soon a rumor goes around by some guy that's seen Lobo in the stable an' says the horse has got an abscess on hsi leg an 'it's in a bandage. He says it must be pretty bad.

Well, it don't take a rumor long to get around, and soon a lot of dough is chalked up on Doran and Home Girl which changes the odds on Lobo to four to one—then six to he wrapped that bandage around, himself.

Besides, Jake figgers Lobo could outrun anything in that race even if he had to run on three legs. So when the horses go to the post an' Jake is down for five hundred to win at six to one, he's feelin' pretty good. What Jake doesn't know is that "Pitch" Ormal who owns Doran is just as anxious to win as Jake is. Pitch is bettin' a grand on Doran to win at three to one.

Pitch an' Jake meet just about the time that the horses are ready to go, an' Pitch asks Jake why he don't scratch a horse when he's gotta bum foot. "Runnin' that horse a mile ain't gonna help the foot any," says Pitch. "Why don't ya take a little pity on the horse?"

"Say" retorts Jake, "Lobo could outrun that skate o' yours on three legs."

"Well, I don't like to take advantage of ya, Jake, but whatta ya got to back that up?"

"Back it up? Say, tell ya what I'll do. Bet ya Lobo against Doran, an' the purse that goes to the winner goes with it. The guy that backs out is a bum."

"Jake, you just made yourself a good bet. You're on." And they bind the bet with a handshake, that's all. But a handshake was all that was needed, 'cause each guy knew that the other would keep his word.

Pretty soon the horses are off. Doran takes a lead on the field an' holds it around to the quarter turn. Just about there, Home Girl takes a neck lead with Deer Fly second an' Doran third. Nothin' to worry about 'cause there ain't a whole horse's length separatin' the three horses. But about four lengths in back was Lobo. Generally Jake doesn't worry none on account of Lobo bein' a stretch runner an' a mile is a long way to go, but he ain't never seen Lobo this far in back. He wasn't worried about Lobo's leg, 'cause he knew the horse was in perfect shape. Coming around the far turn, Doran starts runnin'. So does Lobo for that matter, but he can't run fast enough to make up all tha ground. He'd done it before, but somehow it looks as if his legs just couldn't get goin'. Well, to make it short an' sweet, Doran finishes in front with Deer Fly second an' Lobo third.

"Well," Pitch says to Jake, "looks like I'll have a job on my hands tryin' to fix up Lobo's bum leg."

"Yeah, you win, Pitch," says Jake. "But there ain't nothin' wrong with the horse's leg. That was just a gag of mine to try an' get a bigger price. I can't figger out why the horse wouldn't run. I've seen it beat that kinda time by three seconds, just breezin'. Guess I never will be able to figger out what's what."

Pitch smiled. If only Jake knew that his jockey bought a half interest in Pitch's stable the day before the race.

CARS TO BE USED BY ROYAL PARTY PASS THRU CITY

Four sleek aristocrats of royal motordom, gleaming in royal purple in spite of pouring rain that swept steadily down from sullen skies, passed through the city Tuesday enroute to Ottawa from Camp Borden. They are the cars purchased by the Canadian Government for the use of King George and Queen Elizabeth during their Canadian tour.

The cavalcade was accompanied by a military truck and a motorcycle escort of Highway Traffic Officers Robert Wood and William Dean. Arriving at the Royal Canadian Air Force Base at Trenton at 1.15 p.m. the cavalcade halted for an hour for refueling purposes and transfer of escort.

Highway Traffic Officers Sam Ervine, Belleville, and H. Jillings, Napanee, took over the official escort duties at this point and accompanied the cavalcade to Ottawa.

The royal crest of His Majesty King George gleamed on the front of one car in lieu of a licence plate. Two others bore the crest of Queen Elizabeth, while the front of the fourth car was bare except for a blue light, which will serve warning at night that the King's car is approaching.

Accompanied By Cars

The cavalcade was escorted from Trenton by a long line of private automobiles filled with curious citizens. Houses along the line of route likewise had their quota of residents who took advantage of the unusual opportunity to glimpse the cars.

Interest in the equipages reached a high point during the early afternoon as residents of the city kept Ontario Intelligencer telephones ringing steadily with queries. Despite the rain that fell steadily during the afternoon and the threat of a heavy electric storm, streets were filled with the curious as the royal cars passed through the city. It was the first concrete intimation that the Royal Visit was but a week or so away, and Belleville did not intend to miss any opportunity of seeing the remotest feature connected with it.

From as early as eleven o'clock in the morning when the news became general that the royal cars would pass through the city, crowds lined the sidewalks at the Front Street-Bridge Street intersection. At noon hundreds waited anxiously but as rumors became rife that the cars had been delayed, the crowd gradually dispersed. A few of the hardier ones however waited faithfully in the rain that began to fall shortly after twelve o'clock in the hope of catching a glimpse of the handsome equipages that will convey Their Majesties during their visit to Canada.

Highway Lined

At Albert College where the transfer of escort was originally scheduled to take place, the highway was lined with automobiles and curious pedestrians. Traffic at this point increased as city residents, unable to restrain their curiosity, drove through to Trenton only to meet further disappointment.

Provincial Police officers and members of the R.C.M.P. Belleville Detachment were on duty near Albert College, while Traffic Officers Ervine and Jillings anxiously awaited their first duty connected with the visit of Their Majesties.

Original instructions to the escorts were to the effect that they would assume charge of the royal cars at this point, but later in the morning instructions were received to the effect that they were to officially take over at Trenton. Highway Traffic Officers Wood and Dean, however, accompanied their fellow officers as far as the Trenton base of the R.C.A.F.

King's Crest

Mounted above the windshield of the royal car in which the King will ride, will always be the King's crest, ABOVE, with the royal standard flying from a short staff above the crest. At night a blue light will illuminate the fluttering standard.

An advisory committee, including producer representatives, was a vital element in that plan, he said, under which committee, board and cabinet together determined the guaranteed wheat price. He urged that be done again this year about Aug. 1, instead of provoking "a cat-and-dog fight" in the House by trying to set the price there.

Debate Continued

Mr. Motherwell delivered his appraisal of the situation yesterday as the House continued debate on the acreage bonus bill and the Wheat Board amendment. The former bill was given second reading and progressed part way through the committee stage of detailed consideration.

If that bill is given third reading today, the House will proceed with the 70-cent Wheat Board Act amendment, most contentious of the government's wheat bills.

Mr. Motherwell's opposition brought to three the Liberals who have declared their intention of voting against the 70-cent bill. W. J. Ward (Dauphin) and Harry Leader (Portage la Prairie) earlier announced their convictions in that regard.

Too Many in Charge

The veteran parliamentarian, who was Saskatchewan Minister of Agriculture from 1905 to 1918 and Dominion Minister from 1921 to 1930, asserted the "Nigger in the wood pile" was the anomalous fact that both the Minister of Agriculture and the Minister of Trade and Commerce dealt with agricultural matters. That had been a perpetual source of trouble for 40 years.

"As long as you have two ministers dealing with agriculture, you are going to have commissions and investigations. You are going to have trouble at every turn and you will never remedy the condition until you have all agriculture under the one minister," he said.

While there was a large section of the cabinet opposed to the Wheat Board, there was another strong element, represented by Agriculture Minister Gardiner, that favored helping agriculture all over Canada by every means at the disposal of the government.

Not Selling West

The reason Mr. Gardiner had tried to sell the idea of 60-cent wheat was simply that there was no other man the government could have sent out to do it, he said. Mr. Gardiner's co-operative bills were testimony that he was not trying to sell out the west, as had been charged. "A man cannot be friendly to co-operative action and unfriendly to a Wheat Board," Mr. Motherwell said.

The farmers of the west had been seeking a permanent Wheat Board for 20 years and in 1935 thought they had it. "Let us go back to first principles. Do not decline to do something simply because it was a Tory government that did it previously," he urged.

"I am afraid the government is anxious, very anxious to appease two certain prominent gentlemen at the head of the governments of Ontario and Quebec. To appease them they are raising cain about this thing. ......Do not make a Czecho-Slovakia of the three Prairie Provinces. That would not be fair. They have stood up as long as they had strength in their body to stand up."

He suggested a small tax on domestically-consumed flour as well as the small proposed tax on wheat as a means to building a reserve fund to take care of any deficit, so agriculture would not be humiliated by begging, as it was doing.

Reform Always Difficult

Reform was always difficult, he said. He had tried his best as a member of the cabinet and as a private member to obtain a remedy but so far had "not got to first base."

"Half a loaf is better than no bread," he added in saying he appreciated the change from a 60-cent initial price to a 70 cent price.

Through government restriction during the war, the wheat price had been kept down to $2.50 and wheat growers had been deprived of $600,000,000 possible profit. That should be kept in mind.

Mr. Motherwell predicted even the estimated loss of $25,000,000 on this year's crop might vanish under steadily rising prices. Then he could not understand the attitude of alarm.

Mr. Motherwell said he wanted very much to vote for the Wheat Board amendment, setting a 70-cent minimum, but he could not vote for that bill the way it was.

John Blackmore, Social Credit leader, deplored a tendency to assume that support for farmers could be deferred by putting them on a subsistence level. Civilization would be endangered if farmers were put in a position where they could no longer raise families they once raised.

ONTARIO PRIMPING

plans reveals something out of the ordinary.

In Toronto, where King George and Queen Elizabeth will spend a busy May 22, lining of the 28-mile parade route with stands—in some cases advertised as "bleachers"—has become big business. So has the renting of window-space, roof-tops hotel rooms and even floors of office buildings.

Space Advertised

Contractors appeal through newspaper advertisements to "call us for an estimate" on stands, and they'll build them on lots, lawns or roofs if you want. "Royal Route Vantage Points" is a standard heading now in the classified advertising section of the metropolitan dailies.

Window-space is selling fast from $1 without any trimmings to $5 and $10 for "excellent" vantage points with refreshments. For a little more than the "standard" price, a window-space-renter offers a picture of the Sovereigns. Some downtown office floors are available for $50.

The King and Queen will arrive at the North Toronto station which hasn't been used for passenger traffic for years and the first persons to see them leave there will be those on the roof of a Yonge Street dog hospital opposite the station entrance.

A beer warehouse at the rear of the station will be locked for the day, though the reception at the station lasts only a few minutes, and not even employees will be allowed inside the warehouse during the day.

Use Proceeds For Pool

Hamilton, Stratford and Sudbury are building bleachers for the royal visit. At Hamilton, where 100,000 are expected June 7 a service club is building a stand for 7,000 at the Civic Stadium with seats at $2 each. The proceeds will be used to build a swimming pool for children.

A feature of the Ontario tour will be the visit to Toronto of the Dionne quintuplets. They are coming from their Callander home in a special train with their own retinue like the King and Queen. It will be their first train ride and they will be presented to the King and Queen at Queen's Park. Coming with them are their nurses, their father and mother and the other Dionne children.

Towns Disappointed

A big disappointment to Cornwall and Brockville residents was the announcement yesterday the royal train will not stop as scheduled at the two Eastern Ontario cities. The inter-departmental committee on the royal visit said the cancellation was made because of "imperative necessity of affording Their Majesties greater opportunity for rest at the end of the first week in Canada." Extensive preparations had been made for the accommodation of visitors.

Thousands of school children—in many of the centres they are the No. one spectators—will be gathered in favored spots, notably at Niagara Falls and Windsor. Brantford has declared a holiday for June 7. Kingston is preparing for a crowd of nearly 200,000 and there will be accommodation for 20,000 at Fort Henry where Their Majesties will attend divine service.

Italy Making Effort To Bring Yugoslavia Into the Axis Orbit

Rome, May 10—(AP)—Italy is expected to make a new effort to bring Yugoslavia into the German-Italian-Japanese anti-comintern front in diplomatic negotiations opening here today.

The discussions, with Prince Regent Paul and Foreign Minister Alexander Cinca-Markovich of Yugoslavia, also may touch on a Hungarian-Yugoslav non-aggression treaty. Cinca-Markovich and the Italian Foreign Minister, Count Galeazzo Ciano, discussed this point last month at Venice.

Interest centred upon whether Prince Paul would become a full-fledged abherent of the anti-comintern agreement. Some diplomats thought he would be reluctant to do so at this time.

Among political observers there was a feeling that hope had increased somewhat for peaceful settlement of Europe's many disputes. Several diplomats believed that negotiations the Vatican is conducting through its Papal Nuncios in the various capitals may open the way for a general discussion of international ills.

The kind of people who suffer temporary reverses in years of bad luck, and yet who never falter in their belief that all will eventually come out right.

Saskatchewan: Set one of the world's records for rush to farm lands — increased her population ten times over from 1901 to 1931 — mighty producer of wheat and all other grains — enormous grower of live-stock (exported in 1937, 230,000 tons of them) — has 77,000 acres under irrigation, mostly in what was formerly known as "the dust bowl" of the West. She has mines of gold, copper, zinc — traps a million dollars worth of fur-bearing animals — has her share of that almost fabulous gift, the Pre-Cambrian Shield.

She is beginning to develop her own manufacturing activities, and Eastern industrialists are establishing within her borders their Western plants for making paints, motor cars; others are on the way.

Mist So Thick 'Empress' Can Not See Convoys Only Short Distance Away

Fog Will Not Delay Arrival As Two Days' Time in Schedule Allowed for Such Conditions

By R. K. CARNEGIE
Canadian Press Staff Writer

Aboard R.M.S. Empress of Australia, May 11—(CP)—Dense fog settled over Empress of Australia and her convoying cruisers today, forcing the vessels to heave-to 350 miles off Cape Race, most easterly point in Newfoundland.

The Empress, carrying the King and Queen to Canada for a month's tour of the Dominion and the United States, ran into the fog bank at 10 a.m. G.M.T. (6 a.m. E.D.T.) Fo ra time the big liner and its convoy, the cruisers Southampton and Glasgow, proceeded at slow speed but as the fog became denser were forced to stop.

Sirens, Whistles Blown

So thick was the mist those aboard the Empress could not see the cruisers a short distance away. The warships' sirens could be heard, punctuated by the piercing scream of the Empress' whistle which was blown at frequent intervals.

No fear was held that the arrival of Their Majesties at Quebec would be delayed. The liner's schedule was drawn up to permit two days' leeway in the event of a delay. It is due at Quebec Monday morning.

At 3 p.m. GMT (11 a.m. EDT) the Empress still was held up by the

Why the Weather!

By Major A. H. Thiessen
Service Service Meteorologist

Value of long-range forecasting! What the weather will be ten days in advance, next month, next season, or some season next year is of great economic importance. Hence the very great interest in this subject. Dealers in winter goods would like to know now how to order for next winter. Should they lay in more than the usual stock of heavy overcoats, blankets, overshoes, fuel, snowshovels, and other articles of winter use? Or should they buy lightly? Will next year be a good season for hay and grain? If a good season, then a moderate acreage may be planted, but if a poor season, then a larger acreage will be required to meet the demand.

Musical Toast Awaits King, Queen In United States

New York, May 11—(CP)—A musical toast to King George and Queen Elizabeth, bespeaking the welcome that awaits "that glorious pair" when they reach the United States next month, is on the song-sheet stands today. The chorus of the song, not of the swing variety, follows:

"Oh, the King, God save Him and the Queen,
"God bless her, we're proud to welcome her here;
"Of all the couples in this wide, wide world,
"They're the ones that we hold most dear;
"So rise to a man and fill your glasses

"Three cheers, we'll say hip-hip-hooray
"For the King and Queen from over there."

COMMON ACTION IS NEEDED FOR SAKE OF PEACE

Britain, France and Russia See Necessity of Safeguards

DALADIER SPEAKS

There is No Sacrifice to Which France is Not Ready to Consent

Paris, May 11 (CP-Havas)—France considers it "essentially desirable" that Russia participate in the anti-aggression bloc, Premier Edouard Daladier declared today.

At the outset of the talks now underway among London, Paris and Moscow all three nations admitted the necessity "to safeguard by common action the superior interests of peace," he told parliament.

Addressing the Senate and Chamber of Deputies in joint session at the first meeting in the new term of President Albert Lebrun, the premier said French policy is devoted solely to the maintenance of peace.

Anglo-French Solidarity.

He added that Anglo-French solidarity was closer than ever and paid tribute to the British government for its recent decision to enforce obligatory military service.

Earlier President Lebrun declared in an address to the joint session that "none must doubt France's unshakeable resolve to back her rights with strength worthy of herself."

Lebrun reiterated France's "ardent and sincere wish for peace" but warned the parliament that "the future still is uncertain."

Both his message and one to be delivered also by Premied Edouard Daladier were approved unanimously by the cabinet.

Lebrun emphasized the government's program to increase production and work for national defence.

BURIED IN SAND IN HOPPER, LIVES

15-Year-Old John Bradley, of Windsor, is Recovering

Windsor, Ont., May 11—(CP)—John Bradley, 15, nearly suffocated when buried in sand in a loading hopper last night, was reported in good condition in hospital here today. Bradley was buried from the waist up for five minutes. He was rescued by the combined strength of three men pulling on his elgs which had passed through the narrow opening of the horizontal loading gates.

Breathing only faintly when rescued, the boy was given artificial respiration before removal to hospital. He suffered head cuts while passing through the opening as well as shock and bruises. A 16-year-old playmate, Bruce McDaniel, who summoned aid, told police he and Bradley were jumping from a tower into the sand when it gave away.

Cud Hindmarsh, Alex Goldberg and James Thompson were credited with saving the lad.

Czechs Forced to Move to Germany, Germans Pour into Protectorate

Copyright 1939
By The Havas News Agency

Zurich, Switzerland, May 11—(CP-Havas)—Travellers from the provinces of Bohemia and Moravia—part of the former Czecho-Slovakia—today declared Germany has embarked upon a methodical plan for the "Germanization" of the provinces by compelling Czechs to move to Germany proper while more and more Germans pour into the protectorate.

In addition to close control over the press and other propaganda and cultural instruments, as well as increasing participation in Czech industry and business, Germans are increasingly entering the public administration, they declared.

Scores of minor officials from Germany and the Sudetenland are arriving in Prague and 10 are already working in the public works ministry alone, it was said.

These travellers told Havas that the office of Baron Von Neurath, Reichs Protector of Bohemia and Moravia, tends to take control of all Czech administrative bureaus. The staff occupies 160 offices including those of the Ministry of Education in Hradschin Palace.

They added Germany has decided against a plebiscite in the protectorate but prefers to support the pro-German policy of President Emil Hacha by formation of a single national union party which all are compelled to join.

Czechs interested in world political developments are reduced to getting news by word of mouth or by letters filtering through the postal censorship, it was added.

Control of foreign exchange is exercised by Germans who, it was stated, have purchased a predominant interest in Czech heavy industries with Czech banknotes seized in the Sudetenland.

Queen Mother Attends Lecture

This is one of the most recent photographs of England's beloved Queen Mother. She was pictured thus as she arrived at a Welfare Society lecture on "Inside Buckingham Palace", in Londonderry House, London. A few days later Queen Mary travelled to Portsmouth to say farewell to her son, King George, and her daughter-in-law, Queen Elizabeth, as the royal couple sailed for Canada.

Postpone League Council Meeting to Await Commissar

Geneva, May 11—(AP)—At the request of Soviet Russia the League of Nations today postponed its council session, originally set for next Monday, until a week later.

Russia was understood to have asked the postponement both to give Vladimir P. Potemkin, assistant Foreign Commissar, time to reach Geneva after reporting on his recent near eastern tour and to permit conversations with other powers on problems to be considered.

London, May 11—(CP)—Diplomatic sources said today that inability of Russia to dispatch her Foreign Commissar to Geneva in time for the League of Nations Council session scheduled for Monday might result in postponement of the session.

Significance was attached to the development, as British officials had hoped Foreign Secretary Viscount Halifax' meeting at Geneva with Soviet representatibes would facilitate negotiations seeking to bring Russia into the Anglo-French anti-aggression front.

During the night, diplomats said, London was advised that its request for either Foreign Commissar Vyacheslaff Molotoff or Vice-Commissar Vladimir Potemkin to represent Moscow at Geneva could not be granted, due to lack of time for adequate preparations.

Would Delay Council

The British government then opened a series of telephone communications, the same sources said, with a view to postponing the council session for a week so that Potemkin could attend and preside.

It was generally believed here that Potemkin would be named Foreign Commissar during the interim, succeeding Maxim Litvinoff and relieving Premier Molotoff of the burden of holding two offices.

If the Geneva meeting is postponed, it was understood, the intervening week will be used to promote diplomatic exchanges of views in the hope that by the time the session takes place conclusion of an agreement with Russia will be a mere formality.

In Paris diplomatic circles Britain and France were reported to have promised Poland that the League Council session would not be used to make a "painless" change in the statute covering the Free City of Danzig so as to satisfy Germany.

The Free City technically is under league protection and lies within the Polish customs administration. Danzig is former German territory and Germany wants it back.

British newspapers regarded Britain and Russia as agreed in principle but pending consultation over the details of Russian inclusion in the anti-axis front.

Engine Trouble Cause of Plane Crash

Besancon, France, May 11—(AP)—The official board of inquiry investigating the crash last night of a German warplane near the Besancon military base reported today the two fliers killed were officers of the German air force.

It found that the accident resulted from engine trouble during a fog.

The fliers were reported to have been in civilian clothes. Two smashed machine guns were removed from the wreckage for examination.

Low Temperatures at Timmins

Timmins, Ont., May 11—(CP)—Following a period during which the temperatures went as high as 84 degrees above zero, winter returned to the Porcupine camp last night bringing freeding temperatures and an inch and a half of snow. During the night the temperature fell to 25 degrees above. The snow gradually melted away although the temperature was still low.

DANDURAND PLAN FOR CO-OPERATION OF RAILS CARRIES

Would Provide Referee to Enforce Co-operation in Case of Disagreement

'REDUCE PARTISANSHIP'

R. R. Committee Constituted in 1938 Winds Up Business Today

Ottawa, May 11 (CP)—By a vote of seven to six the special committee of the senate which has been probing Canada's railway condition today adopted the report of government leader Dandurand.

The report urges a greater measure of co-operation between the Canadian National and Canadian Pacific Railways, together with appointment of a referee to enforce that co-operation in case of disagreement.

The "minority" report read yesterday to the committee by Conservative leader Meighen was not discussed today and was not put forward as an amendment. Minority reports could not emerge from the House committees, Senator Dandurand explained. Opportunity would present itself to deal with Mr. Meighen's document, which recommended unified railway management when the committee's report was debated in the senate.

ENGLISH, SCOTTISH GIRLS WILL TOUR

One Hundred Included in Plan for Canadian Visit

Toronto, May 11—(CP)—Lillian Watson, Secretary of the Overseas Education League of Canada, announced today that plans were completed for a Canadian tour this summer of 100 girls from English and Scottish schools. The group will include two cricket teams from Harrogate Ladies College, Yorkshire, and Doedean Ladies College near Brighton.

A first group of approximately 70 will sail from Liverpool July 28. The remainder leave Aug. 5.

The tour is under the auspices of the Overseas Education League with those taking part paying their own expenses.

Miss Watson said that due to lack of girls' cricket teams in Canada, it was most probable that the two English teams would compete among themselves at various points during the Dominion trip.

"Dangerous" Transient Sought by Police

Brockville, Ont., May 11—(CP)—Police throughout this district today sought a man between 30 and 35 years of age, believed to be a transient, who is alleged to have criminally attacked an eight-year-old girl as she was returning to her home along a lonely road near New Boyne, Leeds County. The alleged attack took place Monday afternoon and Provincial Constable Franks has spent two days in the New Boyne section carrying out an investigation. He described the man as "dangerous." It is understood that no physical injury was suffered by the girl.

Britain Sincere In Military Pledges, Europe Warned

If Europe Were Convinced Britain and France Were Insincere it Would be "Deadly Mistake"

NO PLOT TO MAKE WAR

Britain Not Prepared to Stand by and See Nation After Nation Lose Independence, Says Premier

By J. F. SANDERSON
Canadian Press Staff Writer

London, May 11—(CP Cable)—Prime Minister Chamberlain today warned that any attempt to change the status of the Free City of Danzig by force in such a way as to "threaten Polish independence" inevitably would start a general war in which Britain would be involved.

At the same time the Prime Minister, addressing a mass meeting of women Conservatives in Albert Hall, reiterated an assurance that the government had no desire to encircle Germany.

Mr. Chamberlain said "it never has been a part of our policy to be meddlesome busybodies interfering in other peoples' concerns."

British Assurance Clear

Regarding Danzig, the Prime Minister said:

"In many minds the danger spot in Europe today is Danzig where our assurances to Poland are clear and concise. Although we would be glad to see the differences between Poland and Germany amicably settled by discussion, although we think that they could and should be settled, if any attempt were made to change the situation by force in such a way as to threaten Polish independence, that would inevitably start a general conflagration in which

BRITAIN GIVES RUMANIA CREDITS

Oliver Stanley, President of Board of Trade, Announces Agreement in House

London, May 11 (CP)—Great Britain and Rumania have signed a trade agreement, Oliver Stanley, president of the Board of Trade, announced in the House of Commons today. Britain will advance credits of £5,000,000 (about $23,000,000) to Rumania under terms of the agreement.

Britain will purchase 200,000 tons of Rumanian wheat. A similar amount purchased from Rumania last autumn forms part of Britain's emergency supply of foodstuffs.

The credit of £5,000,000 will not be in the form of a loan but as a government-backed credit to be spent in this country for British goods.

Mr. Stanley said the protocol of the agreement was signed in Bucharest today following the recent successful visit of a British trade mission.

It was expected Rumania mainly would purchase armaments with her credits.

Britain pushed the agreement as part of her campaign to offset Chancellor Hitler's economic penetration of central and southeastern Europe. (The British Trade Mission was sent to Bucharest after Rumania and Germany signed a trade agreement.)

Man's Arrival is Pre-Dated By Finding of Fine Dart Point

Albuquerque, N.M., May 11—(AP)—Anthropologists found evidence today that prehistoric "old timer"—predating even the 10,000-year-old Folsom man—may have roamed the Rio Grande Valley of New Mexico when camels and elephants romped the western plains.

Frank Hibben, University of New Mexico anthropologist, gave official credence to such probability today as a result of discovery of a finely finished dart point in a Sandia Mountains cave just east of Albuquerque.

"There can be no doubt of the importance of this find," Dr. Hibben said, "nor of the possibility that we may have to move the date of man's entry into America back once more."

The dart was found some weeks ago by archeological students in a cave sealed by stalagmitic material, which Dr. Hibben said precluded any possibility of deposit since the pleistocene age. Unofficially it was estimated to have been made somewhere between 10,000 and 25,000 years ago.

MAY CHANGE BILL TO INCLUDE ALL EAST PROVINCES

Eastern Farmers May Obtain Minimum Price of 70 cts. for Wheat by Amendment

BONUS BILL PASSES

Ottawa, May 11—(CP)—The government was considering today the advice of a western Liberal member not to pay too much attention to Prairie petitions urging a minimum wheat price higher than the 70 cents a bushel which the government proposes.

"If the government is going to be forced to direct its policy upon the basis of such petitions as it may receive, then I do not know why it should continue trying to carry on," W. G. Weir (Lib. MacDonald) said last night during debate on the Wheat Board Bill. "After all, other sections of Canada can make representations by way of petitions."

"And they do," added Justice Minister Lapointe.

Mr. Weir endorsed the 70-cent clause in the widely and hotly-debated bill as a "fair compromise between what was paid last year and what would be a proper price for this year." He did not think any party in power could obtain a higher price from parliament.

May Add Amendment

At the same time, he warned "if it is not adequate, there are many things in Western Canada which will have to be dealt with in the light of the present provision for the prices of Western Canada wheat."

Trade Minister Euler told the House the bill will be changed in committee to put beyond doubt the intention to extend the scope of the act to include the eastern provinces.

CITY POLICE ARE CALLED TO PLANT

Pickets Barred Gates but Inspectors Finally Allowed to Enter

Kitchener, Ont., May 11 (CP)—City police were called to the strike-bound plant of the E. F. Goodrich Rubber Company of Canada today when pickets barred the gates to fifteen men employed by the company as tire and footwear inspectors.

The company said action of the pickets violated an understanding reached yesterday when Union leaders were said to have promised that foremen and inspectors would not be barred from the plant. Following the appearance of police at the plant, opposition to the entrance of the inspectors melted and the men went into work.

Meanwhile the return to the city of M. S. Campbell, chief conciliation officer of the Federal Department of Labor, was awaited. Mr. Campbell left for Ottawa yesterday after submitting proposals for a settlement to both factions. The proposals, he said, would "automatically end" the strike if accepted.

Nature of the proposals was not revealed and it could not be ascertained whether or not the proposals were acceptable to the company or the strikers.

HANDS OF CITY CLOCK FAVORITE PERCHING PLACE FOR BIRDS

One of the rustic sights in the city this morning was the pastoral scene of five blackbirds sitting in a row on the large hand of the clock face on the south side of the city hall tower. The hands of the clock this year have been a favorite roosting place for all manner of birds, and many strange visitors have so far been reported at the city hall by Pat Webber, naturalist caretaker.

SEVERAL BOAT OWNERS PLAN TRIP TO KINGSTON BY WATER

Crowded roads or completely blocked highways will have no interest for several residents of Belleville who intend visiting Kingston on May 21st, on the occasion of the visit to that city of the King and Queen, for these residents have announced their intention of taking the trip to Kingston by water. Efforts were being made this week by the owner of one craft to have a small flotilla of boats journey together to that city, but it is believed few of the craft will be ready for the water by then.

ZWICK'S IS. SCARRED WITH MANY TRENCHES

Reminiscent of a miniature battlefield scarred with tiny trenches, Zwick's Island has undergone a decided change in its landscaping during the past week or so following the planting of thousands of trees sent here by the Ontario Forestry Department. This week further planting of hard maple seedlings was being carried out on Wellington Street near the old fair grounds. A total of 1,200 of these trees are expected to be planted in this location.

FREIGHTER UNLOADS VARIETY CARGO

Window glass in sturdy wooden boxes stencilled with the heavy print of a Belgian manufacturer and addressed to local hardware stores. Tons of sugar and cases and kegs of beer from Montrela, were all unloaded by local stevedores from the packet carrier Glen Allan at the government dock yesterday afternoon on the second call of this little ship to the local port. Heavy loadings so far carried by the Belleville and Trenton to Montreal carrier are looked upon by harbor officials as a good augury for the season ahead.

Today the Government buoy carrier, Steamer Grenville, at work in the Bay of Quinte picked up the several large channel buoys stored at the government dock during the winter and proceeded to place them in their proper locations in the lower section of the bay. Yesterday this well-equipped ship which has for some time past been engaged in lake marking and channel buoy setting at the Port of Toronto, was at work in the bay west of the bay bridge.

SCHOOLTEACHERS VISIT WOODS IN SEARCH OF SPRING FLOWERS

Mayflowers are blooming. Woods are carpeted with green, trees are budding and within a few days will be in full leaf. Gorgeous white trilliums, gleaming pure-white against the greens of woodland grass, with the blues and other shares of spring-flowers making a colorful contrast, are making the woods things of beauty these last Spring days.

Yesterday a party of school teachers made their annual trek to the woods of the district and returned flower-laden, including some beautiful specimens of the trillium. Early and late flowers were plentiful they said, while tree foliage was losing no time in making itself seen.

Plumbers at the present time are experiencing a bonanza season, according to the manager of one firm. Lately many alterations in homes within the city have called for the taking out of outmoded plumbing and replacing this with the latest streamlined and pastel-shaded equipment. Many ambitious color schemes have been worked out in the majority of the newer homes or the older ones being remodeled, it was stated.

ASSAULT CHARGE FOLLOWS FIGHT

Gordon Mayers, Marlbank, in Kingston Hospital With Possible Fractured Neck

Following an alleged assault upon Gordon Mayers, Marlbank, Gordon Dennison, of the same village, was arrested last evening by Chief Constable J. C. Hayes of Tweed and placed in the Hastings County jail on a charge of assault causing actual bodily harm. Mayers was rushed to the Hotel Dieu, Kingston, where it is feared he is suffering from a dislocated neck and other severe bruises, said by Chief Hayes to have been inflicted by Dennison during a fight.

Chief Hayes today informed Crown Attorney B. C. Donnan K.C., that Mayers and Dennison became involved in an argument over a woman, Dennison having met Mayers on the road near Marlbank and invited him to "settle matters here and now." The two are said to have engaged in a fight, during which Dennison is alleged to have bested Mayers and subsequently inflicted the injuries. Dennison is being held without bail at the present time, Crown Attorney Donnan added this afternoon.

Search for Bodies Of Drowned Men Continued Today

R.C.A.F. Plane Used Along With Dragging Operations by Fishermen

A Royal Air Force plane roared over the city today from its base at Trenton, enroute to Waupoos, Prince Edward County, where it conducted searching operations along the rock-bound shore in an eleventh-hour hunt for the bodies of James Miller and Andrew Goodwin, Picton residents believed drowned early Sunday when their eighteen foot motor skiff capsized two miles from the mainland.

Provincial Police Constable Everett Smith, accompanied the pilot when he left for the scene of the tragedy early this morning.

Large parties of provincial and local police and private citizens including fishermen of the district resumed dragging operations early today. These operations have widened to a larger area following the finding of Miller's cap floating in the water yesterday approximately five miles from the place where the boat is said to have capsized.

Miss Margaret Goodwin, Reg. N., night supervisor at Prince Edward County Hospital, daughter of the missing Andrew Goodwin, stated last night that her father had been an excellent swimmer. Miller could not swim a stroke, she said, declaring her belief in the theory that her father might have gone to Miller's rescue, and in the subsequent attempt at rescue both had gone to their deaths.

The water is very cold, however, Miss Goodwin added, and both men may have been numbed with cold and shock at the sudden immersion.

In the event of search parties and airmen failing to locate the missing men today, powerful underwater lights brought expressly for the purpose will be used tonight in an effort to find the bodies

CHOIR REHEARSES

In preparation for their work when they will be part of a choir of 650 voices that will sing at the service held next Sunday in Kingston Cathedral during the annual meeting of the Synod of the Diocese of Ontario one hundred and five members of Christ Church, St. Thomas' Church Belleville; Anglican churches of Wellington, Trenton, Picton and Shannonville choirs held a joint rehearsal in St. Thomas' Parish Hall last night.

The rehearsal was held under the direction of the choirleader of Kingston Cathedral, with Mr. E. Wheatley, A.R.C.O., organist of St. Thomas' Church providing the accompaniment.

The joint choirs rehearsed for two hours, after which refreshments were served by the ladies of St. Thomas' Church.

TO MAKE FINAL PLANS

Final plans for the school childrens' excursion from Belleville to Kingston on the morning of May 21st are expected to be made at a general meeting being held in the Y.M.C.A. this evening at eight o'clock by the committee in charge. All citizens are invited to attend the meeting and advance any suggestion which might be in the best interest of the children.

The congratulations and best wishes of the community are extended to Mr. and Mrs. Ray Cook (nee Violet Gray of Belleville) who were married in Deseronto on Wednesday afternoon.

Mrs. Wallace Robertson was a Thursday afternoon guest of Mr. and Mrs. George Leverton.

Local ball players have began warming up their old "Soup bones" in preparation for the baseball season and although they report the customary soreness following the first spring practice they are waiting with bated breath for the opening of the South Hasting league. No date has been set as yet for the annual meeting of the league Dr. H. E. Eckhardt said this morning although he expected word at any time. Last year the league did not open on the twenty-fourth of May as it formerly had and some people are of the opinion that the twenty-fourth of May is the best day to begin the schedule. Shannonville has fond hopes of capturing the South Hastings league cup this year and they should have a much stronger team than they did last summer as all the players have gained valuable experience and confidence which are two of the main assets to any athlete.

THE ROYAL VOYAGE

King George Sixth, who served in the Royal Navy during the Great War, knows a great deal of weather on the ocean wave and the buffeting of the liner Empress of Australia in a sixty-mile-an-hour gale did no daunt his spirits nor those of the Queen who is herself accustomed to the sea.

They come of the race that knows the sea and they represent the race which has from the earliest time been linked with wind and wave. British blood contains the strain of the early Britons, the first known inhabitants of the British Isles, who pushed across the channel to occupy what are now England, Wales, Ireland and Scotland.

There is the great strain of the blood of the Jutes, Angles and Saxons, the bravest and most venturesome of the tribes who ventured out from the Continent to Britain and built up what has become modern Britain. There is the blood of the Vikings from Norsemen and Danes who have left their traces upon Britain and there is the Norman strain which was the latest to be added to the strains which make up the British people. The Normans themselves were the descendants of the Norsemen or Vikings who occupied the northern part of France and intermarried with the inhabitants.

These strains have been associated with the sea, the sea played no small part in the lives of the people and led to the development of the British Empire with its world-wide trade and culture.

Their Majesties and their subjects feel the salt of the sea in their nature. They know what the poet of the British seas-song "Rule Britannia" meant when he was inspired to say of Britain:

> "Her march is on the mountain waves,
> Her home is on the deep."

In the gale which swept across the Empress of Australia the Royal passengers and their retinue no doubt enjoyed the salty spray and spume as the stormy winds continued to blow.

ROYAL LIBRARIES ON TRAIN

Her Excellency, Lady Tweedsmuir, has had delivered shelves of books for the royal train which will carry Canada's King and Queen across the Dominion. These books deal with every phase of interest about Canada.

No finer gift could have been collected for the rulers than this which will give a cross-section of Canadian mind and a general impression of the country and people.

The reading fare of the royal guests will not be entirely restricted to Canadian subjects as there is included a section of an odd book of mystery and volume on world affairs.

The two libraries, that for the King and that for the Queen, have marked differences but they both cover a range of interest which will more than be sufficient for the leisure time which the royal readers will have in the course of their travels.

It was a happy thought to present Their Majesties with literature which will be of pecular appeal during their journeys.

PAINTING UP, CLEANING UP

Paint up, Clean up, Plant up and Fix up time has come. Weather conditions may have delayed early work but the last few days have made possible a great deal of work on the lawns and in the gardens. Painting of buildings, cleaning of lawns and gardens, planting and general "fixing up" have proceeded considerably, but much remains yet to be done before the full task is completed.

Windsor has a novel idea. Cards have been issued to the pupils of the schools of that city asking their co-operation in the civic clean up campaign. The Windsor Star tries to estimate what can be done by the thousands of pupils if they turn their hands to helping their parents. One result would be the absence of a single bit of rubbish littering private property in that city. Beautification of flower gardens by helping parents would be another result. The Star says even the youngest can lend a hand.

The idea is a good one. Scholars like adults everywhere reap what they sow. The work is inspiring and it teaches civic pride and responsibility. The child faces will glow with the exercise and their bodies will be strong with the fresh air they breathe into their lungs through work in the open spaces.

Belleville is generally a well-kept city, but there is always room for improvements and beautification.

A MAY MORNING

Oh! the sunshine is so gladsome
And the sky it is so blue,
And the lure of other springs is in the air,
Down the lane the maple blushes,
In the meadows bright with dew
Gleam and sparkle wondrous gems and jewels rare.

'Mid the dark-browed firs and cedars
There's a fringe of lighter green,
Where winter trees have changed from drab and grey,
And in all the new enchantment
That is heard and felt and seen,
Is the glamour of the springs of yesterday.

GLENCANNON, CHIEF ENGINEER OF THE OLD HOOKER INCHCLIFFE CASTLE, is a very amusing imaginary character, with his Scotch wit and thrift and love for one brand of Scotch whisky. Another imaginary character made famous by the Saturday Evening Post and the movies with Marie Dressler is "Tugboat Annie", as tough an old salt water barnacle as could be found, with a heart of gold, a sharp tongue and a shrewd business complex, together with her knowledge of the Golden Gate and the Pacific coast from Mexico to Alaska.

Another character, in the flesh this time and popular with the army of prospectors who seek the pot of gold at the foot of the rainbow is "The Mother of Kamiscotia", an Ojibway squaw, whose hogan is 23 miles north of Timmins. She is in the spotlight now because zealous game wardens found moose meat in her domicile.

"She's the best old soul you could meet," any prospector who has travelled the Mattagamai River to Kamiscotia Lake will tell you. "Maggie never sees a canoe coming across that lake that she doesn't put the kettle on to have a spot of tea."

Gold hunters love to tell the story of the prospector who rewarded the aged squaw's kindness by staking four claims for her in Robb Township, just adjoining the strike which was sold to the Hollinger Mine for a reported price of $200,000. Maggie sold her claims for one thousand dollars each and put the money in the bank at Timmins where it still is.

Maggie loves moose meat and so does her husband, Bill Leclair, a French Canadian who married Maggie in 1916, and who is the cause of her arrest. The game warden says that Maggie is not living on a reservation and her husband is a white man so she has no treaty right to kill or have moose meat in her possession. Her many friends in Timmins will help her fight the case, which may become a cause celebre and settle once and for all the question of Indian treaty rights.

"Maggie's life has not been a bed of roses. She was married in her late 'teens to her first husband, William Martin, "Old Bill", as she calls him, who died in 1913 a victim of T.B. Six children were born to Maggie and her first husband, all buried beside the father on a lonely island in Kamiscotia Lake, killed by the scourge of the Indian, T.B.

After "Old Bill's" death Maggie teamed up with a friend of her girlhood, Mrs. Buffalo, and they lived in a cabin together, trapping, hunting and trading their winter's spoils for sufficient of the white man's goods to carry them through.

In 1913 big Bill Leclair, from Buckingham, Quebec, came north and he and Maggie hit it off so well that they were married in a Timmins church, took a honeymoon trip to Bill's home in Quebec, then returned and settled down in Maggie's shanty on the quiet shores of that northern lake.

Four times a year Bill and Maggie paddle the 23 miles to Timmins to trade and visit. Maggie says she can cover the full distance on snowshoes in eight hours.

THE WADING POOL IN THE PARK near No. 1 Fire Station, long out of commission and anything but an ornament, is to be filled in and made a flower garden by the Parks Board. This wading pool was the gift of Belleville Rotary Club and was greatly enjoyed the first season it operated, many mothers taking small children there and the kids having a wonderful time in the shallow wading basin. The concrete of the pool was licked by the frost and wouldn't hold water. It's usefulness gone it has developed into an eyesore, and the Parks Board must be congratulated for replacing it with a beauty spot.

One of the most notable events in the history of the Bay of Quinte District was the Grand Peace Assembly which was held in the Belleville Armouries under the auspices of the Publicity Committee of the County of Hastings Development Association. The object of the assembly was to celebrate the cessation of hostilities and the dawning of world peace in addition to affording an opportunity for the citizens from all parts of the district to meet and fraternize and thus promote a spirit of co-operation which will be helpful in the upbuilding of a prosperous and contented district—working for the best interests of all in an association seeking to develop the great resources of this district. The affair was a great and enjoyable success; the attendance being large. The Hon. Chairman of the function was Mr. Thomas T. Naylor, Reeve of Deseronto; Hon. Secretary, Mr. William H. Famous Regimental Crests

Numerous regiments in the British Army, past and present, have fought in foreign lands under peculiar names, some of which, to those unfamiliar with army lore, would appear to border on the ludicrous. The majority of these designations, some three hundred in number, may be classified as nicknames. Nevertheless, these odd appellations are highly prized throughout the various regiments. Edwin Lye gives in The Soldier an outline of the history of some of these appellations.

There is, perhaps, a narrow distinction (he writes) between a popular name and a nickname. In the regular army of today there are nine regiments which carry in their official titles a popular name of the past and the following thumbnail sketches will show how the names originated.

The Royal Horse Guards (The Blues) were dubbed The Oxford Blues in 1690. The name originated from the color of their uniforms and the name of their colonel, Aubrey de Vere, the Earl of Oxford.

The Queen's Bays (2nd Dragoon Guards) were called The Bays in 1767, in consequence of an order directing the regiment to be mounted on long-tailed bay horses. The origin of their further nickname, The Rusty Buckles, remains a mystery. Prior to Jan. 1, 1921, The Queen's Bays formed the subsidiary title.

The Royal Scots Greys (2nd Dragoons) were called the Grey Dragoons in 1702, from the stone-grey uniforms which were worn by the troops that were regimented under Sir Thomas Dalyell. This regiment also reversed its title on Jan. 1, 1921.

The Coldstream Guards owe their names to the little town of Coldstream in Berwickshire, Scotland, whence they marched under George Monck, the first Duke of Abermarle, to the aid of King Charles II. Distrusting the soldiers in his service, King Charles, in 1661, called the 1st Foot Guards back to England.

Following upon this, he speedily dismissed his Commonwealth soldiers, and of all the Puritan regiments, he retained but one—Monck's Regiment, of Coldstream Guards as they were popularly known following their brief stay at the town of Coldstream on the Tweed in the winter of 1659-60.

Monck's Regiment on being ordered to lay down their arms in repudiation of the Commonwealth, and commanded to resume them again, as the 2nd Foot Guards, stood obstinately defiant and on the verge of mutiny. Monck thereupon turned to the king and said, "Sire, this regiment refuses to be known as second to any in the British Army!"

Charles, with unworded gratitude for their timely help in a drastic situation, cried: "Coldstream Guards, take up your arms!"—Thus the regiment has as its motto Nulli Secundus, second to none. The toast to the King is not drunk in the mess of the Coldstreams, they lay claim to the privilege that the regiment's loyalty is unquestioned.

The town of Coldstream at one time rivalled Gretna Green for its clandestine marriages.

A Coldstreamer in army vernacular is a pot of ale with an extra large head of froth.

The Buffs (Royal East Kent Regiment)were raised from the London trained bands in 1572, in the days of Queen Elizabeth, for the Dutch service in the wars against Spain. The regiment became known as the Holland Regiment or Holland Buffs from the buff-colored lapel facings. On returning to England in 1665, it was incorporated in the army as the 3rd Foot, but retained its nickname as The Buffs.

In 1741 the regiment was brigaded with the 19th Foot which bore the sobriquet Green Howards from its green-colored facings and the name of its colonel, the Hon. Charles Howard (1738-49). It so happened at that time that the officer commanding the 3rd Foot also was named Howard (Colonel Thomas Howard, 1737-49), and the regiment was known for a short period as the Buff Howards.

At the battle of Dettingen, June 16, 1743 (old style), King George II. mistook the 31st Foot—now the 1st Battalion, The East Surrey Regiment—for the 3rd Foot, and called out to them "Bravo Old Bluffs". On being informed of the error he immediately corrected his cry to "Bravo Young Buffs", and to this day the East Surrey's cherish the nickname conferred upon them by their sovereign on the field of battle. This regiment, however, has not been officially styled Buffs. Their scarlet uniforms are now faced with white.

The name Old Buffs, dubbed by King George at Dettingen in June, 1743, crept into official records three months later for in the Clothing Warrant of September 14, 1743, the 3rd Foot is listed as Old Bluffs, their territorial title East Kent dates from 1782. Following Bloody Albuhera, 18th May, 1811, the Buffs received the nickname Resurrectionists, due to their remarkable recovery after being all but annihilated by Soult's lancers. In 1898 the regiment was permitted to bear on their shoulder straps The Buffs in lieu of East Kent Regiment.

There is, however, another regiment which is officially described Buffs in its sub-title. This regiment, the Seaforth Highlanders (Ross-shire Buffs, The Duke of Albany's), also obtained the name from its buff-colored facings through its second battalion the late 78th Foot. It was raised as the 2nd Highland Battalion in 1756 and was reformed in 1793 as the 78th Highlanders (Ross-shire Buffs).

Today there are eight regiments in the British army with buff-colored facings but the Old Buffs enjoy the hallmark of "The Buffs". In June, 1935, His Majesty King George V., on celebrating his Silver Jubilee, conferred on the regiment the title Royal.

The 198 Battalion, raised in Canada during the Great War, was designated The Canadian Buffs. Incidentally, their collar badge was similar to that worn by the East Kent's, a fiery dragon over a scroll inscribed The Buffs.

The title Green Howards, the popular name of the 19th Foot, already referred to, was not recognized officially until after the Great War—not until nearly two hundred years had elapsed. It was on New Year's Day, 1921, that the designation, The Green Howards, was added to Alexandra Princess of Wales' Own Yorkshire Regiment.

Mention, perhaps, should be made of the Howard's Greens. The title is not officially recognized but the name ante-dates that of The Green Howards. The name was given to the 24th Foot, now the 1st Battalion, The South Wales Borderers, through a similar combination of commander's name and color of lapel facings when under Colonel Thomas Charles Howard, who later commanded the Buff Howards. Colonel Thomas Howard was in command of the 14th Foot from 1717 to 1737.

The Cameronians derive their name from a strict set of Presbyterians, followers of one Richard Cameron, a former schoolmaster of Falkland, in Fife, who became a famous preacher. The sorely persecuted Cameronians, during the religious persecutions of the latter Stuart days, considered themselves as "the remnant that had not bowed the knee to Baal." A body of these people, the Glasgow Cameronion Guard, were the self-appointed guards of the Lords of Convention during the Revolution of 1688. On April the 19th, 1689, within 24 hours, 800 men were raised from the Cameronians and were given the name Cameronian Regiment of Foot. One of the conditions under which these men took service was that the regiment should have a Chaplain of their own religious persuasion, and that each company of 60 men each should be provided with an Elder in order that piety might be promoted and evil-doers rebuked.

In 1826 the regiment was numbered and styled the 26th (The Cameronians Regiment of Foot. It is now the 1st Battalion, The Cameronians (Scottish Rifles).

The Black Watch (Royal Highland Regiment), as known since the slight change in sub-title in 1934, originated from six independent companies that were raised in 1725 to watch the disaffected districts in the Highlands and to enforce the disarming act. These companies increased to ten in 1739, were dressed in a dark native tartan, which contrasted with the red coats of the regular army Seidar Deara (red soldiers), and so received the name Am Freiceadan dubh (The Black Watch). Recent historians, however inform us that the name Black Watch was not originally given so much on account of their dress, but as a term applied to them by those whom, in pursuance of their duties they had to coerce!—More in the nature of the Black and Tans of 1920.

In 1740 the Black Watch were regimented and numbered the 43rd but in 1749 they were renumbered the 42nd. The title Royal Highlanders was conferred on the regiment in recognition of its gravery at Ticonderoga, July 22, 1758, when Montcalm defeated Abercrombie. The casualties in killed and wounded in the Black Watch on that occasion were 25 officers, 19 sergeants, and 603 rank and file. Today a regiment of the Canadian militia in the city of Montreal bears the title The Black Watch (Royal Highland Regiment) of Canada, and is allied to its opposite number in the British Army.—Montreal Gazette.

THAT BODY OF YOURS

Noise is a Health Problem

It was a great step forward when anyone creating a disturbance or maintaining a nuisance could be prosecuted under the health regulations of the community. It showed in a definite manner that noise is a health problem.

One of the latest helps to lessening the amount of noise is air-conditioning. "The procurement of closed windows and doors and other sound barriers used to procure artificial climates in public buildings, office buildings, department stores, theatres and so on, may get rid of as much as 75 per cent of the outdoor noises." Unfortunately to in door workers, where there is hammering and other vibrations, air conditioning gives no relief from the harmful effects of noise.

A report to the American Medical Association Committee on Air Conditioning by G. P. McCord, E. E. Teal, and W. N. Witheridge on the effect of noise on human beings, "presents extensive evidence that genuine injury is widespread as a result of noise action, and that deafness is the chief ailment in amount and in numbers caused by noise."

Why does noise have such a harmful effect upon the human body, aside from causing deafness?

In the first place noise causes shock, shock that is often light, of course, but shock just the same. The effect of shock on the body is to upset all the body processes just as if they had been laid low by a blow the heart beats more feebly, the blood pressure drops, and the temperature is lowered.

In the second place noise causes the brain, nerves, and all the muscles of the body to become tensed. Tensed nerves and muscles use up energy, just as does hard physical work, and fatigue or even exhaustion follows. Nature built your body—nerves and muscles—to be ready for instant fight or flight, whenever necessary. Noise arouses the nerves and muscles to become more tensed—more ready for action. This constant tenseness uses up energy and tiredness follows.

Everybody can help some by using the auto horn less, keeping brakes in good condition, not having radio turned too high, and by other simple methods. Quietness can increase working ability by not less than 40 per cent.

Later Franck was officially charged with sabotage in setting the blaze which sank the huge liner.

Major H. S. Alderman Practises The Golden Rule in Everyday Life

Head of Salvation Army Corps Here Always Ready to Lend Helping Hand

NEEDS NEW CITADEL

He's a husky handsome sort of a chap. White teeth gleam against a ruddy face that glows with the sheer joy of living, when he speaks to you. Possessed of a cheery personality he immediately imbues a listener with that spirit of "all's well with the world" when he smiles.

A blonde complexion, offset with the blue of the uniform he wears, itself contrasted with a touch of red; hair streaked with slight tinges of grey; a pair of sparkling blue eyes that gleam with merriment or soften suddenly with sympathy; a jolly sense of humor; an unending supply of stories and anecdotes and the ability to relate them; put these attributes together and you have Major H. S. Alderman, commanding officer of the Belleville Corps of the Salvation Army.

But he has two greater attributes than any of these. Faith in God and in his desire to save mankind. A great heart beats beneath the simple blue tunic that bears the insignia of his rank in the army of his Lord.

He is the liaison officer for the cross-roads of life. People of high and low degree seek his advice on matters, personal and otherwise. His kindly smile greets all no matter their walk of life. He shuns publicity as much as he seeks to help his fellow-man. He is the type that little children learn to love. Small faces gleam with pleasure as his kindly hands stroke their curls.

None Too Lowly to Get Help

No depths are too deep for him to descend to offer a helping hand to an unfortunate human being. Many an outcast of society has been helped to his feet and taken his rightful place among his people through the medium of Major Alderman's kindly words and actions. He has faith in human nature and feels there is a little bit of good in every man no matter how bad he is as long as his soul has not spurned forever the love of its Maker.

He has delved deep in the morasses of life. "The only liquor I ever had was second-hand," he smiles. "And I abhor it." He has slept with men, stayed all night with them when in the throes of excess alcoholism. "I have wrestled with them and sometimes nearly fought with them," he says, "but the battle was worth the struggle." On one occasion he discovered a man nearly frozen to death, after a night of carousal. Like the Good Samaritan of Old, he stopped by the wayside. Today that man thanks his God that the blue of the Salvation Army gleamed through the frosty night with a helping hand outstretched.

The Alderman house is an open one. Its doors are never closed. Five hundred meals have been given inside its homely portals at no cost to the hungry. Not only do the physically hungry call there in their hour of need but also the spiritually starved. All leave with appetites satisfied.

On one occasion a poor family—father, mother and three small children hitch-hiking along the broad highways came to his house. Hot meals were immediately forthcoming. Warm beds were provided. The next morning the little family breakfasted and left with God's blessing ringing in their ears.

Social Work a Hobby

Social work is a hobby. But many things are needed. Beds, clothing, mattresses, bedding, wearing apparel for men, women and children. He cannot supply them all so he asks you and you to contribute what you can spare to this work.

His work in the police courts of the district is well-known. That was outlined in a previous article published in this paper.

He was born in England, a product of a fine family that lived in Hampshire. On March 3rd, 1911, he came to Canada and went to Vernon, B.C. Previous to arrival in this country, he joined the Salvation Army, being formerly of primitive Methodist stock. He became a member of the Vernon Corps of the Army in 1912 and since that time has devoted his entire life to the bringing of the word of the gospel to his fellow man.

He was trained in the Salvation Army Garrison at Toronto a short time after his joining the Vernon Corps, graduated, and sent as a Lieutenant to Welland, Ont. From that place he was sent to Lindsay with well-deserved captain's promotion. In 1916 he was sent to Riverdale, Toronto, and from that time until his arrival in Belleville two years ago he has served the Salvation Army in two corps in Ottawa, three in Toronto, Cobourg, Orangeville, Dundas, Argyll Avenue and Wellington Street Citadels, Hamilton, London, Ont., Orillia. He was promoted to the rank of Adjutant while in Hamilton and a little over a year ago received his Majority in Belleville.

A Splendid Family

He has a charming wife and three lovely daughters. All are talented musicians and singers. Major Alderman himself, who never played a musical instrument prior to his joining the Salvation Army, has down through the years mastered practically every brass instrument with the exception of the trombone and the E Flat cornet.

His first musical endeavor came when he provided all the drum music for the memorial services held in Vernon, B.C. to the memory of the late founder of the Salvation Army, General William Booth.

Major Alderman and his family, his congregation and a host of friends are now busily engaged in a very important work, that of the raising of funds for the erection of a new citadel here. He appeals to everyone to assist in this undertaking, one that will stand as a silent testimonial to a work of humanity, for humanity and for God and one that fills a great need in the world today.

CASH REWARDS PAID CITIZENS TO DETECT CRIME

Attorney General Opens a Provincial - Wide Drive Against Crime

NO PUBLICITY

Names of Anyone Assisting Police Will Not be Used Unless Desired

In an effort to minimize crime and to assist in the apprehension of criminals Attorney General G. D. Conant today informed Ontario Provincial Police district headquarters throughout the province, that efforts to bring home to the citizens in general a realization of their duty in the co-operation of the detection and apprehension of criminals.

"A cash reward will be paid to every person, other than a police officer, who performs any outstanding and particularly noteworthy act involving risk to his person or property in the apprehension or pursuit of any criminal who has committed any violent or serious crime," Attorney General Conant informed Inspector Frank Gardner of District No. 8 O.P.P. today as he added that persons claiming such awards and who are desirous of having their name withheld from public, due to undesired publicity, will be given every consideration in their request.

The number of serious crimes throughout the province for the last few weeks constitute a menace to the life, property and well-being of every citizen, the Department pointed out and added law enforcement can only be adequate if every law-abiding citizen is conscious of his own responsibility and assists to the utmost in the interests of the preserving of law and order.

"If all our citizens are alert to guard against and to assist in the detection of crime and in the apprehension of criminals I am confident that the number and seriousness of crimes in our fair province will be materially reduced," added Mr. Conant in his letter to Inspector Gardner, who in turn added that individuals could assist in guarding against crime by securing their places of business so as to not leave them unprotected against marauders and also by not leaving automobiles unlocked.

This appeal to rise and rout the criminal is being made in a provincial-wide drive against crime and in an effort to more fully acquaint the general public with their individual responsibilities in the matter.

Mrs. C. E. Argue to Head Women's Canadian Club

Miss Robina Templeton Speaks on the Matter of Refugees Being Admitted to Canada

MOTION ADOPTED

Concluding an interesting and successful year in the history of the Women's Canadian Club the annual meeting of the organization was held in Bridge Street Sunday School parlors yesterday afternoon, when the election of officers was held, resulting in Mrs. C. E. Argue being the unanimous choice for president for the new term. The meeting at which reports of the year were received and several resolutions adopted was featured by an address by Miss Robina Templeton who presented, in challenging fashion, the case for the refugee in her thoughtful discussion of the refugee problem.

Adopt Resolution

At the conclusion of Miss Templeton's address the Club adopted the following resolution, copies of which will be forwarded to Prime Minister Mackenzie King, the Hon. T. A. Crerar, and Mr. C. A. Cameron, M.P.

"The Women's Canadian Club of Belleville hereby express their desire to see the Government take more definite action toward ameliorating the condition of refugees from European countries; and make some change in the law whereby selected groups of refugees could be accepted into Canada. In view of the persecution and suffering of these people we feel that our country should render some help to them in their desperate situation.

"Canada needs a larger population and by choosing the better type of refugee available now, we could procure citizens who would be an asset to our country because of their belief in democratic principle, because of their skills, scientific knowledge and business ability and because of their culture.

"As Canadian women our hearts are touched by the plight of children who are also the victims of persecution and we urge that the Government make it possible for children to come to desirable homes awaiting them in Canada."

Mrs. G. G. Wright presided for the earlier part of the meeting, calling upon Mrs. H. O. Trusdale, secretary, for the minutes of the last annual meeting and the report of the Women's Canadian Club for the past year. This showed that 12 meetings had been held, Mrs. Trusdale recalling the various addresses, which had been presented during the season.

The financial report prepared by the treasurer, Mrs. A. E. MacColl, was given by Mrs. A. R. Cameron and showed that the membership had been 97. A substantial bank balance was recorded.

Concurring with a request from Dr. E. A. Corbett the Club passed a resolution asking the government to support the request of British Columbia that a special postage rate of three cents for the first ounce and two cents for the second be granted for library books in order to aid the program of adult education, especially in scattered communities where public library facilities did not prevail.

Mrs. G. G. Wright, whose term of office as president expired with yesterday's meeting, expressed her sincere thanks to the members and executive for their sympathetic support during her two years' term. Mrs. J. W. Kinnear voiced the sentiments of the Club in her appreciation of Mrs. Wright's work as president and also moved a vote of thanks to the press.

Mrs. W. C. Mikel, on behalf of the Club, thanked the entertainment committee and the boards of churches for their hospitality to the Club.

Election of Officers

The report of the nominating committee, presented by the convener, Mrs. E. R. Logie, was adopted as follows:

Honorary President, Mrs. G. G. Wright; President, Mrs. C. E. Argue; 1st Vice President, Mrs. E. A Geen; 2nd Vice President, Mrs. W. H. Finkle; Treasurer, Mrs A. E. MacColl; Secretary, Mrs. H. O. Trusdale; Assistant Secretary, Mrs. Archie Cameron; Entertainment Committee, Mrs. E. Bateman, convener, Mrs. Frank McKeown, Mrs. G. S. Cronk; Executive, Mrs. J. W. Kinnear, Mrs. E. R. Logie, Miss C. Ford, Mrs. J. A. Kerr, Mrs. R. L. Brown, Mrs. W. J. Morrison, Miss S. Masson; Advisory Committee of Past Presidents, Mrs. J.P. Wills, Mrs. George N. Gorman, Mrs. A. E. MacColl, Mrs. O. A. Marshall, Mrs. W. N. Ponton, Misss Anna Hurley, Mrs. E. N. Baker, Mrs. W. C. Mikel, Mrs. F. C. Anderson.

Mrs. Argue, in accepting office, graciously thanked the members for the honor that had been conferred on her.

The Refugee Problem

Miss Robina Templeton, guest speaker for the afternoon, in her address on the refugee problem touched the humanitarian, the economic and the cultural aspects.

She spoke of the visit here of Miss Constance Hayward, a member of the executive of the Canadian National Committee for Refugees and Victims of Political Persecutions a committee of which Sir Robert Falconer is honorary chairman and Hon. Cairine Wilson is president. Mr. Raymond Booth whom the Quaker Church is lending in the educational campaign to make Canada "refugee minded" also visited the city over the week end and from their discussions, from articles in leading magazines and from study of the question, generally, Miss Templeton brought enlightenment to many in her audience in the various phases of the problem. It is only by education, by discussion in small groups, that strong opinion in favor of aiding the refugees can be formed, and the people of Canada moved to ask the government to lend aid. Such education is the responsibility of all interested in their fellow man.

Aspects of Question

The humanitarian side of the problem centres to a great extent around the pitiful plight of countless children whom generous hearted citizens of the world dare not ngelect. Regarding the economics of the refugee question, it is important to remember that those seeking admittance to the country are primarily those of means and manufacturers who can contribute to neglect. Regarding the economics of Canada's industrial life and give employment to countless Canadians, and those of experience such as the foresters who could be of invaluable assistance to Canada's task of reforestation. From the cultural standpoint the refugees have much to offer for men of science and literature, skilled linguists, social democrats who hold sacred the principles of democracy and have suffered for such beliefs, make up the ranks of those who are exiled from their home lands. Finally, Miss Templeton pointed out, as citizens of a Christian country, believing the truths of Christ and His charge to the nations of the earth if they would survive, dare Canadians refuse to respond to the cries of these people in their plight?

Mrs. Argue graciously thanked Miss Templeton for her splendid address. The meeting closed with the National Anthem, Mrs. Ross Hunter presiding at the piano. Tea was served the members by the entertainment committee.

SOFT, INVITING LIPS

LYNN BARI

Care of her lips is part of her regular beauty duties

By HELEN FOLLETT

LIPS SHOULD be soft and moist looking, the surrounding muscles strong and firm. As Pop Time catches up with a woman there is a chance that fine lines will appear around the mouth portals. Smiling helps to keep them away. Being a Gloomy Gussie with ends pulled down will invite them to come.

When you do your beauty duties before piling into bed at night, apply a thin cream of muscle oil to your lips and the flesh around them. Starting at one corner of the lower lip, do little circles with the first finger. Have the flesh relaxed. Massage won't do a thing for you if fibres are at a tension. Do your circles below and above the lips.

Place the first finger in the centre of the upper lip, thumb and second finger at either end. Hold the finger in the centre, draw up the lip ends in a Cupid's bow. If tiny up and down lines have appeared this treatment will make them pack up and get out.

Another treatment consists of a sort of fluting movement; finger and thumb go nipping along briskly. Use plenty of oil or cream for all these movements. Lips gone dry and shaggy are no help in the cause of pulchritude. When selecting a lipstick, get one that it creamy and soft. Tint the edges of the lips first, forming an outline for the rosy application.

Girls with spindle shanks should wear hosiery of light shades; dark tones make leglets look even smaller. By walking tiptoe, doing high kicking and jumping a rope the thinnies can fill out calves that need to be fatted.

Extremely short skirts are only for the pretties whose legs are of normal proportions. When skirts are too abbreviated, being nothing more than kilts, they make the feminine shape look top heavy. However, we all follow the leader, old lady fashion, so there seems to be nothing to be done about it.

Massage will encourage thin legs to fill out. Use cocoanut oil every night, stroking it on with flattened fingers, using movements brisk enough to make blood streams hustle.

Plan a Supper for Royalty
First Prize $200.00 and a Sterling Silver Cup!

What kind of supper would you serve the King and Queen?

By Evangeline

Supposing their Majesties, whose preference for simple meals is well known, were to drop in for supper at your home. What would you serve them? Draw up a simple, typically Canadian menu and send it to me. Robin Hood Flour Mills are offering 187 cash prizes totalling $1,000.00 for the best menus.

A GRAND LIST OF PRIZES
1st Prize - - - - - - $200.00
and a Sterling Silver Cup
2nd Prize - - - - - - 100.00
3rd Prize - - - - - - - 50.00
9 PROVINCIAL PRIZES
(one to be awarded to the best entry in each province after the winners of 1st, 2nd and 3rd prizes have been selected),
$25.00 each
25 Prizes, each - - - - $5.00
150 Prizes, each - - - - $2.00

If you don't win 1st, 2nd or 3rd Prize, you have a chance for the $25.00 Provincial Prize which will be awarded for competition only in your province. And if you don't win one of these you can win one of the 25 prizes of $5.00 each or one of the 150 prizes of $2.00 each. No contestant can win more than one prize so that 187 Canadian women will share the prize money.

Just Plan a Simple, Home-Like Meal

Think of a meal which, in your opinion, would give our King and Queen a correct and favorable impression of Canadian foods. Choose what you like but be sure to have at least three items in each menu which contain Robin Hood Flour.

Follow These Simple Rules Which put Everything in a Nutshell:

1. 187 cash prizes and a handsome Sterling Silver Cup, suitably engraved with your name, will be awarded for the best supper menus to serve the King and Queen during May or June, using Canadian ingredients only (spices excepted) and with Robin Hood Flour used in three or more items on each menu.

2. Send in as many entries as you wish. Each menu entered must be written on a single sheet of paper, with your name and post office address written clearly at the top of the page.

3. Each menu shall have three courses: a soup, main course and dessert. Each course may include whatever dishes you would serve to make up a well-balanced meal in a typically Canadian home where the homemaker prepares the food for the family. (A sample menu is given on this page for a guide.)

4. Write on the back of your entry paper the recipe for the dish you consider the best in your menu.

5. Each entry will be judged on its merits as representing a simple, well-balanced, typically Canadian meal. In case of a tie the prize will be given to the menu with the best recipe.

6. To each menu entered, pin the guarantee certificate from your bag of Robin Hood Flour. No entry can be considered unless accompanied by the guarantee certificate.

7. The closing date is June 30th, 1939. All entries must be received by midnight of that date. Mail your entries to "Evangeline", Dept. O, Home Baking Service, Robin Hood Flour Mills Ltd., Toronto, Ont. No employee of Robin Hood Flour Mills Limited or any member of their families may enter the contest.

8. I have appointed the following well-known dietitians as judges:—Miss Jessie Read of the Toronto "Evening Telegram", Mrs. Madeline Day, Chief Lecturer of the "School of Canadian Cookery", and Miss Marie Holmes of the Toronto "Daily Star".

9. If, for any reason, the Royal visit should be postponed, this contest will be held just the same.

10. All menus and recipes become the property of Robin Hood Flour Mills Limited.

Sample Type of Menu

Now, to give you some idea how to go about making your menu, I have put together a menu as a guide to help you. Of course, I haven't mentioned any actual dishes so as to leave your choice absolutely free:

SOUP
SALAD
WITH TWO VEGETABLES
DESSERT
BEVERAGES
BREADS OR ROLLS, OR OTHER BAKED GOODS

"In the above menu I consider my best recipe to be the ———————." The recipe for it and the method of making it is enclosed. (Name and Address of Sender.)

A Final and Important Word

Mail your entries now. The closing date for entries is June 30th. Send in as many menus as you please but pin a guarantee slip to each menu. Prize winners will be announced in this paper as soon as possible after judging has been completed.

Chatterton Couple Are Honored

Monday evening, May 1, 1939, neighbours and friends numbering nearly sixty gathered in the home of Mr. and Mrs. W. Gano to tender them a surprise before leaving for their new home in Marmora.

Rev. Cook acted as chairman and called the gathering to order giving Mr. and Mrs. Gano seats of prominence. Mrs. Percy Meale read the address. Mrs. G. Frederick presented Mrs. Gano with a bedspread and Mr. Ralph Campbell presented the floor lamp.

Mr. and Mrs. Gano both thanked their friends for the gifts and invited them to visit them in their new home.

Everyone joined in singing "For They are Jolly Good Fellows" after which a number of the men made short speeches.

A delicious lunch of sandwiches, cake, tarts and coffee was served by the ladies and brought evening to a close. Everyone wishing Mr. and Mrs. Gano much happiness in their new home.

The address

Chatterton, Ont.,
May 1, 1939

Mr. and Mrs. W. Gano,
Dear Friends—

We your friends and neighbours have gathered in your home tonight to spend a social evening with you before you leave for your new home.

You have been here but a few short years, but during that time you have found a very warm spot in the hearts of us all.

You have both been attendants at church and a help in all our social activities in the community, those of us who were fortunate to live close by found you a real neighbour and friend, willing to help at any call.

Mrs. Gano we shall miss you in our W.M.S. and at all our social gatherings. In your home you always made us most welcome.

Mr. Gano we shall not soon forget the little things you have done for us in the church from time to time, also you will be missed by the "Oak Lake" horseshoe pitching team.

We ask you to accept these gifts. We hope it will keep ever bright the memory of your friends at Chatterton.

Although we are sorry to see you go, we're pleased it won't be too far away and that we will see you back in our neighbourhood often. And we assure you that whenever we are in Marmora you'll find us knocking on your door.

As we bid you "Farewell" tonight our hearts will be a little sad, but we shall hope and pray that God's richest blessings will go with you, and that you may live to enjoy many years of health and happiness in your new home.

Signed on behalf of the Community—Ivy Meale, Roscoe Vanderwater, Frank Lough, J. H. Frederick, Fred Campbell, Frank Finkle.

The Stars Say—

For Friday, May 12

By GENEVIEVE KEMBLE

A RATHER successful day, with much attained by methods of strategy and intrigue instead of direct action, is read from interesting astral operations. Fairly ambitious projects may be furthered by such methods in approaching those possessing financial power or political prestige. The mentality will be profound and shrewd, alert to what might be frustrating and peculiar situations.

Those whose birthday it is may find themselves confronted by a chain of circumstances which will have to be handled with intrigue, subtlety or other undercover agreements. Intuitive faculties or originality of ideas may prove highly productive.

A child born on this day may be original and brilliant, with quick insight and keen wit, its peculiar or subtle endowments furthering a successful professional career.

How To Overcome Piles And Rectal Soreness

If you are annoyed with itching piles or rectal soreness, do not neglect the same or run the risk of an operation. Any itching, soreness or painful passage of stool, is nature's warning and proper treatment should be secured at once. For this purpose get from J. S. McKeown or any druggist, a package of Hemroid and use as directed. This formula, which is used internally, quickly relieves the itching and soreness and aids in healing the sore, tender spots. Hemroid is a physician's prescription and is highly recommended. It is easy to use and it seems the height of folly for anyone to risk an operation when a simple remedy, which is so pleasant to use may be had at such a reasonable cost.

HARD OF HEARING CANADIAN PRAISES AURINE EAR BALSAM

A simple home treatment which is bringing new hope and happiness to sufferers everywhere. H. E. Blakslee of New Brunswick writes: "Have used one bottle of 'AURINE EAR BALSAM' and it has been a wonderful help to me, for some months I have not been able to hear plainly, family talk at the table was a jumble to me, and had to have repeats so often that I feared I would never hear plainly again, have not heard the clock strike for months, the radio was a thing of the past. Now after using one bottle of AURINE EAR BALSAM I can converse with the family as in the good old days, hear the clocks striking and listen in on the programmes presented over the air and beginning to enjoy life as in the past. Would highly recommend AURINE EAR BALSAM to anyone who is hard of hearing for I know it will do them good". Before you invest in expensive hearing devices try one bottle of AURINE EAR BALSAM. See if it doesn't help you too. If you are hard of hearing, have ringing and buzzing in the ear — Get AURINE EAR BALSAM today. Relief is quick. Costs only a few cents a day. Money back if it does not help you. For sale by Doyle's Drug Store. a21, 27, m3, j1

G. C. Shorey Presented With Purse of Money

Appreciation of years of happy association was shown in a tangible form on Tuesday afternoon when members of Lodge No. 108, Brotherhood of Railroad Trainmen presented Mr. George C. Shorey, Forin Street, who retired from active service with the Canadian National Railway on April 29th, with a handsome leather wallet containing a substantial purse of money.

The presentation was made in the yard offices of the railroad by Mr. J. R. Noakes, president of the lodge, who in a few words expressed the appreciation of himself and colleagues for the many years of sincere cooperation that existed during Mr. Shorey's tenure with the company.

Coincidentally, Mr. Shorey was the engineer under whom Mr. Noakes made his initial run as a railway fireman, when both were working on trains running out of Lindsay years ago.

Mr. Shorey expressed his appreciation of the splendid token given him, and also his regret of the severance of ties that brought many years of happiness to him during his long sojourn with the Canadian National Railway.

"HOUND OF THE BASKERVILLES"
"EVERYBODY'S BABY"

Pause for a moment. Think of the name "Sherlock Holmes." Do you not immediately get a picture of a hawk-like face in a two-way peaked cap and with a big, curved-stem pipe? Do you not begin to see a huge magnifying glass and have general visions of mystery and murder-and English fog?

This is not a psychological test, but try it on some of your friends and see how well it works. It is the result of the Holmes tradition, fostered by innumerable impersonations of the great detective—and vehemently scored by Sir Arthur Conan Doyle, the creator of Holmes as being quite unlike, his famous character!

To Conan Doyle the sleuth was as vivid a personality as he is even today to the thousands of people who believe that he actually lives. He was anything but the eccentric the theatre has made him — he could wear a top hat with the best of them, and smoked cigarettes as a frequent change from his pipe.

It was the aim of achieving a creditable human personality that guided Basil Rathbone's characterization of Sherlock Holmes in 20th Century-Fox's picturization of Sir Arthur's "The Hound of the Baskervilles" the adventures of Holmes on the moor, now on the Belle screen.

Deferring to tradition in that he looks the part of Holmes, Rathbone has created a new character out of the detective that has won him the greatest acclaim of his acting career. The film, under the supervision of Darryl F. Zanuck, co-features Richard Greene and Wendy Barrie with Rathbone, and was directed by Sidney Lanfield. Nigel Bruce, Lionel Atwill, John Carradine, Barlowe Borland, Beryl Mercer, Morton Lowry and Ralph Forbes are included in the cast.

"Everybody's Baby"

It's a joy at the Joneses! Dad's a grand-dad now as a brand-new Jones joins America's favorite family in "Everybody's Baby," as the companion feature. All the familiar members of the popular screen household celebrate the "blessed event", that comes to Bonnie and Herbert who, newlyweds no longer, settle down to raise a family only to find their family raising the baby for them!

Directed by Mal St. Clair, "Everybody's Baby" pokes good natured fun at the many pseudo-scientific methods of child-rearing.

Jed Prouty, Shirley Deane, Spring Byington, Russell Gleason, Ken Howell, George Ernest, June Carlson, Florence Roberts and Billy Mahan portray their usual Jones Family roles, with Reginald Denny, Robert Allen, Claire Du Brey and Marvin Stephens also featured.

AT THE McCARTHY

"The Shadow"

Fast moving, gripping, intelligently played and directed "The Shadow", now playing at the McCarthy theatre is a picture for the entire family to see—colorful in setting, it presents vivid circus pageantry, tears and laughter under the "big top" and a touching romance that will bring a lump to your throat—also it has a thrill-a-second mystery angle that will hold you breathless with suspense.

Perfect performances are outstanding by Charles Quigley, Rita Hayworth, Marc Lawrence, Marjorie Main, Dick Curtis and many other well known featured players, selected for the cast. "The Shadow" is a picture of merit and one that movie-goers will be enthusiastic in mentioning to their friends as another swell and entertaining "movie" at the McCarthy theatre.

"Almost a Gentleman"

The companion feature "Almost a Gentleman" featuring "Ace" the wonder dog. James Ellison, Helen Wood, Robert Kent and June Clayworth. is no less of a swell picture than "The Shadow" and will be most thoroughly enjoyed by all.

"Ace" discloses remarkable training and almost human intelligence in his many feats before the camera, and the scenes of his "utility" prowess in trailing and attacking will prove of interest to every patron.

It is a picture for dog-lovers and just for lovers—human lovers! It is a red-blooded, whole hearted tale of a man who bore a grudge and vowed to settle it, of a dog among dogs, who bore ill to no man, and of a girl who loved them both—the thrill-packed drama of a hero-hearted shepherd dog and the only two humans in the world who didn't give a whoop about the blemish in his pedigree—and who wanted the world to know it. See "Almost a Gentleman" for one of the most entertaining pictures of your lifetime—truly a swell two hit programme. Also in addition another episode of "Flying G-Men" is presented and is certain to thrill many patrons who love fast action.

Eldorado

Eldorado—The Eldorado and Union Young People's Union held their closing meeting for the season on Thursday evening, at the parsonage. The meeting opened with a sing-song led by Rev. S. B. Smith. The President Miss Florence Walker, presided and gave the call to worship. A story "The Two Searchers" was read by Miss Annie Holmes, and Rev. S. B. Smith. The President Miss Florence solo was rendered by Mrs. A. Empey, a poem "The Purpose of Life" was read by Miss Grace Robinson, Mrs. Clifford Chambers and Miss Iva McCann contributed a duet and a poem. "An Over-Worked Elocutionist", was given by Miss Florence Walker. A splendid talk "On My Hobby" which was the subject for the evening, and was along the lines of catching the seals and studying how they work and feed their young. After singing hymn No. 37, games and contests were enjoyed and a dainty lunch was served under the directions of Miss Phyllis Strebe.

W.M.S.

On Wednesday afternoon, May 3, Mrs. Arthur McCreary was at home to the members of the local W.M.S. When they gathered for their regular monthly meeting. A lovely spring day brought a much larger gathering than usual for when the roll was called it showed fourteen members, nine visitors and seven children present.

The President, Mrs. F. J. Nickle called the meeting to order by all singing a patriotic hymn followed with prayer. The worship service was under the leadership of Mrs. A. Empey, the theme being "Stewardship". The Bible lesson was read by Mrs. Empey, who gave a short explanation of each passage as she read it, and Mrs. Bert McCarey gave a beautiful rendering of "Cast Thy Bread upon the Water", which closed the Worship period.

A short business period followed after which the offering was received by Master John McCreary and amounted to $1.65, flower fund 47c.

Arrangements were made for a quilting and pot luck dinner. Mrs Stanley Sandford, group leader, at this meeting then took charge of the programme. The Study Book talk on the 5th Chapter "Learning to Live Together", dealing with three parts namely "Finding the door; removing the colour line and breaking down barriers" was well outlined by Mrs. Beryl Carman.

Mrs. L. Robinson very feelingly sang "Dear to the Heart of the Shepherd". Mrs. A. Empey brought a very full report from the Bay of Quinte Branch of the W.M.S. of The United Church held at Lindsay, and after singing Hymn 388, the programme closed with prayer. The President thanked all who had helped in the programme and also gave the Mission Band superintendents a chance to report. The meeting was closed with prayer by Mrs. F. A. Comerford.

A very enjoyable lunch was served by the hostess and her assistants and a vote of thanks was tendered the hostess for her hospitality in opening her home for this meeting.

Butter Price Eases Under Slow Trading

An easier undertone appeared in butter, but eggs showed little change on the Toronto open produce market Wednesday, according to the Dominion Department of Agriculture.

Slower trading combined with more offerings from the west depressed prices on the butter market. Ontario supplies were not in heavy volume, but dealers experience difficulty in interestnig buyers in current receipts and prices were reduced 1-4c in afternoon trading. Although no sales were reported in the western make, offerings were available at the weaker rate of 21 1-4c. Ontario creamery solids closed out the day at 20 3-4 for No. 1 grades and 20c for 38 score. Prints moved through retail channels at the previous levels of 22 1-2c to 23c for top grades.

Fresh receipts were slow in clearing under only fair demand on the egg market, but prices held former levels. Graded shipments closed at 20c for grade A-large, 18c for medium and 17c for B and C grades.

Montreal Produce Easy.

Ontario colored cheese brought 10 3-8 cents a pound. Receipts: 396 boxes.

NO ASPARAGUS TODAY

Lovers of asparagus were disappointed today when they visited the city market in search of their favorite Spring vegetable. Vendors stated that the new crop is but a few inches above the ground as yet and more warm weather is needed before it will be available.

Another report stated that a Front Street fruit store had new asparagus for sale, said to be grown on a farm near Rednersville. None however, had made its appearance on the city market at a late hour today.

Whitefish and fresh lake trout were plentiful, selling at twenty cents the pound. A large quantity of fresh mudcats were also available and sold readily at two pounds for twenty-five cents.

New strawberry plants were offered at sixty cents per hundred, with cabbage and onion shoots selling at a few cents less.

ADJOURNED INQUEST TO BE RESUMED

Sergeant Arthur Harman, coroner's jury constable, announced today the adjourned inquest looking into the death of little Beverley Killeen Ross, who sustained fatal injuries when struck by a truck on Station Street one week ago, would resume at the Police Station this evening. Several eye witnesses have been summoned to appear and testify, it was learned.

Fear Eight Killed in Elevator Explosion

Chicago, May 11—(AP)—An explosion and fire tore a rambling grain elevator asunder with such suddenness today that firemen feared at least eight workmen were killed.

Because of the size of the structure and intensity of the flames, firemen said it was impossible immediately to determine the casualties.

Four men, two reported near death, were in the South Chicago Hospital.

The elevator, covering a square block and 150 feet high, was owned by the Rosenbaum Brothers Grain Company, a spokesman for which estimated that 800,000 bushels of grain, valued at $200,000, were stored there. He estimated the elevator itself as worth $200,000.

MRS. H. BREEZE OF BRIGHTON, 92

Born on Old York Road Near Trenton, Has No Recipe for Longevity

Toronto, May 11—(CP)—Ninety-two years old today and with no recipe for longevity, is the double claim to fame which Mrs. Henry Breeze, Linnemore Cres., has. Born in 1847, four miles out of Trenton, Ont., on the old York Road, she spent 70 of her 92 years on a farm there.

Mrs. Breeze married in 1872 and had two children, a son who died a few years ago, and her daughter, Mrs. William Lont, at whose home she lives.

"I don't plan to have much of a celebration," she said. "Two years ago, on my 90th birthday, I had 70 callers and we had a grand time."

LINER, CRUISERS

fog. Captain A. R. Meikle, Commander of the flotilla, made calculations on the bridge as to how the fog would affect the ship's schedule.

Fog Expected

Sir Dudley North commented: "The expected has happened, but despite the gale of Tuesday we still have many hours in hand and the fog will lift when the wind changes."

It was because such weather is customary on the Atlantic at this time of year that the date of sailing from Portsmouth, originally set for May 8, was changed to May 6.

The ship's engines were still. The cold and mist failed to keep the King in his cabin. He took a brisk walk around the promenade deck.

A cold nip was in the air which the sailors aboard called "a smell of icebergs." The Queen wore a grey fur coat and men of the royal suite put on heavy overcoats and pullover sweaters.

COMMON ACTION

(France) is not ready to consent. She is also working with tenacity forged from confidence in her destiny," he said.

The premier said that France could not be intimidated by "either force or ruse" and is determined "in close cooperation with other pacific powers" to oppose all attempts to dominate Europe by force.

He recalled recent pledges by France and Great Britain that they would aid Greece, Poland and Rumania if those nations went to war in defence of their vital interests. He said negotiations with Turkey to bring it into the anti-aggression bloc were continuing.

"We consider it essentially desirable that the Soviet Union participate in this work of common mutual assistance," the premier declared.

In accord with all nations who want to live in honor, Frenchmen are resolved to oppose threats of violence, he insisted.

Daladier declared the "love of peace is so profound for all peoples of the world that no one must call on it to cover all forcible undertakings."

He asked if peace consisted of invading other countries and "constantly presenting fresh claims capable of bringing on a conflict, of condemning peoples to poverty."

The premier's message took up again the slogan of "domination or collaboration" which he first broadcast to the nation May 5.

France, he said, has decided to base her action on "free collaboration."

France Knows No Hate.

"France knows no hate. She feels sincere sympathy for all peoples. She knows besides by long experience that war would not solve any of the present problems, that it would only make their solution more difficult and more ruinous."

Emphasizing the partnership of Britain and France he said:

"The solidarity between France and Britain is closer and more confident than ever. It remains the basis of French policy and we will not let it be weakened by intrigue or by odious and lying propaganda."

DANDURAND

sions, acquiring voluminous information relating to the railway problem.

Both leaders made pleas today for consideration of the report outside of political party lines.

"My efforts in the senate have been towards reducing to a minimum the influences of political partisanship," said Mr. Dandurand. "I have had in view the action of the senate standing above political differences that exist in the House of Commons, and for that reason I would dislike the spectacle of a division on party lines before the public and the senate."

Senator Meighen agreed. "We can't really avoid the frank declaration of where each one stands on the report," he said.

None of his own followers agreed with the government leader's report, he added, nor did they all agree with the alternative report he had ready yesterday; but, with the exception of Senator A. D. McRae (Con. British Columbia), who was opposed also to the Dandurand report, all had signified their intention of acquiescing in it.

BRITAIN SINCERE

this country would be involved."

The Prime Minister, dealing with Anglo-German relations, said he still believed the 1935 naval treaty between the two powers could be "regarded as symbolic of a desire by our two peoples never to go to war with one another again." (The treaty recently was renounced by the Reich.)

Independence Must Not be Crushed

Britain did not wish unbridled competition with Germany either in armaments or economics. But Mr. Chamberlain continued, "I want to make it equally plain we are not prepared to stand by and see the independence of one country after another destroyed."

The Prime Minister's reference to "meddlesome busybodies" presumably was made in answer to oft-voiced charges in the German press and news broadcasts that Britain constituted herself as the governess of Europe.

He assured his audience that "it never entered our thoughts to isolate Germany or stand in the way of natural and legitimate expansion of her trade in central and southern Europe, still less to plan some combination against her with the idea of making war upon her."

He termed any such suggestion fantastic.

British Sincerity

The Prime Minister said that Leon Blum, former Socialist Premier of France who visited London yesterday, asserted there was one main danger of war—that the rest of Europe might become convinced that Britain and France were insincere and could not be relied upon to carry out their pledges of military air.

"No more deadly mistake could be made," Mr. Chamberlain asserted, than to attribute such insincerity to the British-French front. He added: "It would be a frightful thing if Europe were to be plunged into war on account of a misunderstanding."

Police Blotter

Belleville police today revealed some 360 pounds of copper wire and a number of old motor car radiators, reported stolen from the premises of the Belleville Metal and Waste Company premises yesterday morning, had been recovered in Toronto. Charges will be laid, Chief Kidd revealed today as he added that the loot stolen had been found on a truck that was being driven into Toronto early yesterday afternoon.

The recovery of the scrap metal valued at over $100 followed a rapid check-up on the robbery following the report of the breakin at the Belleville Metal and Waste Company premises early yesterday. Entrance was gained through the roof, police added. Further details were not available, especially pertaining to the names of the persons found in charge of the truck said to be transporting the loot into Toronto. The truck and loot are being held by Toronto authorities pending further investigation. The goods were identified, however.

Benjamin Adam, a transient, was arrested in Belleville last evening, on charges of intoxication. Adam was remanded to the custody of the county jail pending trial on Friday.

EDWARD WARNER

manded Windsor to "get out to the car" and then shot the bookmaker as he rose from the supper table in the kitchen of his home was similar to that told by previous identification witnesses.

He told also of a second gunman who held the household at bay with a revolver after the killing. A third man assisted the killer in dragging the dying Windsor to the hallway, Warner said.

Took Off Watch

"I saw the No. 3 man taking off Mr. Windsor's wrist watch and then he reached over as if he was taking his stick pin. No. 1 man was cursing at him and going through his pockets."

Warner described the third bandit as an Italian with a small moustache. The other two, he said, were Canadians.

After the murder he picked out photographs of Mickey MacDonald as the killer, Warner testified. He didn't see any photographs of the other two. At a police lineup he identified Mickey as the No. 1 gunman and Alex as the No. 2 man.

Warner, an express company clerk who lived with his wife at Windsor's home for about a year, said he didn't know any threats ever made against his brother-in-law.

Described as Blue

Warner described the eyes of the No. 2 man as blue and "penetrating". To defence counsel Isadore Levinter he denied telling police there was a squint in the man's eyes. Warner admitted he had not revealed to police his identification of the MacDonalds in the lineup at headquarters. He didn't say anything about the men he picked until he got home, and then he told only his wife in the presence of John McDermott, his brother-in-law.

Mr. Justice G. F. McFarland referred to headlines on the trial in today's issue of the Toronto Globe and Mail which read: "Judge cautions counsel in murder trial; advises lawyer against giving evidence to jury by making allegations."

The heading had been brought to Mr. Justice McFarland's attention by defence counsel Frank Regan and his Lordship commented that he had made "no imputation of impropriety" on Regan's part.

"I have no fault to find with the way Mr. Regan has conducted his case from the outset," his Lordship told the jury.

Copy Produced.

Regan produced a copy of a statement given police by Warner soon after the shooting. Witness denied describing the killer as of "heavy build", nor could he recall saying the man had a "chubby face".

He admitted saying on the preliminary hearing the man he saw in the police lineup "looked like the picture" of Mickey MacDonald.

"Then, why do you tell us today he is the man?" Regan demanded. Warner replied he was under tension the day of the preliminary and is still.

"You are not the only one under tension. Those men in the prisoner's box who find themselves under the shadow of the rope . . ."

His Lordship cut in to say there had been "too frequent mention of the position in which these men find themselves."

Questioned On Identification.

Regan questioned as to how witness identified Alex MacDonald, although he was masked with handkerchief and had his hat pulled down, yet could not identify the third man whose face he saw without mask.

"If we are to believe John R. Shea (a Crown witness) the third man was Louis Gallow," Regan suggested. Witness did not recall ever seeing a photograph of Gallow, who is not charged. He had seen a man in a police lineup, in which Regan suggested Gallow was included with the MacDonalds, who "looked like" the third gunman, but was not sure and made no formal identification.

"I was looking for a man with a moustache," witness explained.

"The man on my left (indicating Mickey) is the man who did the shooting," Warner said in re-examination, "the man on my right (Alex) is the man who held us back."

KI-Y LEAGUE

The Belleville Ki-Y softball groups opened their 1939 season with three games last evening, games being played on three local public school grounds.

In the midget series the Personality Kids scored consistently to defeat the Teef Benders 11 to 7 at Queen Mary school grounds in a closely contested match. The winners scored in every inning played, except the second. Wilfred Mills umpired to the satisfaction of all.

Another midget series game played at Queen Victoria school grounds saw the West End kids soundly trounce St. Mikes "Irish" 23 to 9. The Westerners scored ten runs in the second frame to cinch the night's honors. Jerry Bonisteel was the chief umpire for this game.

The only juvenile game scheduled resulted in a slugfest with a total of 43 runs being scored when the East End Club downed the Gossoons 26 to 17 at Queen Alexandra school grounds. Games in both sections of the Ki-Y leagues are scheduled again this evening and Friday.

Secretary George Mills announced today entries in the midget section of the Ki-Y softball groups were still open for applications for affiliation and would remain open until Saturday. Application forms are available at the Y.M.C.A.

Mayor Bone Threatens to Call Tax Strike If Request Refused

Wishes to Cease Paying Assessment on Bonds for Which Provision Has Been Made

Mayor Jamieson Bone in a fighting mood today scored "hidebound, senseless regulations" of the Ontario Government, and threatened to call a "tax strike" of citizens of Belleville if satisfaction is not immediately given by Queen's Park in the matter of being permitted to cease paying assessment on bonds for which provision has already been made.

Over a period of several years Belleville taxpayers have been paying on a levy amounting to $51,517.29 on bonds which have already been paid for. "This has got to stop," declared the Mayor. "We are not going to ask Queen's Park if we may be permitted to stop—we are going to demand. And if our demand is refused, then I am going to call a tax strike. If the people of Belleville don't back me up, then they're a worse lot than I think they are."

Yesterday the Mayor, Alderman MacLean Haig, Chairman of Finance in council, city solicitor A. B. Collins, and city treasurer H. B. Stock visited Queen's Park and the office of the Ontario Minister of Municipal Affairs where the request that the city be permitted to cease paying on these bonds was made by the Mayor.

The local deputation was referred to the office of D. S. Charlton, acting chairman of the Ontario Municipal Board who received the local members cordially, but shook his head when the question was broached.

"You will have to go back to Belleville and put a resolution through council. Then this has to be formally presented to this department before we can do anything," Mr. Charlton told the Mayor.

"We are not allowed to interpret the laws of the Province," Mr. Charlton further said in answer to the Mayor's objection that "it was a lot of red tape."

"We are going back to Belleville" agreed Mayor Bone, "and we are going to pass this resolution through council. Then we are going to present it here, but it's not going to be a request. We are going to demand that we get satisfaction on this matter."

$50,000 Saving Could Be Made

Today Mayor Bone declared a saving of $50,000 would be made to Belleville taxpayers if this bond assessment was cut off. "We would be able to cut down on taxes under the general tax rate a sum of $27,431.08, which is nearly three mills, two and three-quarter mills, to be exact, which will be saved the property owners of Belleville, from direct charges of pavements and sewers, over and above the general tax rate. Then there is another total of $24,086.21 which will be another two and one-half mills. This makes a total levy of $51,517.29 which should not have been made for several years past."

"I feel free to criticise former councils on this matter in the fac that nothing has been done abou it. There has been as far as I am aware, no word of protest abou this unjust assessment. There ha never been any application Queen's Park about it. There never been a demand before, bu there will be now.

"I am going to fight this thin until we either call a general ta strike of tax payers of Bellevill or until they put me in jail for in citing it," stated the Mayor.

"No law is so inflexible that cannot be changed, if the chang is for the common good."

BRITISH SECURITY PROPOSALS ONE-SIDED SAYS PAPER

Soviet Newspaper States Britain Avoids Subject of Mutual Assistance

UNITED FRONT NEEDED

Moscow, May 11—(AP)— The government newspaper Izvestia today voiced the conviction that Great Britain, France, Russia and Poland—or at least the first three—should form "a united front of mutual assistance."

In an editorial attacking British security proposals as one-sided and offering no security to Russia, Izvestia said:

"The U.S.S.R. held and continues to hold that if France and Great Britain really want to create a barrier against aggression in Europe, a united front of mutual assistance should be created, primarily of the four principal powers in Europe—Great Britain, France, the U.S.S.R. and Poland—or, at least of three powers—Great Britain, France and the U.S.S.R.—and that these powers, bound by a pact of mutual assistance on the principles of reciprocity, should guarantee the other states of Eastern and Central Europe which are threatened by aggression."

Izvestia said the British proposals, concurred in by France, "avoid the subject of a pact of mutual assistance among France, Great Britain and the U.S.S.R. and consider that the Soviet government should come to the immediate aid of Great Britain and France should they be involved in hostilities consequent to the responsibilities they have assumed in guaranteeing Poland and Rumania.

Nothing Said About Aid For Russia

"Great Britain says nothing about the aid which the U.S.S.R. should naturally receive on the principles of reciprocity....... It thus follows that under this arrangement the U.S.S.R. must find itself in a position of inequality although it would assume exactly the same obligations as France and Great Britain.

"Where there is no reciprocity there is no possibility of agreeing on real cooperation."

The newspaper rejected the view widely expressed abroad that the Anglo-French pledges to Poland and Rumania in effect guaranteed the borders of Russia.

"In defending Poland and Rumania," the editorial said, "England and France are defending themselves—not the U.S.S.R. Their proposals that the U.S.S.R. should come to their assistance not only do not provide for Anglo-French assistance to the U.S.S.R. on a reciprocal basis, but it is even left to France and Britain to decide when the fight against the aggressors should begin.

"The beginning is left to France and Britain alone although the weight of such a rebuff (to a foe) must fall principally on the U. S. S. R."

Unacceptable Says Paper

The editorial, declaring British security proposals were utterly unacceptable in their present form, was taken as an indication of the Kremlin's attitude.

Izvestia continued:

"We are told that by defending Poland and Rumania, Great Britain and France would be defending the western frontier of the U.S.S.R. That is not true. The western frontier of the U.S.S.R. is not confined to Poland and Rumania....

"Not having a pact of mutual assistance with Great Britain and France, nor with Poland, the U. S. S. R. is (asked) to undertake to assist all these three states without receiving any assistance from them, and moreover in event of aggression aimed at the U.S.S.R. The latter would have to rely solely upon its own forces....

"In his statement in the House of Commons on May 10 Mr. Chamberlain, the British Prime Minister, spoke of collaboration, of an alliance with the U.S.S.R. but collaboration implies reciprocity as its natural basis. Where there is no reciprocity real collaboration can not be brought about."

Izvestia, however, did not say that the door was closed to further British-Russian negotiations.

Modern Tone

Aside from its rejection of the British counter-proposals, Izvestia's editorial struck Moscow diplomatic quarters as remarkable for its relatively moderate tone toward Germany and Italy.

The official newspaper said "it is a lie" to belittle Chancellor Hitler's denunciation of the 1935 British-German naval treaty and the Polish-German non-aggression pact. Both were denounced in Hitler's Reichstag speech April 28.

The paper said the same was true of trying to argue that repudiation of these treaties and the announcement of an Italian-German military alliance "have caused no change in the European situation" when they have "substantially altered the situation in Europe."

Plans For Greeting Royal Party Near Completion

German Stores and Night Clubs Enjoy Season of Great Prosperity

Local Resident Jack Parrott Gives Impressions of Recent Visit

MANY IN UNIFORMS

Everybody well-dressed; two-thirds of the population in uniform; beer-gardens and night-clubs doing a land-office business apparently no unemployed loitering on the streets; shops and stores exuding a general air of prosperity; cities and towns wearing a distinctly military appearance and fortifications everywhere, such is the picture of Germany along the River Rhine as seen through the eyes of Jack Parrott, Kingston Road resident, who returned from a conducted two-months tour of Germany, France, Belgium and Holland, three days ago.

Coblenz, Cologne and other German cities bordering the Rhine were included in the itinerary of the tour. At the border the party was stopped by German officials and French and English newspapers, magazines and any literature containing anti-German propaganda confiscated. "We were allowed to carry cameras into Germany, but strictly warned that any photographs taken within a military area would bring perhaps drastic results", Mr. Parrott stated.

Thirty marks in German money was the maximum allowed to be carried into Germany by the tourists, he said, although travellers' cheques were honored when in the interior. Marks were valued at approximately fifty cents each or twenty three for two pounds sterlin. Foreign monies changed in German stores were exchanged at the rate of twenty cents per mark, that is if you took merchandise. Shirts were extremely dear, he said, an ordinary garment being charged for at the rate of from five to ten dollars each.

Food appeared to be plentiful in restaurants, and of the same quality as in other countries. Butter appeared to be plentiful."

Surrounding areas of the cities and practically the entire Rhineland bordering France bristled with armaments. Soldiers were everywhere. "Practically two-thirds of the population is in uniform. Saluting was common and the Swastika flag was in evidence everywhere," Mr. Parrott stated.

Concentration Camp Prisoners Appear Dejected

"Of course, you must remember, we were on a conducted tour and saw only the places probably that the Germans wanted us to see. At one place we saw concentration camp prisoners working on highways. They seemed to be dejected and in fear of their heavily armed guards."

"However we were free at night to go wherever we wanted to go. Beer-gardens were filled to capacity and night-clubs catered to a large clientele. Everyone appeared to be well-dressed and happy and no visible signs of unemployment were apparent," Mr. Parrott said.

He paid tribute to the "spunk" of the Dutch people. "When we had crossed the Dutch border on our way home, word has just arrived that Hitler had sent word to Holland demanding the presence of a representative of its government. Immediately the Dutch army sprang into action. Troops appeared as if by magi calong the German-Holland border. Annexation was hung on roadside trees. Machine gun crews manned their weapons near bridges and main thoroughfares. Roads were dynamited. Tanks and other mechanized weapons were rushed to the border and a grim, brave little army awaited what appeared might be the inevitable."

Mr. Parrott, who "for the thrill of it" crossed the Atlantic on a cattle boat told humorous stories of the "cow-nurses" that look after the cattle on these ships. "Forty-five calves were born during the passage over," he said "and not one was lost."

"England is a marvellous country" he said, "and being a lover of motoring I took advantage of one of the "rent-a-car" places so common over there. One can rent a modern automobile for four pounds a week. Gasoline or "petrol" costs "one and fivepence" a gallon. Roads are in splendid condition and other motoring facilities are of the lest."

MOTION IS BLOCKED

Ottawa, May 11—(CP)—Transport Minister Howe in the House of Commons last night said a bill to permit erection of a bridge over the St. Lawrence River at Prescott, Ont. requires careful consideration. RULES LAID DOWN FOR ALL AIRMEN

Strict Instructions Issued by Controller of Civil Aviation

Montreal, May 11—(CP)— Strict rules must be followed by airmen during the visit of the King and Queen, according to an official Department of Transport notice appearing on the bulletin board of Montreal's St. Hubert Airport, 11 miles across the St. Lawrence River from the city.

Instructions, issued by J. A. Wilson, Controller of Civil Aviation for the Dominion Department of Transport, specify that no airplane may come within three miles of any ship, train, motor car, residence, hotel or other stopping or resting place of the King and Queen while they are in Canada.

The rules provide, however, if flying service is absolutely imperative within three miles of any city in which the Royal visitors may be stopping, planes must fly at a height of 8,000 feet.

Pilots, flying clubs, passenger and freight companies, amateurs and other holders of licences under permits of the Department of Civil Aviation have been advised of the regulations.

Regular flying service between St. Hubert and United States points will not be impeded. It was expected, however, planes to Ottawa would be forced to fly longer routes.

This was the interpretation informed circles placed on toasts endorsing fuller relations with neighboring friendly states exchanged at a state banquet last night by Prince Paul, Yugoslav Regent, and King Victor Emmanuel.

Italian efforts for increased influence in the Balkans were directed also toward Rumania with the arrival of Economics Minister Mititza Constantinescu for trade talks.

A review of the Italian fleet in the Gulf of Naples was provided for Prince Paul today.

Ottawa, May 11—(CP)— Lucien Beliveau, 17-year-old Ottawa youth, last night rescued two local boys from the Rideau River here.

Although the water only came up to their armpits, the pair were unable to struggle out through the swift current which threatened to carry them down-stream.

Beliveau, hearing their cries, plunged into the water and hauled them out.

5 LOSE LIVES IN N. B. RIVERS

Three Are Drowned When Tree Crashes Against Bridge They Were Crossing

Saint John, N.B., May 11—(CP)—Four men and a youth lost their lives yesterday as New Brunswick rivers took their heaviest toll of the season. One of the victims was drowned only a few hours before he was to have been married.

Willard Price, 16, and two of the men were drowned when a bridge across a branch of the Miramichi River was swept away while the other accidents were at Campbellton on the north shore in the Waspe River, 20 miles from Plaster Rock in central New Brunswick.

James Stewart, 71, Tennyson Price, 25, and Willard Price were carried into the swollen Miramichi branch when a tree crashed against the flimsy suspension bridge they were crossing. Lawrence Price, 22, another member of the group, clung to the partially submerged bridge until rescued.

Victim of the Waspe River accident was Peter Bouchard, 38, father of 12 children, who slipped under a log jam. Leo Leblanc, Campbellton taxi driver, plunged over the end of a wharf into the Restigouche river in his automobile.

Stewart and the Prices were drowned while their families watched helplessly from the shore. On their way to make final arrangements for Tennyson Price's wedding which would have taken place last night, the men disappeared quickly under the fast moving water.

Opinion on Current Affairs Should Not Be Available For Commercial Sponsorship

Final Report of Radio Committee Tabled in House by A. L. Beaubien

FEES UNDER FIRE

Report Finds Political Broadcasts During Elections Should be on Sustaining Program Basis

Ottawa, May 11—(CP)—Network broadcasting on current affairs should not be available for "commercial sponsorship," but more adequate time should be provided free for this purpose in the opinion of the Commons Committee on Radio, whose final report was tabled in the House yesterday.

The report, tabled by Chairman A. L. Beaubien (Lib. Provencher), said that "the committee believes that the corporation's (Canadian Broadcasting Corporation) policies respecting broadcasts of opinion are designed to ensure the largest possible measure of fairness and equality of opportunity."

Direct recommendations in the report called for repeal of the regulation obligating receiving set vendors to make sure purchasers possess licences, that party political broadcasts during election campaigns should be on a sustaining program basis only, and that the fees for private broadcasting licences should be revised.

A great portion of the committee's 15 sittings was occupied in discussion of last winter's controversy between the Canadian Broadcasting Corporation and C. George McCullagh, publisher of The Toronto Globe and Mail, over the corporation's refusal to grant Mr. McCullagh use of a national network to broadcast his own personal opinions.

Shared by Corporation

In stating the committee's belief that opinion broadcasts should not be placed under commercial sponsorship, the report said this view was shared by the corporation.

"Your committee recognizes that the responsibility of controlling and co-ordinating all broadcasting in the public interest rests upon the corporation," the report said. "In this connection your committee wishes to express its gratification of a better understanding between private stations and the corporation, recently attained.

"Your committee is convinced that fairness in the presentation of controversial material can best be assured by means of any system of network broadcasting on a sustaining basis."

The committee urged consideration be given to placing political broadcasts during Federal and Provincial election campaigns on a sustaining basis exclusively, with equitable division of time among the parties, and with network party political broadcast time between elections open to purchase.

The committee renewed its proposal of last year that Canada should have a high-power short-wave broadcasting station financed as a national undertaking but operated and controlled by the corporation. Canada was the only leading trading nation without such facilities.

Last Attempt Made To Avert Shortage

New York, May 11—(AP)—In a last attempt to avert a national coal shortage, United States government representatives proposed today that individual contracts be signed by soft coal producers who agree with the terms laid down by the United Mine Workers, an affiliate of the Congress of Industrial Organization.

John Steelman, federal mediator, said he had evidence that enough operators outside the Appalachian area were in agreement with the union to assure sufficient production to avert a crisis.

A deadlock in negotiations for a new contract for the eight-state Appalachian area, basic for the entire industry, has thrown 460,000 miners into idleness since the old contract expired March 31.

A final effort for a blanket Appalachian agreement will be made in a meeting at 3 p.m. EST (4 p.m. EDT) today. Unless an agreement is reached, individual contracts also will be sought with Appalachian operators.

Two Giant Transports Wrecked in Collision

Alberton, Ont., May 11—(CP)—Two giant transport outfits were wrecked and the drivers injured severely early today in a head-on crash on Highway No. 2, near this village, located halfway between Hamilton and Brantford. It took police over four hours to clear the highway of the vehicles and debris so that two-way traffic might resume.

Harrison German, 23 (248 Elgin Street), Niagara Falls, and Clarence Sayles, 32, (19 Weir Street North, Hamilton), are in Brantford General Hospital. German suffered multiple lacerations. Sayles received possible chest injuries and a severe ear laceration. Condition of both men was said to be fair.

Police said German was driving a Martin Transport trailer outfit towards Brantford when the crash occurred with the Hamilton-bound unit owned by the Sayles Transport Company of Brantford.

Impact of the crash was so great that the Martin tractor and trailer was upside down and turned in the opposite direction when it came to rest. The Sayles outfit jack-knifed and went through a steel guard rail into a ditch.

Provincial Constable Leslie Taylor, district headquarters, was sent to assist Traffic Officers David Rogers of Dundas and Eugene Rose and R. S. Dukes of Brantford. All traffic was blocked for more than a half-hour when the police, assisted by farmers, cleared a lane that enabled one-way movement of vehicles.

Mrs. D. Davidson, Mr. Morley Davidson and Mrs. Adams of Massassaga spent the dinner hour on Sunday with Mr. H. J. Parliament.

On Sunday, May 7th, Mr. H. J. Parliament celebrated his ninety-fifth birthday at his home here. With friends he motored to Victoria Church in the forenoon where he was guest speaker at the service there. Mr. Parliament was instrumental in founding that Sunday School seventy two years ago. His address was most helpful and interesting and all marvelled at the ease with which it was delivered. In the afternoon and evening Mr. Parliament was kept busy with friends and neighbors calling to congratulate him and to wish him more happy birthdays. He was presented with a basket of fruit and box of candy from the Mountain View Church as well as gifts from friends.

Mr. Durwood Conklon of Huff's Island spent the dinner hour on Sunday with Mr. and Mrs. John Bovay.

CORNWALL ASKS FOR FOR RESTORATION OF ORIGINAL ITINERARY

Cornwall, Ont., May 10—(CP) — Mayor John A. Phillips will head a delegation of six that will wait today upon Dr. E. H. Coleman, chairman of the inter-departmental committee on the royal tour, at Ottawa, to urge restoration of the original itinerary calling for a 10-minute stop at Cornwall on May 20. Mayor Phillips said he was hopeful the arrangement would go through as originally planned despite yesterday's announcement at Ottawa the Cornwall and Brockville stops had been cancelled.

MISS NAPOLEON

By Violet M. Methley

"That, as you say, is what you have to make certain," she agreed. "But how? What would convince you?"

"When do we come to business without wasting time?" Meta asked.

"It is important, surely, that you should be satisfied of my good faith?" Leonie said. "Otherwise, my presence here would be a danger."

Suspicious glances again from the conspirators—glances which Leonie returned steadily.

"After all, I take the greatest risk," she said. "One woman against strong men—would I not fear to play false?"

"There is no question of it," the Maharajah interrupted. "I have answered for you—that should be enough."

The "Governess"

Before his arrogance the Bengali cringed, spreading out his hands; even the soldier lost something of his defiant look. Beta spoke in a peevish whine:

"I have little time to spare; I wish to present my report."

"We are ready to hear," the Maharajah said; and Leonie leaned forward chin in hand, listening intently.

Meta spoke with the vehemence of a banked-down fire breaking through in spurts of flame, told of the discontent in his district, the names given to him, the committees formed. The soldier told of disaffection in the army — not much, he confessed, with a shrug. They were like sheep, these Sepoys of today.

"But there is a leaven—and it will work," he concluded.

The little man with the brocaded cap came from the South; according to his account there was much hope there—if a leader was found. And that leader....

He lifted both hands to his forehead and salaamed to Zindia.

"Aye, Gusmani is right," the soldier said. "The Leader—that is what we in India need above all."

"And surely we have him," the Bengali purred. "His Highness stands for all that is greatest in Hind—the caste of the soldier, the blood of the Rajput, god-descended, trusted of the Government.."

A curious shadow passed over Zindia's face as the Bengali went on:

"Trusted, and therefore the more dangerous. Amongst his own vassals he can raise an army, he has riches, youth and courage. A second Tippoo Sultan —Hyder Ali —Aurungzebe, all these and more, since to their qualities is joined the knowledge gained from Europe. In all ways he stands prepared."

The fat man sank back on his cushions, puffed up by his own eloquence; Leonie said softly:

"It is true; there is only one way to strike at England and her Empire—through India, the India she has enslaved and trodden down for nearly two centuries."

"That was also true at the time of the Great Mutiny," Meta said. "And then, we failed...."

"Because there was no worthy leader." Leonie spoke deliberately. "The Princes of Delhi were weaklings—the Nana Sahib was no soldier. That was why you failed in '57—why you need not fail now. For all will work together under one chieftain."

"You know our history well," Gusmani said.

"I have learned all that I could. And one thing is plain; all that has ever been needed to defeat the English is concerted action. Things must happen swiftly when the moment comes."

"Aye—but when shall we know that the moment has come to strike?" grumbled Meta.

Before any other, the only one of the company who had not yet spoken answered. The gaunt brown figure, who had sat so motionless, rose suddenly, stood erect with arms raised above his head.

The outstretched fingers moved, clicking like claws; the gigantic shadow on the cave wall behind, copied each action with grotesque menace, as he spoke in hollow tones.

"The time will be known, surely it will be known. Messengers .... messengers .... blown here and there as chaff is blown, as seeds are blown over the face of the land by a bitter wind. Where the seed falls, the fruit of death will spring, red as blood, red as fire. Signs.... signs.... chupattis will be carried through the land, and none will see who bring them .... But wheresoever they go, men will eat of them, and those who eat are vowed to the Cause....of flour and salt and water are the chupattis made, bread not of life, but of death. From far away shall come the voice of war....and at that sound the white men shall flee, all save a remnant. And that remnant will we drive before us until the sea swallow it. When the red light of a great fire is seen far away....that is the time and the season. So wait for that light .... wait!"

The voice died away; the fakir sank back into his old position, his eyes filmed over oddly.

The soldier and the Bengali questioned him eagerly, but he told them no more. Leonie spoke broodingly.

"The light of a great fire far away—the voice of War; we are to wait for that."

"These seers of visions — one can't trust them too far!" The soldier laughed with bravado. "Better raise this voice of War ourselves and make sure that it is heard."

"You are right," Leonie nodded, with an air of authority which this time the other conspirators seemed to accept. "If I start this fire, are you all ready to keep it burning?"

"You?" The soldier stared.

"Yes. It might be possible. I think I see a way. Only—once lighted, it must not go out. It will need much fuel."

"By the gods it shall have it!" the soldier swore. "We feed the blaze once it is started, never fear. When may we look for it?"

"Soon, I hope; that is all I can promise. Be ready, watch for the red light, as our friend said, and then perhaps you will believe that I am one with you for India — against England!"

There was a concentrated force in Leonie's level tones which plainly impressed her hearers. They found no more to say; even the time for another meeting was left indefinite. In a few minutes, the company dispersed as quietly as they had assembled, leaving Leonie and the Maharajah alone. He spoke doubtfully.

"They accepted you better than I expected."

"They couldn't help it; Fate had settled it already. But they must do more than that," Leonie said calmly.

"You mean—?"

"Follow. We can't wait for vague signs and seasons as I told them; we must make our own moment. Prophecies are only useful if you force them to come true—as I mean to."

"What is this plan of yours?"

"I can't tell you at present. Wait and watch for the red light!" She laughed.

"You should have been a man—and a soldier, too!" Zindia spoke admiringly.

"Thanks. I'm glad you find me a competent governess," Leonie answered gravely.

CHAPTER XVI

Chrissie Acts

The servants, who know everything in India, found much food for gossip at the Struan's bungalow during these weeks. The Ayah reported: "Memsahib cry all time when Struan Sahib not there," while the groom and bearer affirmed: "Struan Sahib swear all time when Memsahib not there." And both statements were more or less true.

In these circumstances Wilson Hall was glad to remember a commission for a series of water-colours from a New York millionaire, who had selected his own subjects at Agra, Delhi and Benares. If it was not the job he would have chosen at least it meant an extremely good price for the pictures, he boasted to Chrissie Struan, trying to prove himself hard-headed.

Hall's absence left Chrissie very lonely, with her husband spending so much time at the flying ground.

Daily Chrissie found it more impossible to speak, to put her love and pity into words. For both were stronger in her heart than any feeling of jealousy or anger—only she couldn't say so.

As for Struan himself, remorse and shame drove him to those long lonely rides, to those hours of incessant toil on plans and calculations and specifications away from his bungalow and from Chrissie, with the bitter whisper in his ear that he wasn't fit to be near her.

"She'd not be able to understand if I told her the truth about my present feelings — what woman could? I believe it would be really better if she went right away — until afterwards; I'm sure she'd be happier."

In the end, it was Chrissie herself who resolved to take action driven on by a kind of desperation.

"Now's the time to do it, while I'm feeling like this, as though nothing could ever matter again," Chrissie thought forlornly. "I don't believe I could cry now, even if I wanted to; I haven't any tears."

It was during the mid-day siesta that she made up her mind—and acted. She got up, bathed, dressed, ordered the pony-cart and finally set off alone, hardly conscious of the breathless heat which pressed down upon all the countryside, as she drove through it towards the flying-ground, still repeating over and over again to herself what she would say, what Ranny would answer, although that part of the duologue was vague and formless.

Chrissie felt fairly sure of finding her husband alone in his office at this time. Lately he had spent the whole day at the aerodrome, taking only some sandwiches for lunch, but during the hottest hours no active work would be going on and probably most of the native staff would be asleep.

Certainly there was no sign of life about the place when she reached the flying-ground at last. It was like a modernized mechanized version of the Palace of the Sleeping Beauty in the Wood. A dog lay stretched, eyes closed, tongue lolling out, in a patch of shade near the entrance; even the watchman at the gate slumbered head on knees. Roused with difficulty he said, resentfully, that Struan Sahib was not there; he had been called away on the telephone very urgently an hour before.

"Oh, dear!" Poor Chrissie looked round miserably. The false strength which had urged her on suddenly collapsed: she felt that she must rest, that she could go no further.

"I'll sit down in the office," she said and set off towards the buildings, stumbling blindly, half dazed by the sun, while the watchman again relapsed into sleep, no need to trouble, when Struan Sahib was safely out of the way and no punishment need be feared.

"Put It Down"

In the empty office, Chrissie sank down thankfully upon a hard chair. Her head throbbed, she longed for a cup of hot tea and, after a few minutes, recovered enough to remember that Ranny kept a spirit-stove and kettle somewhere on the premises.

Where would they be? Chrissie sat up and looked round vaguely. Perhaps in that cupboard—but it needed a terrible effort to get up and see, almost more than tea was worth. She would do it soon though when she had rested a little while longer, although one could hardly call it resting in this chair.

A sound caught Chrissie's ear, purring, ticking sound, almost like a kettle boiling, but of course that was absurd. It seemed to come from the cupboard, though, where she had expected to find the tea-making apparatus: should she go and look?

Drowsily, dully, Chrissie debated the question. It was really too much bother and it would probably only turn out to be some new and horrible reptile or insect—a rattlesnake, perhaps. No, of course there weren't rattlesnakes in India. How idiotic she was! Better rouse herself and see what it was before she dozed off again.

Chrissie hoisted herself up, clinging on the edge of the desk. She walked unsteadily across to the cupboard and opened it. The kettle and spirit-stove were there, on the upper shelf, but the bussing sound did not some from them. It was louder and clearer though, like a muffled alarm-clock; it must be somewhere among the piles of papers at the bottom of the cupboard, whatever it was.

Chrissie knelt down to investigate, moved a roll of blue-prints—then sank back on her heels with a startled indrawing of the breath, rubbed the back of one hand across her eyes and stared again.

She felt as if she was dreaming, or acting in a play, a crook or spy play, like those stories full of thrills and detectives she had loved so as a child.

Surely what she imagined couldn't be true, there must be some perfectly commonplace explanation of that square wooden box with something sticking out of the side of it from which the steady ticking came.

She had never seen anything of the sort before except in imagination and magazine pictures. It was ridiculous to suppose that such an object could be there in Ranny's office cupboard, the companion of his spirit-stove and kettle and yet—

It seemed to Chrissie afterwards as though her brain cleared completely and suddenly, showing her with horrifying certainty that this thing was true, and that she must do something about it at once without wasting another second. For all she knew there might not be even a second to spare.

But what could she do? Springing up, the girl looked round wildly. Through the open veranda, she could see the flying-ground, yellow-dusty, shimmering in the heat. To the right, dwarfing the low office bungalow by their height, were the row of aeroplane hangars, beyond, the workshops. No help there, not a sign of life: probably all the mechanics were sleeping like the watchman, somewhere out of sight.

Chrissie turned her eyes left. Another range of sheds, then something bringing a flash of remembrance and hope. It was no more than a single sparsely - leaved branch projecting from behind a roof, but it recalled a picture of the trees which grew there, a few low, straggling acacias, the only trees for miles round, so Ranny had told her when she visited the flying field first.

And the reason for their comparatively flourishing growth was also the reason for the presence of the aerodrome at this particular place, built as it was on the site of a now-vanished village of mud huts.

There was water, a well which gave a constant supply to the colony at the flying-ground. And knowing this Chrissie also knew what she must do.

Moving faster than she would have thought possible half an hour before, she had reached the cupboard again, stooped and picked up the box.

Holding it firm in both hands, she crossed the veranda, sped down the three steps and began to run, with a nightmarish feeling of loose sand dragging at her feet, of limbs that seemed leaden, heavy, knees that threatened to give way beneath her before ever she could reach her goal.

The faintly waving tree-branches looked miles away as Chrissie ran stumbling towards them; the air was filled with that monotonous grinding whirr, so like the maddening hot-weather sound of cigadas.

Then, through the bussing in her ears came another sound, a voice calling loudly, angrily to the accompaniment of running footsteps.

"Put it down! Put it down, you little fool! Do you hear me!"

Chrissie heard, but she did not obey. A few more desperate, stumbling steps would bring her to the low mud parapet of the well, and once there—

Without turning, without pausing, she panted out an answer.

"I—I can't drop it—I daren't! It's—an infernal machine!"

May Be Married Many Times, Says John Barrymore

Chicago, May 10.—(AP)— John Barrymore buried his matrimonial troubles under a burst of witticisms today and made it plain he was by no means through with romance.

The four-times married actor said in an interview that a few marital failures should cause no man to feel unduly depressed. Becoming fairly lyrical in spots, he put it this way—

"I am told that among stamp collectors the rarest and most precious item is the Ecuadorian Blue. Does the collector stop collecting simply because he fails repeatedly to get that most desirable of all stamps? No, he carries on the pursuit. He knows that there are Ecuadorian Blues. That's the way it is with marriage."

Sportively he remarked:

I shall be married many more times before I die.

Barrymore said he was unreservedly a partisan of marriage to career women. In his rods:—

"I believe in women having a career—and how? All women should have careers, and most of them want careers. . . .What a life for a woman—staying home and supervising the making of soup."

"Everybody ought to have a whack at marriage," he said. There is no set of rules for marriage. Perhaps that is why so many of us marry."

A lively walk is the lot of the foot wearing a bright shoe. Black patent shoe red leather heel and red lacings is attracting much attention and admiration.

Advice to the Lovelorn

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

Famous Authority on Problems of Love and Marriage.

Twilight of a Philanderer

Mr. —— is feeling sorry for himself. He is grieved by the irreproachable courtesy of his wife, hurt by the humorous man-of-the-world pleasantries of his sons, stunned by the chill avoidance of his daughter—his favorite child. He would like to change the family's attitude and be revered in his old age as the perfect husband and father.

This Mr. —— was a gay butterfly of a man who never thought of laying up those things which make for comfort in the chill winter of old age. He was a good enough provider for his family, being a successful lawyer. He saw that they had a comfortable home, a tight roof, a generous table, good clothes, and that the children were educated. But his sense of obligation stopped there.

His constitutional right to the "pursuit of happiness" began shortly after his marriage, when his adoring young wife, thinking she was all-in-all to him, was broken-hearted by his flirtations with girls she had grown up with, one of whom was her bridesmaid.

Then came his neglect of his wife. Later his infidelities, which she condoned out of consideration for her children, though she no longer lived with him as his wife. To this arrangement he was entirely agreeable. He didn't want a divorce; divorces were not looked upon as easily at that time as they are today.

In his way he was very fond of the children, proud of his boys, of their manliness, their school records, and he adored the little girl, who was too young to realize what poor husbands and fathers philanderers make.

And so it went on for twenty years. Meantime the wife's father had died and left her a considerable fortune, but she did not break up her loveless home. She had long since ceased to regard her husband as the star by which she set her course. Her life was filled with the love for her children, her deep interest in their welfare. She worked for the less-privileged, she had her friends and clubs. She had turned failure into moderate success and contentment.

Then came the climax. At 56 her gay butterfly of a husband suffered a paralytic stroke which confined him to a wheel chair and affected his speech. Beyond casual inquiries, his jolly friends didn't trouble their heads about him. And the butterfly man turned to his family for the loving attention which he felt ought to be his unquestioned right.

But the barriers between himself and his family he had built too securely. They had nothing in common. His wife secured a good male nurse and continued the course she had laid out for herself when her husband had failed her.

Her sons, their wives and children all adored her. She and her daughter were good pals. Her work was absorbing—among the poor, her clubs, her friends. A sense of duty made her read the newspapers and the latest books to the parody of a man in the wheel chair, whose speech was so difficult to understand. His daughter seldom went to see him, she knew about his way of life and had been disgusted with it. His jolly companions never called, and there was only the occasional duty visits of his sons.

So the once gay butterfly man can't understand the attitude of his family. He thinks his helplessness should endear him to them. If we were in a preachy mood, we could say there isn't a sadder spectacle than the butterfly husband and father worn out by all the fun he's had when he comes home to die.

GOOD MANNERS

MRS. CORNELIUS BEECKMAN

Etiquette News From Here and There

"Did you have to learn to be polite, or did you just grow that way?" A reporter asked this important question of the ten-year-old girl who was named the politest little girl in New York recently. A nine-year-old boy was chosen the politest little boy at the same time. Both of these bright-eyed title-winners enthusiastically said that it was mother and father who first taught them to be polite. Another triumph for the fine truism: "Manners begin at home"!

It was the second annual Courtesy Derby held in New York, and the politeness champions, Patricia Gilligan and Matthew Logan, were selected from over 100,000 school children. The two winners, besides successfully passing the tests on general conduct, had obviously done the best "home work" to acquire the answers to detailed questions of social form.

One of Matthew's accomplishments is a courteous "How do you do", said with a good grace to all kinds of introductions. He admitted too, that, if he were presented to President Roosevelt, he would add to the how-do-you-do "I am very pleased to meet you, sir," and if chance brings it about that he is presented to King George VI when the King visits New York, he would say "Your Highness, I am very, very pleased to meet you."

On appropriate occasions Patricia is an enthusiast for expressing courtesy by a curtsy. She would curtsy, she said, when she acknowledged an introduction to Mrs. Roosevelt, to Queen Elizabeth, to the Governor's wife, or to the neighborhood clergyman. She would say "hello" to a neighbor . . . .without curtsying.

You had only to look at Matthew to believe his insistence that politeness, notwithstanding, he is "not a sisssy" and that he "likes a good fight". The eternal feminine triumphed in Patricia when she admitted that, as an added extra attraction to her polite personality, she had put two bowknots in her hair. One bowknot, she said, was her usual decoration.

I wonder when it would come . . when it would be reported what the bridegroom wore at his wedding. It came recently, when we read that Douglas Fairbanks, jr., "wore formal afternoon attire" at his wedding, and that Tyrone Power "wore a pin-striped business suit". Since both brides wore the same general type of costume, I take my stand with Mr. Fairbanks' choice of attire.

In my column, I hope you remember, I am always urging girls to sit calmly in their seats in an automobile until the man has a chance to open the door of the car. I have tried to show that this not only reveals a girl's mannerliness, but also awakens a man's feeling of chivalry, and a man likes to be given an opportunity to be chivalrous, protective.

Now comes Big News about the romantic effect of this special etiquette detail! Listen to what Dr. S. L. Katzoff, San Francisco marriage specialist, has to say about this:

"Any woman, anywhere, can get married if she knows the art of attraction. It often comes down to this. . . many women are too modern to attract men. This type of woman has unconsciously adopted an attitude of self-reliance.

"She'll climb out of automobiles without waiting for the man to open the door for her. She'll hold her own coat while she puts on. All this is bad . . . very bad.

"It may even keep her from getting married."

So there you are, girls!

Mumps Far More Dangerous Than Is Generally Conceded

I don't know of any ailment where the patient receives as little sympathy as when afflicted with mumps. It seems to be more or less of a joke—to everyone but the victim. For mumps can make a person awfully uncomfortable, and, besides, at times can be dangerous.

This is another of the diseases the Quintuplets have escaped so far. I hope they continue to escape it, for if one got it, then the five would be going around with swollen necks. If they do get it, however, it won't be as serious as if they were five boys, for mumps are more serious with males.

Mumps is the oldest known infectious disease. Over 2,300 years ago, Hippocrates gave a detailed account of it, includnig the symptoms. Of all the infectious diseases, it tends more than any other to occur in epidemics. There are sometimes cases which break out in sporadic fashion, but if one occurs in school, there are likely to be many more.

Cold, wet weather seems to be the time when mumps has its inning. It can occur any time of the year, but late winter and spring is its period of greatest incidence. A disease that occurs almost entirely among children, it makes itself manifest in children between the years of five to fifteen. I don't think I ever remember seeing an infant with mumps.

But children aren't the only ones to get mumps. Occasionally an adult will contract it. When this happens you have a very sick person on your hands. Often he feels that it is a child's disease; that he shouldn't give in to it. That's just about the most foolish attitude one could take.

I can recall a quite fashionable wedding scheduled for our part of the country some years ago. A few days before the ceremony, the groom was taken down with mumps. He insisted he was all right; that there wasn't anything wrong. He was bound to go on with the wedding. Well, he tried too hard to keep going and when his wedding day rolled around, he was one sick young man. It was weeks before they could go through with the ceremony.

The incubation period for mumps is about two and a half weeks; that is, this period elapses from the time of exposure to the infection until the first symptoms appear. The first symptom is usually a sharp pain in the side of the face every time the patient opens his mouth or tastes something sour. Many an old grandmother I've known tested the children with pickles when there was a suspicion that they had mumps.

Just after the pain appears there comes a swelling just in front of the ear and above the boney angle of the jaw. The skin over this swelling will often become very tense and shiny. Every time the patient opens his mouth, there is a feeling of intense pain. It is a very uncomfortable disease. If your child has it, you will find that he runs a temperature of about 102 degrees for a few days. At the end of this time, if you are careful of him and keep him in bed, the swelling goes down and the child gets well rapidly.

Fashion Flashes

(By ALICE ALDEN)

A good buy, since it goes beautifully over day time things and can be worn with cotton evening frocks, is a short red velveteen coat with a hemline which brings it above the waist in front. The jacket flares loosely in back. Sleeves are full.

A Spring night is just the time for a delicious dance frock of delicate lilac silk chiffon, sprinkled here and there with iridescent mauve spangles in star formation. Bands of the sequins edge the strapless bodice.

Tradition wins when it comes to the bridal frock, no matter how modern a girl may be. The favorite is the classic gown of rich lily-white satin. lovely model has a high corselet waist and a sunburst tucked bodice. The skirt has a very long full train.

Rather dramatic but very, very smart is the black patent shoe with piping of red leather and a red heel. Ditto a big bag of black patent leather piped and lined in the self-same red.

At last it has been done. Alix makes an evening frock in two shades of red and they get along famously. The bright red chiffon blouse tops a wide, full skirt of dark red chiffon. For the very brunette or the very blonde.

The prize this season goes to Chanel for innovations and wearable novelties. Not only are her gypsy evening things all over town but she triumphs in sports things too. For instance, she makes a pale blue jersey sports frock and over it flings a polo coat of pale blue camel's hair. A coat like that is excuse enough for a cruise trip.

Preparing for his meeting on June 1 with Max (Give Me Publicity or Give Me Death) Baer, Lou Nova, RIGHT, whacks away at a sparring partner at his training quarters at Nyack, N.Y. Lou, a ruggedly built party, has made rapid strides in the heavyweight ranks and is one of few bruiser boys given a chance to defeat Champion Joe Louis . . . . not this year, but sometime, maybe. MRS. H. MOODY TO DEFEND TITLE

Forced Top Professional to Go All Out to Defeat Her in Two Sets [illegible]

New York, May 11 (AP)—Mrs. Helen Moody played two sets of smashing, no-quarter tennis against one of the country's top professionals, Walter Senior, and to the amazement of onlookers she seemed a greater player right now than she ever was.

Helen has dominated women's tennis for the better part of [illegible] decades. But now she is crowding 34. Yet Senior had to [illegible] the stops to lick her 6-4, 7-3 yesterday and at the finish he was blowing like Tony Galento while Helen took one deep breath and was perfectly composed.

She is playing a hard match every day now, whipping herself into shape, no doubt, to defend her Wimbledon title. Helen isn't yet ready to announce she will play at Wimbledon, but you can count on it.

The girl who, was "little poker face" when she won her first United States championship back in 1923 has grown into a maturely beautiful woman who smacks the ball a little harder each year, yet retains all her amazing accuracy. Possibly she has slowed a trifle in her footwork. She spoke of "waddling about out there."

Helen is loosening up somewhat with the years. Every now and then there is a trace of a smile as she plays, and several times she actually talked to herself after she missed a shot.

Having a tough time getting under way as a mainstay of the Cincinnati Reds' pitching staff, which so many predicted he'd be, is Johnny Vander Meer, the famed "double no-hit" pitcher of last year. Vandy has taken part in four games, with but one decision on his record, a loss. In 18 2-3 innings he has allowed 22 hits and given up 19 bases on balls, while striking out 13 enemy batters. Meanwhile Bucky Walters and Paul Derringer have been carrying the Reds' pitching load.

Canadian Rouge May be Incorporated In U. S. Game

Winnipeg, May 11 (CP)—West, athletic director of University of North Dakota, says in a letter to Manager Joe Ryan of Winnipeg Blue Bombers that a Toronto sports writer will witness the football game here May 20 between North Dakota and Bombers with a view to reporting on the possibility of incorporating the Canadian rouge into the United States game.

West's letter says: "I understand that an Eastern Canada sports writer from Toronto will witness the game with the idea to make a report on it to Grantland Rice (United States sports columnist) and other people in the U.S. who are interested in the possibility of putting the rule regarding the Canadian rugby rouge into the American game.

"Personally I have the feeling that with this rule we will have a game that is certainly wide open. Almost anything can happen at any time. There should be more scoring and more thrills because of these rules."

The North Dakota-Bombers game will be played half under Canadian and half under United States rules. It is part of Royal welcome week celebrations here.

LARRY O'CONNOR AND BILL FRITZ WILL HELP TEAM

Veteran Coach Says Both Will Win Points at Olympic Games

RIGHT AT PEAK

Fritz Runs 600 to Strengthen Stretch Kick for Quarter and Stamina for the Half

(By Sydney Gruson Canadian Press Staff Writer.)

Toronto, May 11 (CP)—Approaching the opening of another Canadian track and field season, Hec Phillips found time today to survey the Dominion's possibilities for next year's Olympics and came up with the conclusion "we'll do all right." Larry O'Connor and Bill Fritz were the main reasons for the conclusion.

Phillips, veteran track coach at University of Toronto, was probably the least surprised man in the country when his two star pupils spreadeagled classy opposition during the United States winter indoor meets. Phillips always had unbounded faith in O'Connor, the hurdler, and Fritz, the runner.

"O'Connor is an Irishman and the Irish always have been the best hurdlers," said Phillips, a first-close half-miler during his running days in Scotland and Canada. "I thought Fritz would be Canada's greatest quarter-miler when I saw him running for the first time in Windsor about 10 years ago. I think he's that now.

"Both are young, in their early 20s, and the way they're going and with the improvement I'm sure they'll show, I've no hesitation in thinking their chances high for Olympic victories. Both got points for Canada at Berlin and I wouldn't be at all surprised if both won in Finland."

Two-Fold Purpose

Fritz has been campaigning at 600 yards during the winter for a two-fold purpose. He's not sure yet whether he's going to stick to the quarter-mile, at which he's broken 48 seconds, or try for the half. Running the 600, Phillips figures he'll strengthen a stretch kick for the quarter and add stamina for the half.

Fritz won the 500 at the New York Athletic Club meet in 57.8 seconds, only 2-10 of a second off Eddie O'Brien's U.S. indoor record. O'Connor was just as impressive winning the 60-yard high hurdles at the same meet, equalling the record 7.2 seconds.

Phillips doesn't have to coach either of them hard. When they're in Toronto he works them over familiar ground-work, straightening a fault or improving style. When Fritz is working out at Kingston, where he is studying engineering at Queen's University, Phillips drops him a line, recommending the best work to keep him in trim.

As for other Olympic prospects, Phillips likes the looks of the broad-jumping Brown twins, Wallace and Harold, from Meaford and he thinks there's every reason to believe Johnny Loaring, a quarter-mile star from Windsor and London, can come back as fast as ever if he resumes training soon.

Canadian Sportsmen Are Asked for Views

Belleville Ontario-Intelligencer
Belleville, Ontario, Canada.

Dear Sir:—

In a recent letter to the New York Herald-Tribune, Dr. Ira N. Gabrielson, Chief of the United States Biological Survey, discussing the activities of DUCKS UNLIMITED said as follows:

"I am curious to know what Canadian sportsmen, who are understandably concerned in the extent to which we shoot in this country the ducks they have raised in theirs, are going to think when they learn that the good, honest, effective work now attempted in Canada is being used in the United States to stimulate subscriptions for its continuation by encouraging American sportsmen to believe that because of their contributions they may expect longer seasons, larger bag limits, the return of live decoys, and the permitted use of bait. Or what do they think of the American sponsors of the Canadian organization opposing the acquisition of areas valuable for wildfowl refuges in the United States, and promising local groups of hunters support in any such hostile movements they may wish to organize?"

What do Canadian sportsmen think?

"Hizzoner, the Ump!"

Hes' Got More On His Mind Than Knowing the the Rules

By IRVING VAUGHAN
Central Press Canadian
Sports Writer

What does an umpire think about?

The answer to that one if you got it from a ball player or a manager would be an explosive: "They don't think."

But the boys in blue who try to call 'em as they see em, really do think; it is part of their job. Mastering the rules isn't the umpire's only problem. What makes his job harder is the fact he hasn't time to deliberate when the rules themselves are confusing.

Along with the rules umpires are surrounded by a series of regulations which the higher-ups regard as essential to the game. These regulations make a policeman of the umpire before, during and even after a game. For three to four hours a day he has many things on his mind, not counting about 50 ball players ready to tear him to pieces and the thousands of fans waiting to see the players do it.

Fans Know But Little

The average fan who barks at an umpire and yet wouldn't hurt the fellow if the chance presented itself, has no idea of what goes on behind the scenes. One of the umpires working a game must arrive one hour before starting time. He can sit in the stand, but he has to keep his eyes working. He must see to it that neither team is cheated on its allotted time for hitting and fielding practice. If he sees a player talking to a spectator he is expected to report it to headquarters. If a player shows up in a dirty uniform it's the policeman's duty to make him get into a presentable garment.

The way umpires must guard the baseballs you'd think there was a scheme afoot to sneak in strange pellets. Four dozen balls, the boxes unbroken, must be delivered by the home club to the umpire's room before the game. Two dozen are placed in a bag. The other two dozen are placed in the sunken compartment near home plate. The umpires are not supposed to allow these balls out of their sight.

There's the little matter of batting order. Before the umpire and manager can permit a game to start he must be in possession of written line-ups carrying the signatures of the two managers. The league furnishes cards for this purpose and the umpire keeps them in his pocket for reference. If a team makes two or more substitutions at the same time the manager must immediately inform the plate umpire where the newcomers are going to bat. Then the umpire is responsible for seeing that this information is conveyed to the press box. In the old days umpires yelled but now loud-speaker systems serve the purpose.

The umpires along with the calling of plays, must act if they see a player who is warming up in the spots set aside for such purposes, suddenly decide to take a chair in the grandstand. It is up to the umpire to order him back. Players are not permitted to recline on the bench. Base runners can't sit down on the bag for a rest while time is called. A pitcher warming up in the bull pen can't throw his jacket on the ground. It must be placed on the bench.

No Hot Dogs, Thanks

Vendors are barred from the field during a game. If conditions make it necessary to wink at this restriction a ground rule must be adopted to cover a case of a peddler being hit by a ball in play. Field photographers are furnished with credentials. If they don't have them the umpire must give them the air.

Pitchers can't work with ragged or slit sleeves. Such devices aid in deception and the umpires must act immediately. They must know what to do if a third strike lodges in the mask of the plate umpire, or if a batted fair ball sticks in a screen. They must watch for the "stops" in a pitcher's delivery. If a pitcher does stop momentarily after a preliminary stretch of his arms it's a balk. They must watch that a pitcher doesn't cheat with his feet by not staying on the rubber slab during delivery of the pitch.

And if an umpire sees a player, at the end of the game, toss the ball to a gang of clamoring youngsters, he must report the incident. The player will be fined.

Yes, the hours are good, but it's not all milk and honey, the life of "hizzoner, the ump."

WRESTLING CARD TO BE THRILLING

Joe Conkle, Who Meets Briggar, Has Just Returned from Europe

Joe Conkle, who formerly wrestled as the Red Devil throughout Canada and the United States, recently returned to his native land of the Maple Leaf following a successful tour of the British Isles and Central Europe, where Conkle met with considerable success in meeting European welterweights in his favorite pastime of wrestling. Conkle, a pocket edition of the ferocious George Zaharias, is a relative of Eddie Conkle, who a quarter of a century ago carried the name of Canada high in the wrestling realm of the world. Conkle meets Norm Briggar, of Detroit, in the semi-final bout of a three-card professional show at the Hume arena on Friday night. Always the villian, Conkle repeatedly brings the wrath of the patrons upon his head for his rough ring tactics, but can always be depended upon to please the fans with a fast-moving show.

Another favorite in Belleville's wrestling circles will return to a local ring on Friday night in the person of Frank Slavick, the Polish-Canadian grappler from Windsor, who meets Eddie Kimiski of Buffalo in a promised bout of speed and agility.

The main bout on the card sees Al Dunlop, the Cleveland rubberman, test the strength of George Richards, the Jewish wrestling champion, who has recently returned from a successful tour of the U.S.A. Richards, a tall lithe Jewish lad, is a great favorite with the ladies, being a modern adonis of the ring and exceptionally good looking.

To begin with, I've never known a Tip Top garment to shrink a fraction of an inch when cleaned and pressed. That speaks pretty well for Tip Top's pre-shrinking methods. Then the tailoring details they seem to take such a lot of trouble with; the coat collar, for instance, is cut to fit snugly around the neck. The lapels roll with a graceful sweep and don't curl up. The sleeves hang smartly from the shoulders—you can tell a real craftsman has done the job. The lining has been accurately set in—no pulling or wrinkling. Indians Reach First Division As Bob Feller Hurls Fifth Win Defeating the Athletics

First Hurler in Either Major League to Win Five Games This Season

BRIDGES WINS FOUR

Detroit Hurler Yet to be Beaten This Year in American League

(By Judson Bailey Associated Press Sports Writer).

Robert William Andrew Feller is a seasoned young man now and the first pitcher in either Major Baseball League to win five games.

These two facts belong together because the Van Meter, Ia., speedster is working wonders for Cleveland Indians on the kind of twirling which for two years kept everybody in circles—mostly on passes around the bases.

In beating Philadelphia Athletics yesterday 7-4 in a contest which boosted the Indians into the first division for the first time since the early days of the season. Feller gave up a dozen hits, four bases on balls and made a couple of wild pitches. Such looseness would have licked a lot of hurlers, but it didn't bother Bob because the Indians galloped in front with six runs in the first two innings.

Tommy Bridges held Washington Senators to five hits in stopping a seven-game Detroit losing streak and lifting the Tigers out of the American League cellar. The only Washington run was unearned as he scored his fourth victory against no defeats by a 5-1 score.

Yanks Coast to Win

With Bill Dickey and George Selkirk of Huntsville, Ont., accounting for four runs on homers in the first inning, the Yankees and Bump Hadley coasted to a 7-1 triumph over St. Louis. The game advanced New York half a game ahead of Boston in games won and lost, but left the Red Sox, who were rained out at Chicago, still leading .714 to .706 in percentages.

Lou Fette pitched Boston Bees to a 6-2 margin over Chicago Cubs on three hits. Lon Warneke held the Phillies to seven safeties as St. Louis Cardinals won 4-3 and moved into a tie for first place in the National League, and the pace-setting Cincinnati Reds were held to seven by Whitlow Wyatt and Ira Hutchinson of the Dodgers as Brooklyn won 10-5 on the slugging of Babe Phelps and partners.

The day's only shutout, however, was fashioned by Truett Sewell of Pittsburgh Pirates, by 5-0 over New York Giants.

Last year an outstanding rookie with Washington Senators, Taft Wright, ABOVE, is continuing his good work this year. He played in 100 American League games as a rookie and when the season ended sported a batting average of .350, although he had not been at bat often enough to qualify for the league crown. This year he's been consistently over the .300 mark and up with the leaders in batting in runs.

NEWARK MOVES UP

Mike Chartax, Slugging Outfielder Keeping Team in Pennant Race

(By The Associated Press)

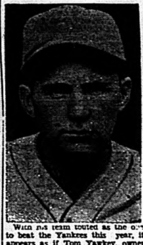
Mike Chartak, slugging rightfielder for Newark Bears, has come into his own as an International League star.

Last season, when the champions had good outfielders by the carload lot, Chartak was strictly an in-and-outer—in and out of the lineup. In 22 games he turned up at first base, and some of the time he was out in the garden.

Today, after 18 games, he boasts an average of .397 and is the hardest-hitting Newark regular. The 22-year-old southpaw swinger boosted that figure considerably yesterday when he clipped Montreal pitching for four and led the Bears to their sixth straight triumph, by 8-7 over the Royals.

In spite of the Bears' winning streak and Chartak's slugging, the 1938 winners remain a game and a half in back of the leading Jersey City Giants. The Jerseys, although out-hit 12 to 7, made good use of their safeties and the eight passes issued by Phil Marchildon and Joe Mulligan to nose out Toronto Maple Leafs, 6-5, and sweep the two-game series.

Baltimore, Buffalo and Rochester wound up the day in a three-way tie for fifth place. The Orioles lost to the Red Wings 5-4, as Gene Corbett uncorked a wild throw with one out and two on in the ninth, and the Bisons split a doubleheader with the third-place Syracuse Chiefs, who took the opener 6-2 and dropped the nightcap 5-4.



With his team touted as the one to beat the Yankees this year, it appears as if Tom Yawkey, owner of Boston Red Sox, is taking no chances of injury jinxes, overtaking his team. Fairly well stocked with outfielders, it was recently announced he had purchased Lou Finney, ABOVE, outfielder and first baseman from Philadelphia Athletics. Never a robust hitter, Finney has been in the majors seven years and sports an average of 279, his best year being three seasons ago, when he poled out 197 hits for a .302 average.

Tough break for Chicago Cubs in the scramble for the National League pennant was the injury sustained by Phil Cavarretta, ABOVE, who suffered a broken ankle sliding into second base in a game against the Giants. Placement of Cavarretta at first base at the start of the season was supposed to have been the reason Rip Collins was shipped to the minors, but when injured Cavarretta was listed as an outfielder, with a rookie at first.

CALLING 'EM

Between the Lines

with

Ken J. Colling

There are a lot of does and dont's when learning the art of batting, whether it be in baseball or softball. Recently the Kingston scribe, who has been taking more than the usual amount of interest in the diamond pastime of a recent date, summarized a few suggestions to young ball players in the matter of batting stance as follows:

"Keep the bat back in position to hit once the pitcher gets into pitching position on the mound.

Make sure that you are the proper distance from the plate; this is important. You can regulate this properly by extending your arms so that the end of your bat reaches a few inches across the far side of home plate.

Use a somewhat high stance with the bat for it is much easier to swing at low pitches from this position than it would be to hit at high pitches from a low batting stance.

Major League pitchers will tell you that the batter with the short stride is the hitter who is hard to fool with the pitch.

Very little weight is placed on the forward stride stride, which enables the hitter to adjust his position accodirng to the direction of the pitch when necessary.

Combine all of the wrist and forearm action at your command just at the time of impact of ball and bat.

Swing your hips into action as you pivot and make 'a complete follow through.

In some cases such as the home run hitter the follow through may finish on the upswing, but try to keep your swing as level as possible. Never develop a down swing.

If the batter fails to watch the pitcher carefully he is apt to hit more at the pitcher's motion than at the ball.

Remember that a high fast pitch is the most difficult to bunt.

Knowing how to swing and when to swing is an important part of hitting.

Arms, eyes, legs, wrists, all contribute their share in the making of a great hitter.

Hold your arms in a relaxed position with the elbows away from the body."

The City of Oshawa recently published a Memorial Cup pamphlet, commemorating the winning of the Dominion junior junior hockey championship by the Oshawa Generals. Published for the purpose of introducing the champions to the public, the booklet of course carries the conventional eulogization of all concerned with the new champions. Harold Lake, who in the lean years of hockey in Oshawa was labouring hard towards the day when Oshawa would become a centre in the puck game, revealed some startling facts in a short but meaty column. He says that Walter Fair, of Oshawa Juniors of 1912-13 was rated as one of the best hockey players of his time. Walter later played C.O.B.L. baseball for the Motor City. Harold also points out that the largest paid attendance to witness a hockey game in Canada was last season when 15,659 jammed through the Maple Leaf Garden turnstiles for a St. Boniface-Oshawa junior game and that series drew over 56,000 customers. He also is of the opinion that "Doc" Rowden was the best hockey player ever developed in Oshawa. The publication is well arranged and we are filing it away along with several others for use when Belleville may perhaps gain similar honors.

Fans attending 'mushball' games at the Coleman Flats softball park this summer will be given additional comforts, President Clem Bowler revealed today. A new score board is being erected, much larger than any hereto-fore seen in connection with softball. Also the bleachers will be etexnded along the first and third base lines, thus assuring the patrons of at least a place to park the body, and rest while enjoying their favorite diversion. After taking a glance over the spring training activities of the local softball clubs it seems to this corner as though the race should narrow down to two clubs. Corbys A.C. and the Oilers, with Chuck Barnett's Corbyville gang having the poll position at post time.

Do you remember when Vincent Richards, 16-year-old holder of six American tennis championships, was suspended from tournament play 20 years ago today. Charged with commercializing his name and reputation as a player, the American Lawn Tennis Association clamped down on him. Later he was reinstated.

Paul Derringer, star pitcher of the Cincinnati Reds, testified in court yesterday he was not intoxicated when he had to "shove as hard as I could" in order to make a long distance telephone last summer. Derringer is being sued by R. E. Condon, 43-year-old industrial engineer in a $25,000.00 personal injury suit brought on, Condon said, as the result of injuries sustained by Condon when struck by Derringer who also denied he was intoxicated.

We're Telling You That—Goody Rosen returned to the Dodgers' lineup and got three hits yesterday as the Daffiness men walloped the Reds 10-5; Heath went hitless, Krakauskas was chalked up with another loss and Selkirk came through with a timely hit for Ontario's efforts in the majors yesterday.....Just where Earl Cook, the Lemonville fireball artist has disappeared to we can't find out; Cook was with the Reds early in springtime.....Bill Irwin, former Balmy Beach line star, has been reappointed coach of the Peterborough Orfuns, who are in the throes of an extensive spring training period preparatory to the senior O.R.F.U. wars of next fall .....It is estimated that Tom Yawkey has spent at least $3,500,000.00 on the Boston Red Sox since taking over the club ownership in 1933—and no world series pennant in sight yet.

CORRECT CLOTHING FOR MEN

National League May Not Be An Inferior Circuit But It Provides Haven for Ex-American Leaguers

By Pat Robinson

Central Press Canadian Sports Writer

New York, May 11.—Waite Hoyt undoubtedly was "needling" the boys a trifle when he intimated that the National league is a bush outfit and that the only true major league is the American.

We can't string along with the old Yankee pitcher on that but we must admit that a large percentage of National league players today are cast-offs of the American league.

Some had only a bowing acquaintance with the junior circuit but most of them saw long years of service before finding a haven in the National league.

Many of these old American leaguers—no longer considered able to hold up their end on the junior wheel— are now main cogs in the National.

Every National league club has at least one ex-American leaguer on its roster and the Dodgers have no fewer than nine.

Back of the plate the Dodgers have Ray Hayworth, an ex-Tiger. On the mound, they have Whitlow, Wyatt, ex-Indian, and Luke Hamlin and Boots Poffenberger, who both wore Detroit uniforms. They also are counting heavily on Vito Tamulis, who was not good enough to stick with the Yankees.

Leo Durocher, manager and shortstop of the Dodgers, played several years under the late Miller Huggins of the Yankees, and Tony Lazzeri, who will see plenty of infield service this year, also spent years with the world champions. Recently they secured Lyn Lary from Cleveland Indians.

In the outfield Fred Sington, one-time Senator, snares flies and takes his cut at the plate.

It may be not quite fair to list Carl Hubbell as a former American leaguer because, while the Tigers first brought him up from the minors, they sent him back without a fair trial and he has earned all his major league triumphs as a member of the New York Giants.

Walter Brown pitched for the Yanks before the Giants got him. Outfielder Bob Seeds also was a Yankee for a time, And the Giants' ace relief man, Dick Coffman, is a former Brownie.

Al Simmons was a great outfielder for the Athletics for many years. Then as he slipped down hill he was shunted to the White Sox, the Tigers and finally the Senators. Now, we see him as a mainstay in the outfield of the Bees.

And the pennant-winning Cubs have gathered Earl Whitehill into the fold after many years spent on the firing line in the American league.

Sometimes these oldtimers get a new lease on life in fresh surroundings and, for a year or two, play about as well as they ever did. Sometimes ex-American leaguers play better in the National league than they ever did in the junior circuit.

Certainly Durocher plays just as well in the National as he did in the American and Dick Coffman is a better pitcher with the Giants than he was with the Browns. Jim Tobin, the Pirate pitcher, also is better now than he was with the Yanks.

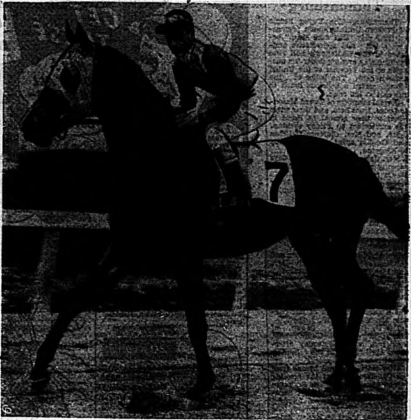
Without recourse to the record books, one can name offhand many more former American leaguers who are now drawing paychecks in the National such as Danny MacFayden, Deb Garms, Pinkey Whitney, Hal Warstler, Milt Shoffner, Bob Weiland, Joe Bowman, Heinie Manush, Baxter Jordon, Jim Weaver, Bucky Walters, Nolan Richardson, Jack Russell and Carl Reynolds.

TORONTO TEAM DEFEATED

New York, May 11 (CP)— The woman's International softball championship is up in the air again today.

Last night more than 9,000 admiring Manhattan fans gathered at Madison Square Garden eager to present the palm to the Langley-Lakesides of Toronto. The night before most of these fans had seen the Toronto girls drub the New York champion Roverettes 3-1 and the consensus was that the Canadian girls were the tops. But the Langley's upset the applecart and lost 3-1 to the Roverettes.

Umpire Bill Stewart calls Phil Cavarretta of Chicago Cubs safe at second on this play against New York Giants, but the Cubs outfielder was out in a different sense, as during the slide he twisted the leg that's doubled underneath him in the picture and suffered a broken ankle. Burgess Whitehead, Giants' second baseman, is tagging him with the ball.



Chief threat to Johnstown's supremacy in the three-year-old division on the horse racing front this year appears to be Gilded Knight, ABOVE, undefeated in three starts this year and conquer of some of the horses Johnstown, winner of the Kentucky Derby, has also beaten. What should be one of the best renewals of the historic Preakness at Pimlico, Saturday, will find the two top three year olds pitted against each other for the first time, although they will go to the post as an entry, both being trained by Jim Fitzsimmons. One unbeatable slogan for the race would be "Bet Fitzsimmons' horse".

Having a great day at the plate when this picture was taken, was Harry Danning, catcher for New York Giants, who helped himself to a homer, double and two singles as the New Yorkers defeated St. Louis Cardinals. The camera caught him sliding, face down, into second base on his two-bagger. His facial contortions are framed by the legs of umpire Babe Pinelli, calling the play, while Stu Martin, Cardinal second baseman, takes the throw from Joe Medwick in the outfield.

English cup final players .. ..

Not finesse but all part of the rugged game, this picture shows a series of spills in front of the Portsmouth goal during the English Cup final between Portsmouth and Wolverhampton Wanderers, in which the former came out on top 4-1, to take the coveted trophy for the first time in its history. Walker, Portsmouth goalkeeper, is seen seated at the RIGHT after running out to save from Wescott, Wolves' centre forward, seen nearest the camera, as he is checked by one of the Portsmouth backs. Halfback Gardiner, of the Wolves is teetering at the LEFT.

TAKE THE "LEAD" FEELING OUT OF YOUR LEGS

Get More Oxygen In Your Blood and Get the Pep that Sends You Bounding Up the Stairs

People who smother to death die because oxygen has been completely cut off from them. Just as surely you are slowly smothering if your blood lacks red corpuscles. Red corpuscles are your oxygen-carriers. They carry the oxygen you breathe in to every part of your system. Without enough oxygen-carrying corpuscles, your kidneys, liver, stomach and bowels slow down. Your skin gets pale, flabby, often pimply. Your nerves may become jittery—you tire quickly—feel depressed.

What you need is Dr. Williams Pink Pills. These world-famous pills help make more and better red corpuscles and thus increase the oxygen-carrying power of your blood. Get Dr. Williams Pink Pills today at your druggist. See for yourself how quickly this time-proven blood-builder will help give you back your pep. Copr. 1938, G. T. Fulford Co., Ltd.

Hornet's Nest

By GERTRUDE ROBINSON

At the crossroads John Kay stepped down from the bus and, bag in hand, climbed the bars into the pasture. Smell or ripe strawberries, red cows wading in the brook, the bent cedar tree at the foot of the lane behind which lay his camp—there was even the hornets' nest, hanging like a misty little balloon from the cedar's one twisted, eastward arm.

It all made a shameful, sick feeling come up in his throat. He was a fool to have come. Then he saw that there was somebody in the hollowed-out seat in the gray bowlder across the brook—somebody with a ruddy head, smooth as luster ware in the sun.

Dropping his bag in the tall grass he crossed the brook on stepping stones. It was all the same, even Jane—

By the time he had reached her his speech was on the tip of his tongue: "I didn't dream of finding you here, Jane. Just ran down for the week end." Instead he stood before her, mouth foolishly open.

It was Jane who spoke, the same upward quirk at the left corner of her mouth: "Why, Kay, who'd dream of it! You tearing yourself from your office, and business humming again. And I'm using your camp." She spoke regretfully. "I took your word for it, about my being free to come here, but of course—"

The same dragging slur to her vowels, the same husky, maddeningly dear catch in her low voice. Kay dropped on the grass. "I'm only here for an hour or so, to get some books I want," he continued to invent, thanking his lucky stars he had left his bag out of sight. "I'll be catching the five o'clock bus back to town."

"We'll have tea before you go."

Kay [illegible] at the charming hospitality of her tone. Just so would she speak to old Doctor Thorp. "You're not going abroad?" He managed a smooth casualness.

Click of knitting needles above his head. "I decided not to. Things came up."

"A man? Not that I've any business asking. If it's that asinine donkey, Wayne—" he caught his breath in a hard thread.

"You haven't, and it's not." Jane slid from the rock with a cool swish of smooth linen, draped the red silk scarf she was knitting over her shoulders and went rustling through the tall grass. "But it is a man, and I've come down here to try to decide what to do about him."

The clock on the village church [illegible] struck four long notes. An hour and he'd be on the way back [illegible] that confounded bus. On the way across the stream to retrieve his bag he heard Jane scream. The next moment he had turned and was pursuing a slim, gray figure, flashing past the old cedar tree. In its wake was a gray, misting, snarling cloud.

Past the juniper thicket, past the cedar tree where a red scarf hung from the swinging hornets' nest; at last he had her in his arms and was making for the mud hole by the brook. The little gray demons swarmed for a moment about his face, and then a merciful whiff of wind swept them down the meadow.

He put Jane down on the grass. There were no stings on her face or her hands, but her lips were puckered. Like a child, too proud to cry. "My—my feet!" she gasped.

John Kay snatched off the red sandals. On the bare ankles were angrily swelling lumps. One moment he was scooping up handfuls of brown sticky clay mud and plastering it over the slim feet. The next he was peeling off his shirt, rending it in silken strips and binding the long rags over the mud plasters. Jane sat on the ground two feet, like enlarged and badly sculptured appendages, thrust stiffly in front of her.

"They've stopped hurting," she said at last. "Maybe I can walk to the camp."

For answer John Kay lifted her and went tramping into the lane that led through a honeysuckle hedge to the lodge. On the threshold of the living room he hesitated. The anger that had been seething in him ever since he saw Jane on the bowlder—their bolder where he first made love to her—boiled over. There was the fireplace, laid for lighting, the big wicker chairs, the table—set for two.

Unceremoniously he dropped Jane on the window box. "So you're having him here? That's too much, Jane." Jane had slumped, eyes closed. He felt for her pulse. It beat like a husky little engine under his hand.

"You're putting it on, Jane. What in heaven's name do you mean? If I should miss that bus—"

Five clear notes from the town clock. A shrieking of brakes down the hill, a flash of brown and red from the state highway.

Jane was sitting up. "You have. I was put to it, though, to make you do it, you pig-headed donkey." She began unrolling the mud bandages.

Kay's eyes swept from the table set for two back to Jane's mouth with the upward quirk. The shameful, sick feeling slid out of his throat. He recalled a red scarf over the hornets' nest, a cloud of shrill, singing mites.

He caught Jane in one arm and with the other pulled the telephone toward him. "You knew I was coming, and you came first."

Jane's voice was muffled against his coat. "Do call Tompkins and tell him to stop those divorce papers," she said.

"An ideal life and world cannot, after all, be created on this earth. One can only fight for an ideal."—Eduard Benes.

WAR REFERENDUM PROPOSAL IN U. S.

'Absurd Fears' Says La Follette Raised Against it

Washington, May 10—(AP) — Senator Robert LaFollette (Prog-Wisconsin) challenged the United States Government's opposition to a war referendum proposal today, declaring "absurd fears" has been raised against it.

"There is nothing in the pending proposal which will cripple any President in his conduct of our foreign policy so long as that policy is not to be supplemented in the end by involving this nation in an offensive war overseas," LaFollette said in a statement prepared for a Senate committee hearing.

The proposal would require a vote of the people before Congress could declare war, except in the case of invasion or threatened invasion of the Western Hemisphere or when the United States was called on to defend its possessions.

"I do not believe that there is validity in the proposition that there are effective 'measures short of war,'" LaFollette said, "but if there are those who take an opposite view, this proposal for a referendum on foreign war will strengthen and buttress that position."

Good Sign When Husband Or Wives Sing

New York, May 10—(CP)—Take it from Dr. Miles Dresskell of the music department of Teachers College, Columbia University, spontaneous bursts of song around the house from husbands—or wives for that matter—are a bit of all right.

"Even if you don't have a good voice, singing will provide great individual satisfaction for you", Dr. Dresskell said today. "It gives a great emotional outlet, which in turn leads to increased kindness toward a wife or husband and other members of the family."

It must be spontaneous, he warned. If you force yourself to sing, or force someone else to try it, singing loses its charm.

Jury Finds Man 'Of Unsound Mind'

Cornwall, Ont., May 10—(CP)—James Zeron, 65-year-old Morrisburg resident charged with murder in connection with the death of Edward Wilson May 2 was remanded a week yesterday by Justice of the Peace Wilfrid Bertrand. The remand was made in hospital where Zeron is a mental case under police guard.

At the inquest last night in Morrisburg a coroner's jury found the 35-year-old Wilson died from injuries inflicted by a blunt instrument in the hands of Zeron, "of unsound mind at the time of the fatality."

Rotting Box Thought To Have Contained Body of an Infant

Discovery of a small rotting wooden, box, found to contain a thin layer of brownish colored dust is causing speculation as to its origin among the residents of Centre, Prince Edward County.

Found buried beneath the ground a few feet from the western end of their home by A. H. Pulver and his son, the box was opened and found to be lined with brown or white paper, yellowed with age.

"The box was not very deep in the ground, when I struck it with a pickaxe", Mr. Pulver's son stated. "We opened it and discovered it to be empty with the exception of the brown dust."

"The only conclusion we could come to was that years ago someone had buried the body of a baby, as it seems very unusual that anyone would bury an empty box".

Old timers of the district voice the opinion that this theory is quite logical as it would be quite possible for the bones of a baby to return to dust. While a check-up of the family records revealed no trace of a death of this nature, it may have occurred during the early part of the last century when the law did not require the registration of all such deaths.

Mrs. W. J. Fitchitt sang "You're the Only Star". Mrs. Milton Shaw gave a solo "I Love You Truly". All sang "Auld Lang Syne". Mrs. Donnan assisted by Mrs. J. Wallace, Mrs. T. West Huntingdon,
May 6, 1939

Dear Carrie—

We, your friends have assembled here this afternoon to rejoice with you on this happy occasion of your approaching marriage.

We have known you for many years and have all grown to love you. We are all well acquainted with your ability and will miss you very much, but we are looking forward to seeing you often as you visit your old home.

One's wedding day is one of the great days in life. We usually wish our friends sunshine on that day. For it is said 'Happy is the bride that the sun shines on'. But they say after all that we have to make our own sunshine and we all thought a nice little shower would help you to remember this happy occasion, so that is why we are here. As you wash each plate and dry each cup may you sometimes think of your girlhood friends who will always cherish their friendship with you and who wish you every happiness and good cheer.

Signed on behalf of your friends—
Mrs. Sam Donnan, Bessie Fleming.

MAY CHANGE BILL

As moved for second reading the bill provides that scope of the act may be extended to Eastern Canada by the governor in council on recommendation of the Wheat Board. "Of course the intention is that the bill shall apply to the Eastern Provinces," the Minister said, and an amendment will be moved to clarify the situation.

Fixed by Statute

The bill fixes by statute a minimum price of 70 cents a bushel for wheat delivered to the Board, based on No. 1 Northern at Fort William. Heretofore the act applied only to the four western provinces.

The Wheat Board Bill came up for second reading after third reading was given without dissent to the government acreage bonus bill.

Mr. Weir last night followed a C.C.F. attack on the wheat board bill because of the "inadequacy" of the proposed price and the limitation of that price to 5,000 bushels from any one producer.

T. C. Douglas (C.C.F. Weyburn) claimed that limitation constituted discrimination against the most efficient group of wheat growers. In Saskatchewan alone there were 45,000 farmers with farms between 400 and 450 acres and 44,000 farmers with more than 450 acres. Those who produced more than 5,000 bushels would be compelled to sell some of their wheat in the open market, in competition with the wheat board.

Benefit Nullified

He contended the benefits of the 10-cent increase in the price from the 60 cents originally announced had been nullified by reducing the acreage bonus, reducing the yield on which that bonus would be granted and by limiting the amount of wheat a farmer could deliver to the wheat board.

The government was trying to get through the 70-cent wheat board bill by associating it with the acreage bonus bill, which was generally accepted, he claimed, but the government would not escape the condemnation of western farmers that way. The one thing he could commend in the wheat board act was the intention to extend the scope of the board to Eastern Canada.

Two Different Phases

The contention was advanced by several opposition speakers that the two bills dealt with entirely different phases of the wheat problem. The acreage bonus bill concerned the relief angle and was a basis for a crop insurance scheme. It dealt with people with no crop or little crop while the wheat board act dealt with people who had a crop and wanted to market it at a reasonable price, as Mr. Douglas said.

C. E. Ferland (Lib.-Joliette-l'Assomption-Montcalm) said there was $80,000,000 for relief of western farmers and only $11,000,000 for Quebec farmers.

He commended the government for its policy of aiding agriculture, but wished to point out that eastern farmers had their problems as well as those in Western Canada. As a member of the House he had received many suggestions from constituents that many problems might be solved by selling western wheat in Eastern Canada at the prices prevailing in the West.

Causes Unrest is Claim

E. E. Perley (Con.-Qu'Appelle) declared the bill had caused more unrest and dissatisfaction in Western Canada than any bill in many years. He did not see how the government could take any credit for raising the price from 60 to 70 cents in view of the protests and delegations which followed the 60 cent announcement.

This bill was a "straight betrayal" of Western Canada and its confidence in this government.

"I think that is discrimination," said Mr. Perley referring to the limitation of 5,000 bushels placed on the amount of wheat one farmer may deliver to the wheat board for the initial price of 70-cents a bushel basis No. 1 northern Fort William.

Even at this late date he thought the government should reconsider matters and either withdraw the bill or amend it—that a fair price of around 90 cents a bushel could be set for the 1939 crop.

Urged No Division

T. L. Church, (Cons.-Toronto-Broadview), urged that there should be no east and west on the wheat question. The wheat growers had been put on the prairies by the country as a whole. Their prosperity was fundamental to the prosperity of the railways, the banks and business generally.

When much of that wheat prosperity depended on the United Kingdom and the British people now had to "sleep on their haversacks" he could not understand why Canada's surplus wheat had not been stored in great reservoirs in the United Kingdom as a part of the rearmament program.

Nor could he understand Canada not objecting more effectively to a barter of 100,000,000 bushels of United States wheat for British rubber and manufactures.

He urged that the wheat board should be enlarged and given increased powers.

Lengthen Daily Sittings

The House debated for an hour a government motion to lengthen the daily sittings in order to hasten completion of the sessional business.

Accordingly, the House of Commons begins morning sittings at 11 a.m. E.D.T. today, in addition to its regular afternoon and evening sessions. It will also sit all day Saturday, but not in the evening, and will continue Monday and Tuesday. On Tuesday it likely will adjourn to Friday, May 19 when the King will give royal assent in person to legislation completed. The House will then adjourn again until Monday, May 22, when sittings will continue until the legislation pending is dealt with.

If the business is finished by next Tuesday the King will prorogue parliament the following Friday but this is only a remote possibility and there is much work still to be done.

Twenty-Four Brought to Westport by Three Fishermen Who Picked Up Dories Near Scene

ROWED 150 MILES

First Indication of Collision Crews Got When Impact Tumbled Sleepers Out of Bunks Upon Floor

Yarmouth, N.S., May 12 (CP)—All forty-eight men aboard the United States fishing schooners Isabelle Parker and Edith C. Rose, which foundered early Tuesday after colliding in a dense fog, were believed accounted for at noon today but one of the number was dead.

Thirty-three men picked up by coastal or fishing vessels already were in Yarmouth. Three others were safe at Jonesport, Me., and 11 others were reported to be on their way from Freeport here by bus.

The dead man, whose body was brought ashore at Freeport, about 30 air miles from Yarmouth, was believed to be Frank Nickerson, 62-year-old native of Argyle Sound, N.S. Body of Nickerson, a member of the Isabelle Parker's crew, was found at the foot of the schooner's forecastle a few minutes after the collision. He was believed to have died from a heart attack.

Captain Albert Hines of the Edith C. Rose was among the group which reached here this morning after a night spent aboard the Keith Cann.

Why the Weather!

By Major A. H. Thiessen
Science Service Meteorologist

Forest fires and weather! Weather has considerable to do with forest fires—both in conditioning the forest for ready fire starting and igniting. A prolonged spell, say two weeks, without rain is a good start, the other conditions being high winds, low relative humidity, clear weather and temperatures above normal. A combination of all these elements is excellent for drying out the duff, which is the half-decayed vegetable matter on the forest floor. Principal agents in starting forest fires are recreationists, incendiaries and lightning. Lightning in one state was responsible for six per cent. of the fires and one storm was responsible for 60 fires—probably the worst ignition record.

NEW LINER MAURETANIA TO GO 4 MILES IN 3 HOURS

London, May 12 (CP-Havas).—The new 34,000-ton Mauretania, built for the Cunard White Star Line, will take her shortest and slowest voyage on Sunday when she leaves the fitting out basin at Builder's ship yard and crosses the Mersey to the Gladstone graving dock.

The operation will be a delicate one as the new liner is without a rudder and the four mile voyage will take about three hours. A rudder weighing 50 tons is on the dock waiting to be placed in position.

5 WEST LIBERALS VOTED AGAINST GOV'T MEASURE

Price of 70 Cents a Bushel for Wheat Passed in Commons by Vote of 128-50

BITTERLY DEBATED

Ottawa, May 12—(CP)—The government's broad wheat program, discussed almost continuously for the last week in the House of Commons, today was complete except for routine third reading of the 70-cent a bushel wheat board bill.

The wheat board bill, most important and bitterly debated item of the lot, was given second reading yesterday by 128-50, with five western Liberals voting with the solid Conservative, C.C.F. and Social Credit groups against the government.

Because the bill had been threshed out thoroughly first in general discussion, debate on the statute's detail in committee of the whole house was comparatively brief.

The Liberal dissenters were among those who thought the initial wheat price for this year should be at least 80 cents or should be left for determination later in the year by the wheat board and the cabinet. They were Hon. W. R. Motherwell, Melville, former Minister of Agriculture, W. J. Ward, Dauphin, Dr. H. R. Fleming, Humboldt, J. A. MacMillan, Mackenzie, and Harry Leader, Portage la Prairie.

Only One Surprise

The only surprise among the bolters was Mr. MacMillan. The other four had announced their intention of opposing the bill but Mr. MacMillan took no part in the debate.

In striking change to the agricultural atmosphere of the past week, the house today switches abruptly

Council will be asked to act on the following recommendation pass-

Poles Honor Memory Of Pilsudski

Warsaw, May 12—(AP)—Poland, keeping her army partly mobilized to parry any blow against her sovereignty, observed with unusual solemnity today the fourth anniversary of the death of Joseph Pilsudski, leader of the nation restored by the Great War.

Memorial services were held in churches, all places of amusement were closed and at 8:45 p.m., the hour the Marshal died, a three-minute period of silent tribute was to be observed.

The nation, meanwhile, continued efforts to effect a better understanding with Russia. It was learned on good authority that diplomatic conferences here and in Moscow had gone into Polish-Soviet relations thoroughly. One official informant said that the Soviets "now have a tendency to understand" the Polish viewpoint.

New Evidence Given Psychiatrists That Insanity is Not Inheritable

Chicago, May 12—(AP)— New evidence that insanity is not inheritable was announced today before the American Psychiatric Association.

Until recently it was believed that the children of families which have a history of insanity are likely to acquire one of the various mental diseases, Dr. Horatio Pollock and Dr. Benjamin Malzberg of the New York State Department of Mental Health said.

However, an intensive study of 300 patients at state asylums and of their parents, brothers and sisters, and other relatives failed to show that the diseases followed any pattern of inheritance such as the patterns which hold true for physical characteristics.

FORESTS, HOMES, FARM BUILDINGS SWEPT BY FIRE

Woodlands of Three States Suffer Heavy Losses

SMOKING IS BARRED

Boston, May 12—(AP)— Forest fires in the tangled woodlands wrecked by September's hurricane menaced wide areas in three states today and officials throughout New England said the situation was grave.

Homes, farm buildings and valuable timberlands were destroyed as flames raged along scattered fronts in Maine, New Hampshire and Massachusetts. Most of the first were under control, but officials kept lookouts posted on high ground to flash warnings of possible new outbreaks.

In Maine, at least seven farm homes and cottages were destroyed and thousands of acres were blackened in the other two states. Hardwick in central Massachusetts, a town of about 300 population, was in serious danger for a time.

Restrictions were tightened throughout New England as officials pushed preventive measures. Smoking in almost all woodlands was barred.

Royal Flotilla Forced By Heavy Fog to Drift Idly for 24 Hours

By R. K. CARNEGIE

Aboard R.M.S. Empress of Australia, May 12 (CP)—The King observed the second anniversary of his coronation today by ordering an extra rum issue for all ratings on the cruisers Glasgow and Southampton, accompanying the Empress of Australia through fog to Canada.

After drifting in heavy fog all day yesterday, the Empress started away again this morning at 6:15 E.D.T., and proceeded cautiously during the day at about 10 knots. At times she was forced to come to a standstill.

But the coronation anniversary was not forgotten. Promptly at noon the Southampton and Glasgow appeared out of the mist, ranging on either side of the Empress, and fired the Royal salute of 21 guns.

Their Majesties stood on the after deck with their suite. When the salute was completed, the King had orders signalled to the cruisers to "splice the main brace", meaning a double issue of rum to all ratings aboard the cruisers.

The King and Queen received many congratulatory messages on the anniversary and despite the cold spent more than an hour on the promenade deck. The Queen had one of the deck rugs wrapped about her after the manner of a shawl to protect her from the penetrating cold.

Visibility improved during the afternoon but frequently the Empress had to slacken speed as the fog temporarily thickened.

All aboard the royal vessel were delighted on awakening to hear the ship's siren giving long, single blasts every two minutes. That indicated the liner was moving. Since early Thursday, the siren had sounded a double blast, constantly reminding the King and Queen and their suite that they were at a standstill 350 miles off Cape Race, Newfoundland.

Sun Pierces Fog

Mist still shrouded the Atlantic early today but the passengers did not mind it after viewing the dense fog for an entire day. Through the light fog—it appeared to be a shallow layer—a pale sun could be seen trying to pierce the clouds.

At one time this morning Captain A. R. Meikle, commander of the Empress, ordered full speed ahead but the speed later was reduced sharply when mist again closed in on the vessel which is due in Quebec Monday morning.

Throughout the voyage the Em-

TERRIBLE SIGHT

One Freighter Passes Less Than Mile Away but Could Not Hear Signals

Yarmouth, N. S., May 12—(CP)—The schooners Isabelle Parker and Edith C. Rose were only 20 yards away when the Parker's bow watch first saw the Rose before the collision that sank both, casting 47 men adrift.

Fred A. Bourque of Hubbards Point, N.S., and Lynn, Mass., told of sighting the Rose looming up out of the fog after he and eight others of the foundered ships had been brought here last night. "I'll never forget it," he said.

"I was the bow watch on the Parker," he declared. "It was a dense fog, and we were making only about 8 1-2 knots. When I first saw the Rose, she wasn't over 20 yards away.

"I shouted a warning to the man at the wheel, Billy Gillan (of Boston), but he had no chance to avoid the crash.

Avoid Crushing

"I managed to jump back and avoid being crushed. Our boat went almost right through the Rose.

"We had time to get some equipment ready," he said, "but we had no water or food, and we couldn't waste time looking for it as the Parker was sinking under our feet."

Unable to swim a stroke, William Ross paddled away from the sinking schooner Edith G. Rose in a tub until a shipmate capsized his makeshift lifeboat, the Gloucester seaman said. said.

Here is Ross' account of the wreck:

"I heard a crash, and before I got out of my bunk I was soaking wet. That's how fast the water was pouring in.

"I was only partly dressed, of course, though I had my pants on. But then some of us wore only quilts when they went overboard.

"I threw a dress tub overboard and go into that. So far, I was wet only to my waist, I think. Then my dorymate, Marczinck, who was in the water, came swimming over to me.

Rumania Moves to Strengthen Armaments and Develop Industries

Bucharest, May 12—(AP)— Rumania, apparently with Germany's acquiescence, moved today to strengthen her military machine and develop her industries with at least £15,000,000 ($70,200,000) of British capital.

A source close to the government said that Germany, which had a new trade agreement with Rumania, approved in advance trade negotiations with Great Britain which culminated in an initial loan of £5,000,000.

Smoke and Ammonia Fumes Cause Hamilton Man's Death

Hamilton, Ont., May 12—(CP)—Fire of undetermined origin and ammonia fumes from a leaking refrigerating system brought death early today to John W. Jamieson, middleaged salesman, and threatened several other tenants of the central court apartments (135 Main Street West). The fire swept through a portion of the west block and damage was estimated at $5,000.

The body of Jamieson, clad in pajamas, was found in his second-storey apartment by firemen after a woman said she had heard someone coughing in the suite. The dense smoke and fumes were believed responsible for Jamieson's death. The body was identified by Dr. George Husband, owner of the apartment building, and by a ring on the man's finger bearing Jamieson's initials.

Mrs. George Crain was rescued from her smoke-filled apartment by fireman John Cunliffe. More than a dozen others fled in night attire from the apartments and several neighboring families were forced to the street when smoke and fumes filled their homes.

Well-known as a salesman, Jamieson manufactured foot appliances. Police said no immediate relatives resided here. A brother Russell was believed to reside in Winnipeg and a sister Mabel in Quebec Province.

'Declaration is Not Directed Against Any Country' but to Assure Mutual Aid if Necessity Arises

By J. F. SANDERSON

London, May 12 (CP) — Another link was forged in Europe's peace chain today when Prime Minister Chamberlain announced in the House of Commons a mutual defence agreement with Turkey covering the Mediterranean.

A definite and long-range military agreement will be concluded between the two countries, Mr. Chamberlain declared.

In the meantime, in the event of of an act of aggression leading to war in the Mediterranean area, the two nations are prepared to co-operate effectively and lend each other all the aid and assistance in their power.

French-Turkish Pact Expected.

It was reported meanwhile that a similar agreement between France and Turkey will be announced shortly. It is understood the Franco-Turkish pact is being held up by negotiations between Paris and Ankara over French control of the Sanjak of Alexandretta, strategic seaport in Syria and formerly in Asiatic Turkey.

BLOOD STORAGE PLANTS PLACED IN 4 DISTRICTS

Supply to be Used for Transfusions in Event of Wartime Bombings

PLENTY OF DONORS

By GUY RHOADES
Canadian Press Staff Writer

London, May 12—(CP Cable) — Plans for establishment of four large blood storage plants in London for use in transfusions in the event of wartime bombings were disclosed last night in the quarterly published by the Red Cross.

The circular said blood stores would be established in Luton, Slough, Worcester Park and Maidstone, and blood would be immediately available for severely wounded air raid victims.

It was added the blood would be kept in underground refrigerator plants which if necessary would include provisions for well protected surgeries, laboratories and waiting rooms as well as homes for the staffs.

In the crisis of last September, the circular adds, steps were taken to establish a large blood supply depot within a convenient distance of London and hospitals were advised to store an adequate supply for their initial needs.

The new premises now are being excavated and will be completed with all possible speed, it was stated. The response of volunteers during last September indicated that the problem of finding sufficient donors of blood was not likely to arise, the circular concluded.

CANCELS DEBTS

Dr. K. G. Mahabir, of Halifax, announced that 342 patients who owed him a total of over $21,000 for service rendered could forget all about their indebtedness. The doctor has received a cash bequest of $250,000 from the estate of a wealthy Egyptian, Nadir Ormiz, whose life his medical treatment saved in Cairo during the world war.

OSCAR ST. PIERRE, HILLIER TOWNSHIP HELD FOR ROBBERY

Arrested Today for Bank Robbery at Wellington on March 23, 1935

IN PICTON JAIL

$750 of $1190 Taken, Recovered in Building Across Street Day After Robbery

Oscar St. Pierre, 60-year-old Hillier resident, was today arrested at his home charged with the breaking and entering of the Wellington branch of the Bank of Nova Scotia on March 23rd, 1935, and stealing therefrom $1190.00 in silver coin. St. Pierre was today lodged in the Prince Edward County jail and further charges are pending, Sergeant Harry Thompson, of the Ontario Provincial Police stated to the Ontario Intelligencer this afternoon.

The accused man was arrested upon the instructions of Crown Attorney Gordon Walmsley, of Picton, after four years of continued investigations into the mysterious robbery.

At the time of the bank robbery at Wellington in 1935 St. Pierre was one of the persons engaged in an extensive police search for the culprits who robbed the Bank of Nova Scotia.

Four years ago, it is recalled, intruders removing bricks from a rear wall of the office, apparently crawled through the aperture to the vault, removing a large tin box containing the silver. Chisel-marks on safety deposit boxes indicated efforts to force the locks. These however were unsuccessful. The robbers carefully removed all traces of dust from the floor of the vault and meticulously replaced the bricks in their original position.

LOCAL BOY WIRELESS OPERATOR ON PLANES ESCORTING ROYAL SHIP

When the squadron of powerful seaplanes fly out over the Atlantic ocean from their base at Dartmouth, Nova Scotia, within the next few days to escort the "Empress of Australia" carrying Their Majesties, the King and Queen on their visit to Canada, seated at the radio controls of one of the planes in two-way communication with the liner, will be Richard "Dick." Henley, son of Mr. and Mrs. G. G. Henley, 200 Ann Street.

The young wireless operator joined the Royal Canadian Air Force at the Trenton base where he qualified in radio telegraphy. He was transferred last autumn to the Dartmouth base where he was selected as one of the radio-operators to act on the planes that will escort the liner from a few hundred miles out in the Atlantic to Canadian shores.

BETTER DEMAND FOR CANNED PRODUCE WILL HELP FARMERS

Unexpected movement of warehouse stocks of canning factories of the district has resulted in efforts to contract for increased acreage of produce, it was reported from an authoritative canning source last night.

With the opening of navigation, warehouses of factories have been working overtime to fill orders. The sudden demand for canned produce has sent representatives of canning concerns to the country where a slight rise over initial contract prices is reported to have been offered.

Canning concerns offered farmers thirty-two and a half cents for No. 1 tomatoes and twenty-two and a half cents per bushel for No. 2 quality.

Independent canners, it is stated since the sudden exodus of canned goods from warehouses has taken place, are offering a figure slightly increased over these quotations.

NO FROST DAMAGE

Expected heavy ground frosts forecast for last night resulted in flower lovers covering the first blooms in their gardens with heavy wrappings of paper and blankets, but this morning little damage from the cold was reported by florists.

FEDERAL GRADER TO EXPLAIN CHEESE BONUS

Continuing the series of meetings of cheesemakers of the central district being held for the purpose of discussing the new cheese bonus and regulations, J. L. Irwin, local federal grader will this evening in the Y.M.C.A. address a gathering of Stirling cheesemakers under the supervision of Geo. Pollard, instructor. Full explanation of the new Cheese and Cheese Factories Act will also be explained.

BIBLE WIDELY READ SAYS ANNUAL REPORT OF BIBLE SOCIETY

Nearly one hundred and thirty-five thousand copies of the Bible, Gospels and Testaments, in fifty different languages were sent out to all parts of the world last year, the annual report of the Upper Canada Bible Society states. In addition to this number a large amount was despatched to the West Indies and isolated parts of Canada in response to a request of Lady Tweedsmuir.

The British and Foreign Bible Society has distributed the Holy Scripture in over 700 different languages —40 in raised type for the blind, the report adds.

The Belleville Branch of the Society will hear an address by the Rev. A. E. Allnut, B.D., in Bridge Street United Church on Sunday night following the regular evening service.

ROBIN GIVEN HELP

A plump robin trailing a long piece of string evidently to some nest building location nearby, was halted in its flight on Front Street by the end of the string snagging on a projecting nub of a street lamp.

The bird hovered around the light, tugging heavily on the string. Two pedestrians stopped, and surveyed the bird's difficulties. They were joined by three other residents, all of whom debated the manner of helping the tugging robin.

More pedestrians gathered and discussion over the matter threatened to become involved. "Shin up the pole and loosen it", suggested one bystander to a more youthful one.

The trouble was solved by the appearance of a shop owner with a short length of fishing rod, who loosened the string and was rewarded with a flick of the tail of the bird which flew off, still trailing the nest building material.

ROLLER SKATERS RISK INJURY WHILE SKATING ALONG THE HIGHWAYS

One of the latest hazards to night driving on roads of the immediate district at present as reported and complained of by local automobile drivers is the appearance after dark on highways of scores of youthful roller skaters, who skate their erratic way to and fro almost between cars. Many are almost invisible in dark clothing, and drivers are upon them before sighting them. Several narrow escapes have been reported on the bay bridge road lately.

HIGH PRICE PAID FOR PLACE OF VANTAGE

Some indication of the interest that is being shown regarding the visit to Kingston of the King and Queen on May 21st is given in the statement by Reg. Moncrieff, general chairman of the committee in charge of the Belleville school children's excursion, that the sum of $500 had been paid a Kingston property owner for the privilege of using his store as a vantage site along the Royal route for the taking of pictures. The reservation has been made by a motion picture company, it was stated.

RESERVATIONS MADE FOR COUNCILMEN

In a communication received by city council from Mayor H. A. Stewart and Kingston city council advice is contained that arrangements have been made at Kingston for the accommodation of the Belleville Mayor and members of council in front of the Kingston city hall during the visit of the King and Queen there on May 21st. No decision has been reached today by Mayor or councillors whether to accept this invitation.

COAL STRIKE MAY BENEFIT N. S. MINES

As yet, stated the manager of one large Belleville fuel firm this morning, the soft coal strike in the United States has not had too great a reaction on local stores or supplies, and the pinch has not been felt to any marked extent yet. But the strike across the border, is all to the good of Canada, particularly the east, if residents only knew it, it was added.

"There won't be any famine, because our Nova Scotia mines will or should be able to take care of all the domestic demand."

RIVER AND BAY LEVELS DROP IN PAST WEEK

Bay levels dropped another two or three inches this week, but this drop has not been as noticeable as that observed in the Moira River during the past week, where first stones are beginning to show through the shallows in the lower section. It is estimated that within the past week a drop of nearly a foot has taken place in the river.

WATER FROM JACOB'S WELL FOR BAPTISMS

Water from Jacob's Well in the Holy Land will be used in the Sacrament of Baptism service which Rev. Dr. J. Semple will conduct at Bridge Street United Church on Sunday morning.

POLICE COURT

Victor Whitely, of this city, was sentenced to serve a determinate term of 18 months in the Ontario Reformatory, with a further indeterminate term of six months, when he appeared before His Worship, Magistrate E. J. Butler, K.C., for sentence in today's local police court. Whitely had previously pleaded guilty to the breaking and entering of the Holland Warehouse, Pinnacle St., and stealing therefrom a quantity of tea.

Joseph Hurst, also of this city and alleged accomplice of Whitely's, entered a plea of not guilty to the breaking and entering and theft charges, but pleaded guilty to a charge of receiving stolen goods, it being established in court that Hurst had paid $6.00 for the tea after it had been stolen by Whitely and two teen-aged lads. The latter two received suspended sentences in a previous court.

"As we have pleaded guilty to a charge of receiving stolen goods, my client can't be charged with the theft of the same goods," pleaded Charles A. Payne, K.C., as he appeared on behalf of Hurst. Evidence was adduced by Crown Attorney B. C. Donnan, K.C., however, to the effect that Hurst had offered to purchase the tea before the actual robbery took place. "Therefore he was a party to the stealing, and he acted as lookout, I'm told," pointed out Mr. Donnan after Whitely had testified that he and the teen-aged boys stole the tea, while Hurst stood outside on Pinnacle Street.

"Hurst was the principal party concerned in this robbery," suggested Mr. Donnan, while Mr. Payne continued to hold that two charges could not be preferred against his client. His Worship admitted the evidence on the theft charge, however, and reserved judgment until Monday.

Three transients appeared on charges of intoxication and were given 14 days after pleas of guilty were received in each case.

Police Blotter

Motorcycle Patrolman Sam Ervine today found a 1928 model Nash coupe lying in the ditch along highway No. 2 about two miles west of Belleville. The vehicle had been wrecked in an accident, but there were no persons found in the vicinity of the wrecked car upon the arrival of the officer. No reports of an accident were received, while a long length of hose was found in the vehicle. The car was ordered towed to a local garage awaiting identification of ownership.

Belleville police were today informed of the escape from the Bowmanville Boys' Training School of Charles Bulpit, a local teen aged lad who was committed to that institution from Belleville recently.

Reginald Lickfold, R.R. 6, Belleville, reported the theft of two hub caps from his automobile last night. The vehicle was parked on Front street and during the owner's absence the hub caps were removed.

Several motorists found police stickers affixed the windshields of their automobiles in violation of this city's one hour parking bylaw in the downtown areas. The minimum fine is assessed in each case without reservation, Chief Kidd stated today.

Mayor Goes Poetic On Parking Puzzle

Mayor Bone this week after a complete survey of parking conditions in the business section of the city, and commenting upon the recommendation passed at last evening's committee meeting of city council with the respect to the return of fifteen minute parking on Front Street, turned rhymester.

"Twinkle, twinkle, little store,
"How I have tried to find your store;
"Drive around from dawn to dark,
"Cannot find a place to park."

It's just a little thing I thought up to explain the kind of car parking we have in Belleville at present," modestly claimed the Mayor. "It is literally true that as at present one can drive from dawn to dark here without finding a place to park. It gets worse all the time.

"Many of the merchants themselves can be blamed for the condition our parking is in now. Lots of them come down street with their cars in the morning, and would leave them there all day if they were not disturbed. We believe, and I believe the whole council is unanimous on the matter, that it is about time to try another shorter time system of parking."

GIRL'S DEATH IS ACCIDENTAL JURY'S VERDICT

Inquest Inquiring Into Death of Beverley Killeen Ross is Concluded

ONE EYE-WITNESS

A verdict of accidental death was rendered by a coroner's jury at the adjourned inquest, held before Chief Coroner Dr. J. J. Robertson at the Police Court rooms last evening, looking into the death of eight-year-old Beverley Killeen Ross, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Ross of this city, who sustained fatal injuries when struck with an oil truck one week ago yesterday on Station St.

John Fleming, driver of the truck, was the principal witness called by Crown Attorney B. C. Donnan, K.C. "The only thing I saw was a flash in front of the truck, it gave me the impression of a child's blue coat. I immediately applied the brakes and stopped," stated Fleming, who had only started to work as the driver of the oil truck on May 1st. He said he had had 14 years of driving experience, however.

"Did you hear anything?" asked Mr. Donnan.

"I heard glass break, but felt no bump or jar whatsoever," replied Fleming, to which Mr. Donnan commented—"apparently the wheels did not pass over the child as the body was not crushed." The truck and load weighed three tons, it was established. Fleming stated he did not see any other children running across the street at the time.

Saw Child Run

Mrs. Bertelle Anderson, Great St. James St., stated she was walking westerly on Foundry St. and had seen the little girl. "I saw her run from the Modern Cleaners' corner and start across the street, but I did not see the truck strike her. I heard the crash of glass and looked around in time to see the truck stop and the driver get out.

Do you think the driver could have avoided the accident?" asked Mr. Donnan.

"No, I do not. She must have run right in front of the truck," was the answer.

"Did you see any other children at that point?" asked Mr. Donnan.

"Not that I recall, no," was the answer.

Sergeant Arthur Booth stated he and Constable Ellis had tested the service brakes of the truck and found them to be in perfect working order. "The truck was stopped at a point 24 feet 3 inches west of the position of where the body lay," stated Sergeant Booth as he added that during the subsequent test Fleming's truck had stopped in a distance of 17 feet when the brakes were applied at 20 miles per hour. The officer also introduced a pair of glasses which were identified as having been worn by the deceased. "Her eye sight was bad, I understand," stated Mr. Donnan as he examined the glasses.

"A child ran straight in front of my truck," is what the driver told me when I arrived at the scene of the accident, stated P. C. Ellis as he added that Fleming seemed perfectly normal at the time.

Truck Driven Moderately

Miss Margaret Moore, her sister Jean Moore, Pat Longhurst and J. Bennett, all of whom saw the truck proceeding southerly on Station St. agreed it was being driven at a moderate rate of speed prior to the accident, but none had actually seen the vehicle strike the child. Dr. Walters told of the injuries sustained and the cause of death, a fractured skull.

Fleming was represented in the proceedings by E. O. Butler and was given the protection of the court. A. B. Collins, K.C. was present in the interests of the Ross family.

The coroners jury impanelled by Sergeant A. Harman consisted of Messrs L. Yeomans, H. Greenleaf, Ed George, H. Green, M. P. Duff, W. K. Kerr and W. Luscombe, while their verdict read as follows: "That Beverley Killeen Ross came to her death in the Belleville General Hospital on May 4th last as the result of having previously been struck by a truck, driven by John Fleming on Station St., and the death was accidental.

Toronto, May 12—(CP)— The story of the royal visit will be written for Canadian daily newspapers by more than 50 staff reporters of The Canadian Press who have been assigned to cover various stages of the tour across the country and in the United States.

Coverage for the 90 Canadian Press member newspapers will be complete from the time the King and Queen disembark from R.M.S. Empress of Australia at Quebec May 15 until they board the Empress of Britain for the return voyage at Halifax June 15.

R. K. Carnegie, Superintendent of the Parliamentary Bureau at Ottawa, is crossing the Atlantic with Their Majesties. He was nominated by the Canadian government to represent all Canadian newspapers on the voyage. Mr. Carnegie will be in charge of C.P. coverage from the pilot train which precedes the royal train on the tour.

News Supplemented

Also on the pilot train will be A. E. Pulford and Miss Muriel Adams of the Ottawa staff. Their coverage will be supplemented by that of Frank H. King, Associated Press staff writer. During the four-day United States visit Pulford's place on the pilot train will be taken by Sam Robertson, New York superintendent.

Virtually every scheduled stop in the nine provinces will be staffed by additional C. P. reporters, assigned from Bureaux in Halifax, Montreal, Toronto, Winnipeg, Edmonton and Vancouver. The visit to Toronto of the Dionne quintuplets May 22 when they will be presented to Their Majesties will be covered by William H. Dumsday of the Toronto staff, first reporter to see the quints on the day of their birth.

Coverage from all parts of the country will be supplemented by local correspondents stationed at the 51 stopping places. In addition the output of the hundreds of reporters assigned member newspapers of The Canadian Press will be available to the national newsgathering organization for distribution as required.

Geo. A. Kingston Composes Hymn In Honor of the Royal Visit

West Huntingdon—Citizens here are always grateful to those, who having spent their early days here, and are now living in other parts, are still thinking of their old communities.

Mr. Geo. A. Kingston of Chestnut Park, Toronto, is an old West Huntingdon boy, and is still very much interested in all the happenings of this burgh. Mr. Kingston has become a poet of note and has composed many hymns, the most recent one being "To Their Majesties." This hymn is to be sung in the United Church on Sunday morning. The hymn follows:—

"TO THEIR MAJESTIES"

God bless our Sovereign Lord and Queen,
As they for our fair land set sail,
Protect them while upon the deep,
And guard them over road and rail;
While they, our far-flung borders, see,
Lord, from all danger, keep them free.

As they from coast to coast proceed
On this glad visit of good-will,
Protect Thou them on every hand
Against whate'er might cause them ill;
May all, a loving tribute pay
The Royal travellers on their way.

When, quite too soon the journey ends,
And they embark to sail for home,
As their great ship recedes from view,
Across the wild Atlantic foam,
Our voices o'er the sea will ring—
God bless the Queen, God save the King.

Suggested Tune—St. Matthias—No. 213.

"I am desired to inform you that His Excellency is commanded to convey to you, the thanks of the King and Queen for the copy of your poem entitled "To Their Majesties", which their Majesties have been pleased to accept.

Miner Tags 20,000th Canada Goose, Tagged His First Bird 30 Years Ago

Uses Tags to Bear Message of Scripture All Over Continent of North America — Scientific Value of Tagging is Very Great

Jack Miner owner of the Jack Miner Bird Sanctuary at Kingsville, Ontario is the pioneer bird bander to get a complete record of where a bird was tagged and when and where it was shot. He tagged his first bird which was a duck in August 1909 which was reported shot in Anderson, South Carolina in January 1910. This constitutes the first complete bird banding record.

Invents Nets

In 1915 he invented a net to catch Canada Geese and placed his first band on a goose leg in 1915. Since then he has built his net over twenty or more times to perfect it with the result that this spring over a period of nearly twenty-five years, he has caught banded and liberated 20,000 of these largest waterfowl game birds.

Scientific and Educational

This research work in the realm of Nature cannot be valued in dollars and cents because from the educational standpoint to know the Migration routes of these birds as to where they are each season of the year. Where they nest and where they spend the winter is extremely educational and all records are given to the Department of Natural Resources, Ottawa, Ontario for safe keeping.

Verse of Scripture on Band

Jack Miner is by no means a religious fanatic, but believes in the simple teachings of Jesus Christ. To pass the promises on that are found in the Bible Jack Miner on one side of the band stamps deeply a select verse of scripture such as "No good thing will He withhold from them that walk uprightly." In this way whether it be an Eskimo or Indian in the far North or a hunter in the Southern States if they shoot a goose with a Jack Miner tag on they get a verse of scripture. The natives of the far north are superstitious and believe they are messages sent direct by God and go to the missionaries to see what God said that time." The priest or preacher in turn takes the said verse of Scripture as his text on the following Sunday when all turn out to see "What God said that time." In the south the sportsmen call them Jack Miner's missionary Geese.

With Jack Miner having liberated his 20,000th tagged Canada Goose it is a record for all conservationists to aim at saying nothing about the thousands of Ducks, Robins, and Mourning Doves he has banded since 1909.

"There is in America a general air of nervousness, cheapness and corruption."—Beniamino Gigli.

Gaspesians Will View Royal Flotilla First

Ottawa, May 12 —(CP)— First watchers to witness from the shores of Canada the approach of the R.M.S. Empress of Australia bringing the King and Queen for their visit to the Dominion will probably be those who live along the headlands of the Gaspe Peninsula at the mouth of the St. Lawrence River.

And even the Gaspesians, as well as those further up the river toward Quebec, will probably be cheated of more than a glimpse of the liner's lights and will not see that much if there is thick weather. To arrive at Quebec early in the morning, as scheduled, the liner will probably enter the river late the day before and take on the pilot at Father Point in the evening.

Technically the Royal flotilla will not enter Canadian territory until it reaches a point within three miles of the shore. This, normally, will not be until it is well up the river toward Quebec.

If the weather is clear when the Empress enters Cabot Strait during the passage through the Gulf of St. Lawrence, watchers on the northern extremity of Cape Breton, Cape North, or at the southern tip of Newfoundland, Cape Ray, may get a glimpse of the liner and her escort.

ROYAL CHILDREN'S ENTERTAINMENT

Stories of the entertainment offered Their Royal Highnesses, the Princess Elizabeth and Princess Margaret Rose, during the absence of their parents the King and Queen on their Canadian tour are fascinating for their revelation of the ways of children, and the kindly thoughtfulness of their grandmother, Queen Mary. The day of the sailing of the King and Queen was a momentous day for the Princesses for then they stood on a liner for the first time and looked over the ship their parents were to travel by, and later to absorb their minds from the departure the royal grandmother took the Princesses on a royal tour of London. Tuesday they attended the London zoo and had their first ride on an elephant.

These experiences and journeys are in addition to their regular studies and serve in some way to keep their minds engaged. They are to have their daily talks with their royal parents. And no greater care and attention could be given than is being given them in this six weeks' absence of the Sovereigns abroad.

From the standpoint of Their Majesties, the separation is softened by constant contact with London and the Palace by radio by which they speak to their daughters and by which they hear of all the incidents in the royal home and in the lives of the Princesses while they, the King and Queen, are away. The interesting accounts of their experiences the royal children will relate and the graphic stories their parents will be able to tell them will make parents and children very happy.

This relationship of the royal family, their love for one another, is one of the finest traits of the members of the British royal house. A household that is so human happy and kindly pleases the British people. The King and the Queen have the happy faculty of filling the dual role of happy parents who are beloved and also of Sovereigns. That their daughters are like other children, even with their high calling, is one of the glories of the House of Windsor.

The other day in mid-ocean a precious little parcel, the King's mail with letters to the Princesses contained in a greased sealed cask was thrown from the Empress of Australia into the waves from which it was retrieved by the crew of the warship, H.M.S. Repulse, to be carried to England for delivery at Buckingham Palace. That mail is awaited by the royal children who have been thinking much of the grand tour of their parents.

NO GROUND For MISUNDERSTANDING

Prime Minister Chamberlain spoke in no uncertain tones yesterday when at a meeting in London he declared:—

> "In many minds the danger spot in Europe today is Danzig where our assurances to Poland are clear and concise. Although we would be glad to see the differences between Poland and Germany amicably settled by discussion, although we think that they could and should be settled, if any attempt were made to change the situation by force in such a way as to threaten Polish independence, that would inevitably start a general conflagration in which this country would be involved.
> The 1935 naval treaty between the two powers could be "regarded as symbolic of a desire of our two peoples never to go to war with one another again".
> That Britain had no intention of encircling Germany or to interfere with the natural and legitimate expansion of her trade and that there was no plan of forming some combination against her with the idea of making war upon Germany.
> Britain did not wish unbridled competition with Germany either in armaments or economics, but "I want to make it equally plain we are not prepared to stand by and see the independence of one country after another destroyed."
> Leon Blum of France had asserted there was one main danger of war — that the rest of Europe might become convinced that Britain and France were insincere and could not be relied upon to carry out their pledges of military aid, Mr. Chamberlain said. "No more deadly mistake could be made than to attribute such insincerity to the British-French front. "It would be a frightful thing if Europe were to be plunged into war on account of a misunderstanding."

This leaves no doubt of the British attitude, no misunderstanding is possible.

It was once said that perhaps Britain did not make its attitude sufficiently clear to Germany before the last war that she would fight if Belgium's territory were invaded by Germany and that if Germany had known Britain would enter the war she would not have gone to war. Whether or not that is true, the fact is that Mr. Chamberlain has left no doubt that Britain is pledged to protect the independence of Poland and other nations. This was spoken in words which the Nazi Government of Germany can understand.

On the other hand there was a reference by the Prime Minister in the same speech yesterday to his belief that negotiations might solve the differences.

For some days there have been indications of a somewhat lessened tension in world affairs, though it has been felt by some that Germany may stage a show or demonstration against Danzig.

MOTHER'S DAY, SUNDAY, brings back pleasant and sad memories—memories of childhood with its joys and sorrows and the ever-watchful loving care bestowed on us cantankerous cubs by that mother who has passed on and left us to carry on, strengthened, purified and prepared for the world's jolts and jars by her loving care, charged with being good citizens and doing all the good we can to others less fortunate than ourselves, thus practising real Christianity as preached by the Man of Galilee. Memory of Mother is a sweet and satisfactory thing—Mother may have passed over the hill but she lives in the hearts of her children forevermore. When we show our appreciation of the Mother over there with flowers, and our love for the Mother still with us with flowers, candy, jewelry, a book, or any one of many things she will appreciate—it is well worth while, as is any gesture which generates sentiment of such a character.

LET'S SEE THE CHILDREN — with an estimated ten thousand school children in the Richardson Stadium at Kingston May 21, on the occasion of the visit of the King and Queen to the Limestone City, to see the children alone would be an attraction in itself—that many children together and singing patriotic songs—what a sight.

LADY SIDELIGHT FAN wishes us to state that she is glad one member of the Board of Education had the courage of his convictions and the intestinal fortitude to take the responsibility for transporting, and looking after Belleville school children, to Kingston to enable them to see the King and Queen. BELLEVILLE WILL BE REPRESENTED BY ONE THOUSAND SCHOOL CHILDREN and the Collegiate Cadets Band at Kingston May 21 when the King and Queen pass by. What a holiday for the children—also the grownups who get in on it.

THE CROWD WHO LINED BELLEVILLE STREETS SEVERAL HOURS Tuesday upon hearing a rumor that the automobiles made for the use of the King and Queen during their Canadian visit would pass through illustrated the great interest being taken in the Royal visit. The rumor was correct but the time was wrong.

CORNWALL AND BROCKVILLE ARE DISAPPOINTED. After making great preparations and having rehearsals for the Royal visit both cities have been informed that there will be no stop of the Royal train in either place. Ottawa is being bombarded now by the Mayors of both cities and local political luminaries to get the decision changed. As for Belleville, not expecting anything much, we can't be disappointed—much.

x x x

WORD HAS BEEN RECEIVED BY MAYOR JAMIESON BONE that the Royal train may stop in Belleville two minutes. Well, two minutes are better than no minutes and when Their Majesties hear the loyal cheers of Bellevillians they will surely make at least one minute appearance—we hope.

"If that's what you're going in all I can suggest is a trip around the block!"

Archdeacon of Kingston, the Rector of the parish took the chair. The architect, Mr. Joseph Powers of Kingston, was present and submitted his plans for completing the edifice, and they were examined and approved. Mr. J. J. Watson moved "that the church be completed externally and internally this season." Mr. S. M. Outwater seconded this resolution and it was unanimously agreed to. The question of accepting tenders for the work was left to the discretion of the architect. The chairman reported that so far he has received orders for thirty one memorial tablets to be placed upon the walls in the church in memory of prominent U. E. Loyalists and that more orders will be received shortly. He stated also that stained glass memorial windows have been promised by Dr. Ruttan of Napanee; Mrs. Bogart, wife of the Rev. D. F. Bogart, Belleville, and the Rev. D. Deacon, M.A., Stratford, in memory of his uncle, the first Rector of Adolphustown. The children's Church Missionary Guild of St. Albions Church, Ottawa, have generously contributed the sum of $40.00 for the altar and lately the children of the parish collected the sum of $60.00 for a marble font. The building committee in prosecuting their labor of love realize their responsibility, and trust that subscribers will back them up by paying their subscriptions when the work goes on and also that liberal friends will come forward to help them through with their undertaking.

A Matter of Proper Titles

Life is full of unexpected encounters. Somewhere, some day, somehow, we all meet people of unusual rank and I know how the thrill of meeting, say, a royal princess for the first time can be spoiled by the uncertainty of the correct mode of address. So complicated is the system of address that even the most social of us can be stumped by a sudden encounter with an out-of-the-way title.

A knowledge of the right expression and the right way to use it is the birthright of every accomplished woman.

While we are on the subject, remember that in making introductions to royalty the word "present" is used instead of "introduce". Thus "May I present Mrs. J . . . . to you, sir?"—or, in the case of the Queen or a royal lady, "ma'am." Royalty then shakes hands and always must be allowed to begin the conversation. The reply to a written invitation from the King or Queen or Queen Mary always entails the use of the word "command" and should be made in the third person. Incidentally, if the command cannot be observed, the reason should be stated briefly; and it is not considered that a previous engagement justified non-attendance.

The correct opening for a letter to the King is "Sir," and to the Queen "Madam." With this, however, on the line above goes the full title of the person addressed, as "His Majesty the King, Sir . . ." Custom ordains that envelopes to the King and Queen and Queen Mary should be addressed to "His Majesty the King (Queen or Queen Mary)," but that envelopes to other members of the royal family should bear the initial word "To . . ." Thus one writes "To His Royal Highness the Duke of Kent." This form of address is also correct for some members of the peerage—"To His Grace the Duke of A . . ."There is an unwritten law that when writing to members of the royal family the note paper should only be folded once. Of course, you use your best note paper, untinted and unscented.

Dignitaries of the church are rather hard to introduce correctly, for an archbishop is introduced as the Archbishop of A . . . but he is addressed both in conversation and correspondence as "Your Grace." His envelope should bear the missive "To His Grace the Archbishop of A . . ." Bishops are, of course, introduced as the Bishop of A . . . ., and referred to as "My Lord," while the envelope bears "The Right Rev. the Bishop of A . . ."

It is easy to be baffled by the identity of the sender should you receive a letter from the bishop. For bishops, in a manner similar to peers sign themselves traditionally with the name of their episcopal seat.

Some years ago, Lord Melchett's secretary wrote to the Bishop of Winchester, addressing him as "Dear Mr. Winton . . ." This caused mild amusement in ecclesiastical circles. When Lord Melchett heard of it he asked, "Well, what is his name then?" We can sympathize with this lapse when we know how complicated is customary usage in some respects.

Though you address an archbishop as "Your Grace" it is a bad error to address a duke similarly when you meet him socially. You can call him "Duke" and in the same way his wife "Duchess", and though this may sound very American it is perfectly correct. It always reminds me of the story of the American who went to King George V and said, "Hello, King, I've come all this way to see you." I think His Majesty's charming reply must have added to the American's already deep admiration of our democratic royal family.

In a book of etiquette this paragraph would be labelled "Common Errors". One of the most usual is in introducing the younger son of a duke. The second son of the Duke of A . . . would be Lord Charles B . . ., the surname being his father's (and, of course, his own) true surname and not the title which his ancestors chose on being raised to the peerage. If you introduce the younger son of a duke without including his Christian name you will create a new title for Debrett. These remarks apply equally to the daughters of a duke, substituting, of course "Lady" for "Lord".

Remember that if the daughter of a duke, earl or marquis marries a commoner, only her surname is altered. Thus if she were Lady Mary B . . . before her marriage the "Lady Mary" still remains. So if Lady Mary B . . . marries plain John Jones they are announced as Mr. and Lady Mary Jones.

A mistake that is often made is in addressing a surgeon as "Doctor". I cannot think why, if you have earned the privilege of calling yourself "doctor", you do not do so, but many surgeons are very touchy on this point and insist on being called "Mr.". I wonder if all the medical profession realize the reason for this distinction? Apparently, many years ago, when surgery was in its infancy, the surgeon (sometimes known as the leech, as he dealt chiefly in blood-letting) was also the barber and generally of lower social standing than the physician.

When you meet a marchioness she will be introduced as the Marchioness of C . . . but you address her as Lady C . . . Supposing you wish to correspond with a marchioness and you have previously met her socially you write to her as "Dear Lady C . . ."

There are many pitfalls in letter writing. You will hurt the feelings of a sensitive baron's wife if you address her as Lady X. She should be addressed as the Lady X. By omitting that all-important three-letter word you automatically rob her of her real rank. It is the wife of a knight who is addressed as plain Lady X.

A knight is addressed as Sir John B . . ., but the case of his wife intrudes a snag. She must not be called Lady John B . . ., for to do so would be to give her the rank of the wife of a duke's younger son. She is Lady B . . . without her husband's Christian name. Her husband is addressed in conversation as plain "Sir John".

Another tricky person to write to is a vicar. If you do not know him and you are writing to him very formally you can address him as "Reverend Sir", but if his full name and degree are written first "Sir" by itself is perfectly correct. If he is your vicar, though, and you are writing to him on church matters, address him as "Dean Vicar", and if you met him, perhaps on your holiday, you write to him as to any ordinary person. A vicar, too, is rather a difficult person to introduce. Usually you introduce him as "Mr. D . . ., our vicar," or else you can use the prefix "Reverend".

Of course we are all familiar with the ordinary military titles, but it is rather interesting to note that senior naval officers, unlike their fellow officers in the other two services, are entitled to the suffix, "R.N." instead of plain "Esq." Admirals, too, are entitled to the prefix "The Right Honourable" and the word admiral does not figure in the correct addresses to them.

A rather cumbersome person of military rank to address is a brigadier-general. It is not correct to call him "Brigadier", for this title has been abolished and replaced by brigadier-general. The difficulty is usually overcome by calling him "General". Alas, that we women cannot use the all-embracing noun "Sir"!—Hon. Mrs. Francis Lascelles in Hamilton Spectator.

GAMBLERS ALL

The amazing contribution to the Irish Sweepstakes in the Grand National Steeplechase from many countries, including Canada, indicates that the suppression of gambling is a hopeless task. There is a thrill associated with the prospect of winning big stakes from a small investment that no legislation can discourage.

The prevalence of gambling is indicated by a survey conducted by the London Inquirer, which says that popular gambling practices in Great Britain last year aggregated the following sums: "Horse racing £250,000,000 to £350,000,000; greyhound racing, £50,000,000 to £70,000,000; football pools, £40,000,000 to £80,000,000; gaming machines, £10,000,000 to £20,000,000."—Calgary Herald.

Hose, Bone Meal, Hollyhocks, Hoe

About this time of year any man's fancy is liable to branch out from the main stem. But not necessarily in the direction pointed out by the poets. For the majority there is no special stress on the romantic, but for many there is a surge of happiness when the grass grows green and some blossom bobs into being just to say "hello" to old Sol.

Any head of a house who in summer plays round with hose, bone meal, hollyhocks and hoe, has his job waiting for him once the last snow patch has disappeared. No wall of unemployment possible around his place, what with leaves to clear away, a winter shovel to be pushed into retirement and a rake put to use. Even the master of a pocket handkerchief-sized garden has a thrill getting little beds ready in which to raise rose-leafed salads for hungry aphis, aster come-ons for cunning cutworms, and a suitable diet for other rapacious crawlers. Half the fun in running a garden lies in the work. With May here now and a promise of June roses—provided the sprayer works—life has compensations. A sort of mild delirium sets in when the first seed crop shows, and eliminates memory of the lumbago that followed its planting.

A man willing to set up strings for scarlet runners is fairly certain of a pleasant summer. He has something worth fighting for, and, if he does not create, he fosters—encourages the nasturtium leaves to grow to sandwich size, and purple iris to look like orchids.

Watching, coaxing, tending a wee green something until it bursts into bloom is a tonic for drooping spirits, and a sedative for tired nerves.—C.M. in Ottawa Farm Journal.

Alfred Winny, Perfect Butler

Alfred Winny, the "perfect butler" who served for 72 years in one family, has died at Queensmead, Windsor, at the age of 99.

Winny, who won a competition a few years ago for the perfect servant, was born in a Norfolk village near Sandringham. He entered the service of Jane Duchess of Marlborough as footman, and on the marriage of her son, Lord Edward Churchill, went as butler to Lord and Lady Churchill. He remained in their service until his death.

Lady Edward Spencer-Churchill said that Winny was a devoted friend of her family. "I was with him when he died," she added. "I have lost a great friend.

"I thought so much of him that I had a well known painter down from London and had his portrait done in oils. It now hangs in the library."

Winny was on duty until a few months ago when he became ill. Lady Edward gave him the best bedroom in the house and engaged trained nurses to look after him day and night.

Until a few hours before his death he was giving instructions how the table should be laid for dinner and what flowers would be required.

He disliked the modern idea of cocktail parties, and often remarked that he was glad Lady Edward did not entertain in that way. He thought the majority of servants of today workshy, and could not understand their desire for going to cinemas. He went once, and described films as nonsense.

He always said that if he could have his time over again, provided he could serve the same family, he would enter service.—London Sunday Times.

The Pig, A Clown at Heart

Probably the most misunderstood animal in the whole world is the pig. As soon as his name is mentioned, someone in any crowd begins to talk about "filthy animals" and "nasty, dirty beasts". It would surprise some of those people to know the truth; that the pig is, wherever possible, a cleanly animal, that left to its own devices it is the only animal that will balance its own diet, and that it has real intelligence.

If pigs are kept in a pig yard of the old-fashioned type, about ten feet square and seldom if ever cleaned out, they have no choice but to be filthy. No animal could keep clean under those circumstances, especially if pails of garbage were dumped into an inadequate trough in the pen several times a day and the left-overs allowed to decay.

There is a reason for everything a pig does, which is more than we can say for a great many human beings. When a pig plows up a hole in the mud and wallows in it, that is because it suffers greatly from the heat, and knows that a mud bath is cooling. When he squeals just before mealtime it is because he knows that it is time to remind his owner of the hour. A mother pig makes a comfortable nest for her little ones, using any material at hand, and carrying it some distance in her mouth.

If you should give a pig five pounds a day each of a hundred different foods, it would eat just enough of the right elements to balance its diet, instead of devouring all the sweets or all the starches at once. No other animal that we know of will do this.

In the Don Valley, just outside Toronto, is the well-known Donalda Farm. Here each pig has a separate tiled pen, with a cement floor. It sleeps on a raised platform, on a truss of clean straw. Running water constantly circulates through a trough at one end of the pen. During the day a radio plays soft music. These pigs are not only spotlessly clean and absolutely odorless, but they are contented and healthy. When they go outside, it is to graze in broad meadows of clover, amply shaded by great trees.

If you want to understand pigs, get a baby one and bring him up on a bottle. In a few days' time he will learn to follow you wherever you go, and will amuse you by his antics, for he is a clown at heart. After such an experience you will never again misunderstand his race.—Alfred S. Campbell in Our Dumb Animals.

THAT BODY OF YOURS

By James W. Barton, M.D.

Preventing Acidosis

You are reading in newspapers and magazines and hearing over the radio about acidosis, and the great need of some thing to "alkalize" the blood and tissues. Because a food is an acid food, you may naturally think that it will have an acid effect upon the tissues. This is true to some extent but practically all foods contain both acid and alkali substances and the food is called an acid or an alkali according to whether it is richest in acid or in alkali qualities. But when the foods are finally used or burned in the body their general effect—the ash formed after they are burned—will have either an acid or an alkali effect upon the blood and tissues.

While the blood never really becomes acid (this would mean death) it may lose some of its alkali and so 'approach' nearly to an acid condition. This may be caused by trying to reduce weight by decreasing the amount of food eaten.

The fat of the body needs starch foods to help burn it; if not enough starch food is eaten, then fatty acids form which lower the alkaline reserve of the blood and tissues. As starch food is one of the two foods which are greatly decreased by those wishing to reduce their weight, these individuals may suffer with acidosis—low blood pressure, flushed cheeks, tiredness or weakness, and acid odor of the breath.

However, even if you are of normal weight you can acquire an acidosis—loss of some of your alkaline reserve—in a very simple manner by eating meat, bread, and sugar every day. This is good sense as bread and sugar are good energy foods, and meat (or eggs or fish) is needed to maintain the body structure and to repair worn cells or tissues.

But how can you prevent acidosis? While many individuals like to use some baking soda, soda mints, or other "alkalizer", the daily use of two or more of the "alkaline" food will keep the blood and tissues in their proper alkaline condition.

The alkali-forming foods are—milk and dairy products, nuts, fruits (except rhubarb, cranberries, prunes, and plums) and vegetables.

WORLD SHRINKS

The near success of those Soviet fliers, in their flight from Moscow to New York City in the upper strata, calls attention to the long range for war for which similar machines are being built in the United Kingdom, Northern Ireland and Canada. One particular type is the Hampden, which carries four guns, full load of munitions and fuel and crew, and has a cruising range, at full load, of 1,900 miles and farther when part of the load has been jettisoned. It has a speed of 265 miles miles an hour and could fly across the Atlantic between five in the morning an dnoon hour. It is being turned out in the hundreds.

With this development not even the expanse of an ocean, in the future, will provide full immunity from attack to any country. As C. H. J. Snider, resident in London, cables to his paper, the Toronto Telegram, the Gulf of St. Lawrence might have callers in the next conflict, who could hop off from home in the morning and make the bed-time hour in various Maritime and Quebec communities very unpleasant. What the British Hampden can do today, hostile planes can do tomorrow and national defence strategy must envisage such a possibility.—St. Catharines Standard.

AGE OF WHEELS

Ordering his squad to ride bicycles around the campus, Carl Snavely, head coach of the Cornell University football team, observes that American youth has softened up physically "through the modern tendency to use automobiles."

Sound logic, that, even though it may not add appreciably to the gridiron prowess of the Big Red eleven.

The average youngster never thinks of walking a few blocks. He insists on slouching into the family car for the shortest errand. The only hiking he ever does is that of standing on a corner and trying to thumb a ride from a stranger.

Coach Snavely is on the right track, but he doesn't go far enough. Modern youth should even be forced to forego bicycles. It would do the younger generation a great deal of good to be compelled to depend solely upon nature's own means of locomotion.—Sarnia Canadian-Observer.

TRUE IRELAND

We sometimes wonder what some of the city papers of Ontario would do to fill up space if Ireland weren't such a fine subject for heated editorials. Poor Eire and De Valera have been "blasted" so much by Ontario papers over a period of years that readers of the press must think them a renegade country and a rascal politician. Actually, Ireland is a quiet country, peopled by deeply religious people and De Valera is a quiet scholarly man of great diplomacy.—Lindsay Post.

DRESSMAKER HAD TO QUIT SEWING

Hands Swollen with Rheumatism

Pity this poor dressmaker! Nine-tenths of her work consists of sewing — and she was not able to sew. Rheumatism in the hands was her trouble, and she tried any number of remedies. But nothing helped much — until she came to Kruschen.

"Three-and-a-half years ago," she writes, "I had a violent attack of rheumatic pains. My feet and hands were swollen. The pain was terrible. I was really quite crippled and helpless.

"I tried many remedies without success. Then I started on Kruschen Salts, and after one month, I could stand up again. Then, I walked with a cane. In three months, I was quite well again. As I am a dressmaker, you can imagine what it meant to me not to be able to work my sewing machine. What a treat to be able to walk, to work, and to be free from pain."—(Mrs.) E.S.

The stabbing pains of rheumatism are often caused by needle-pointed crystals of uric acid lodging in the joints. Kruschen brings relief because it helps to dissolve those troubling crystals and to expel them from the system.

to national defence and the jittery international scene as it begins debate on the government's $63,000,000 defence estimates.

The wheat debate, which saw arguments repeated many times from various quarters of the house, was climaxed yesterday by an outburst from J. P. Poullot (Lib. Temiscouata) declaring he was "fed up with these speeches." In fact, he "found them crazy."

Opposition's Position

John Blackmore, Social Credit leader, hammered home the opposition's position as to the insufficiency of the 70-cent guaranteed minimum price. Proper use of the nation's credit to enable every citizen adequate food would go far towards absorbing surpluses of food stuffs now proving a problem.

Merit was recognized in the government's bills by Hon. H. H. Stevens (Con. Kootenay East) but at the same time, he insisted they did not provide a solution, being merely palliatives.

Two basic problems had to be faced, he said: Dislocation of markets and the question of drought and soil exhaustion. No Minister of Agriculture had yet attached sufficient importance to the physical side of the question, which was essentially one of conservation. There was the question of the lowering of the water table over the plains in recent years and the use of proper fertilizers. Long-range planning was necessary.

Mr. Stevens regretted that the government had included a 70-cent price in the wheat board bill because that figure, while recognized here as only an initial price, went out to the world as the value Canada placed on its wheat crop. He advocated allowing the wheat board itself to set the price in July or August or including an 80-cent price in the present bill, but he preferred the former.

Has No Sympathy

Trade Minister Euler declared he had no sympathy for statements made by members of the opposition trying to strike a balance of east against west. He had only condemnation for accusations that the government was "betraying" the west, as the Social Credit leader (Mr. Blackmore) had claimed. Such statements contributed nothing to national unity.

J. C. Landeryou, (S.C.-Calgary East), objected to Mr. Euler's charges that the Social Credit group were disrupting confederation by their charges of eastern robbery of the west. Mr. Landeryou declared all the loyalty to Canada was not confined to the Liberal party. He should be able to criticize government policies without being charged with disruption.

He complained, he said, against "legalized robbery" of the west, such as charging 10 per cent interest on overdue implement accounts and the charging of one to three per cent more on loans than was charged in the east.

Mr. Euler said the east had every sympathy with the present plight of the west, but it was purposeless to try to balance an account between east and west. It only made for disruption.

MRS. ROSS SHETLER

The whole district was deeply shocked on Monday when the death of Mrs. Idabell Shetler was ascertained. Mrs. Shetler has been in ill health for a considerable length of time but her death came as a complete shock to her host of friends in this district.

During the time that she had resided in the community she had taken an active part in all social activities and she was also an ardent church woman. She was a member of the choir of the Shannonville United Church and a member of many church organizations.

Left to mourn her loss besides her husband are her mother, three sisters, Mrs. S. Lawrence of Toronto, Mrs. George Rowe of Toronto and Mrs. Fred Blackburn of Bowmanville.

Interment was made in the family plot at Bowmanville on Wednesday following the funeral service at the home.

All the buildings at the C. N. R. station north of the village are being painted and extensive renovations are being made to all the buildings, and will be completed in the near future.

Mr. Clayton Thompson made the presentation of a white gold pen knife and chain. Ray suitably replied thanking his friends for the lovely gift and spoke of the fellowship and friendship in Springbrook Union. After singing Grace the Springbrook Young People served an appetizing lunch. This brought to a close a very happy evening which those in attendance will long remember and the three visiting unions are heartily thankful to Springbrook for providing such an enjoyable evening.

CONTEST DEVISED TO DISCOVER TYPICAL CANADIAN MENU

Nothing in years has so stirred public interest as the anticipated visit to Canada of their Majesties, the King and Queen. Not a town or hamlet but is agog with excitement! Souvenirs of all kinds are being planned to commemorate the occasion. One of the most interesting ideas that has been arranged in this connection is the Royal Menu-Planning Contest which is being sponsored by Robin Hood Flour Mills Limited.

In order to stimulate interest in what would comprise a typical Canadian menu, if an average Canadian family were to be invited to entertain their Majesties for supper, the Robin Hood Flour Mills are offering a generous list of pr[illegible] discover what Canadian women consider to be menus repre[illegible] of this country.

It would no doubt be a very interesting experience for Her Majesty if she could step into an ordinary home and take supper informally with the family, just as Queen Victoria was wont to visit cotter's homes in the Highlands. At any rate, what constitutes Canadian menus should provide pleasant discussion among the housewives of the community, and should bring to light valuable information on menu possibilities. Cash prizes totalling $1,000.00 are being donated. Besides a $300.00 cash prize ,the first prize winner will receive a suitably engraved, handsome, sterling silver cup. Information on how to enter this contest will be found elsewhere in this paper.

Announcing the Engagement

I'm full of romantic secrets these days . . . secrets told me in high-hearted letters from so many, many girls who wrote, "I'm engaged! No one except our families (and now you) knows it yet. How should I announce my engagement?"

It is comforting to remember that it is just as proper to announce the engagement in a simple way as with a great deal of fanfare.

Let's say that Betty dislikes the idea of the simplest possible way, and that there is to be no announcement party. Naturally she will tell her relatives and close friends. To those who live too far away to be told by word of mouth, she will write about the happy news. If she and her family have decided on the date when the announcement will be sent to the newspapers (although the newspaper announcement is, of course, not necessary), she will ask each person told to "keep the secret" until that date. On the day of the announcement she wears her engagement ring in public for the first time.

On the other hand, we have Nancy, whose family is to make the announcement at a lunch, dinner or tea. The announcement tea is most often chosen nowadays, since this may include more guests. At a lunch the announcement is made by the girl's mother, or by place cards (the two visiting-cards enclosed in an envelope at each guest's place for example). If the party is a dinner, the news is told by the father, who rises and proposes the health of his daughter and his future son-in-law. When the guests arrive at an engagement tea they are greeted by Nancy's mother usually with her father, while Nancy stands beside her mother, her fiance next to her. To each guest Nancy's mother may announce the engagement by saying something like this: "Here is Nancy . . . and her fiance".

There may be other parties given in honor of the engaged couple, but the actual announcement should be made by the parents of the bride-elect, or by her next nearest relative. The public announcement is made by telephoning or writing the society editor of the newspaper.

One thing more, in answer to that so-often-asked question —An engraved or printed engagement announcement is not good form or good taste. It's pretty ridiculous to take the trouble and money to send out formal announcements, only to show that you defy convention and good taste! Let's not do it.

Happy days to all you brides-elect and grooms-elect!

Fashion Flashes

(By ALICE ALDEN)

Picturesque indeed are the new dinner hats. Suzy makes a lovely model in violet Cellophane with bright green ribbon bows for trimming and a sequin-spangled violet veil.

An added starter in the color stakes is brown. A charming silk print in dark brown has beige and tan mushrooms forming the printed design. Tiny mushroom clips hold the square neckline.

Be good to your plain black or navy frocks by treating them to a gilet of white cross-barred pique. Wear it with a white pique hat.

Always room for one more bag. A big beauty is of natural pigskin lined with red leather, with a red leather clasp.

A breath of spring would be the right name for an exquisite evening frock of mimosa yellow chiffon with draped skirt. Gray chiffon is combined with the sash and mimosa is worn in the hair.

A portrait gown indeed is a dance frock of white tulle with molded, strapless bodice of black Chantilly lace. On the full tulle skirt are black lace fans with ribbons forming the stems that end in bows.

Here's How to Make Eyes Bright

HEDY LAMARR

Her pretty, sparkling eyes receive constant care

By HELEN FOLLETT

If the gay party is on for tonight and you would outshine your lovely sister and walk away with the beauty pennants, this is what you should do to make your eyes bright and compelling.

Dip a wash cloth in water fairly hot, hold close to your soul windows. Moist heat will reduce swelling of the tissues when you've had a jumpy day and feel tired. After the steaming take an ice cube and refrigerate your face. This beauty practice will bring a glow and freshness to the skin. Pass the cube over your eyelids for several minutes. Dip gauze pads in witch hazel, lie down and think up the smart cackles you are going to hand out so you'll be the life of the party.

Then get busy with the massage cream. Spread it over your celestial countenance. Place the first finger at the inner corner of the eye lid, sweep out to the temple, do a couple of little circles there, come back under the eye to the starting point. Wipe away the cream, use an astringent.

After fluffing on a rich, creamy powder touch the lips with your cherry red stick, brush a bit of mascara over eyebrows and lashes, place a light film of pigment on your eyelids. You have the choice of orchid, blue, green, bronze or blends for shadows.

With blouses all the rage one must be well-corseted. Yazzum and the brassiere must be worn. The time has gone by when the feminine shape can go unharnessed. The wobbling effect is looked upon with stern disfavor. It's sloppy and horrid.

The heavyweight should wear an all-in-one foundation garment which tucks away the bumps and accentuates good lines. Yes, my lambs, even the girls who are well-upholstered have them.

The slender figure with the ploppy tummy due to slack posture will find that a boned girdle is a constant reminder to stand tall and look chesty. It makes for chic and grace.

"Conditions are very much better at this particular time of the year than they were twelve months ago."—Henry Morgenthau.

MEN LOVE GIRLS WITH PEP

If you are peppy and full of fun, men will invite you to dances and parties.

BUT if you are cross, listless and tired, men won't be interested. Men don't like "quiet" girls. When they go to parties they want girls along who are full of pep.

So in case you need a good general system tonic, remember for 3 generations one woman has told another how to go "smiling thru" with Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. It helps build up more physical resistance and thus aids in giving you more pep and lessens distress from female functional disorders.

You'll find Pinkham's Compound WELL WORTH TRYING!

Advice to the Lovelorn

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

Famous Authority on Problems of Love and Marriage.

Why Do Girls Consider Marriage a Cure-All?

It's amazing, when so many roads lead to Reno and one marriage in every six goes on the rocks that lovely girls marry n'er-do-wells—drunkards, skirt-chasers and men who have never earned an honest dollar—and imagine they're going to reform them and live happily ever after.

Why this incurable optimism on the part of countless young women? They will marry a man who has been dragged through the divorce court on the ugliest of charges, two and even three times, and imagine they're going to turn the matrimonial derelict into a model husband.

As far as one can dope out the situation, it's a case of atavism or, as the dictionary defines this word, "The recurrence, in a descendant of characteristics of a remote ancestor."

For countless eons of time, women have been the homemakers, and they have had their greatest happiness—normal women at least—in rearing and loving their children. And in spite of their protests, over drudgery and monotony, they've had an agreeable kick out of keeping house, feeding their families, and doing all those things that are essentially feminine.

So, in one or two, or several generations, it's impossible for femmes to go into reverse.

Women have sat in Parliament, in Cabinets, in the United States Senate and House of Representatives. They have been judges, they have run big business, and according to statistics, they pay more taxes than men in this country. Still they remain incurably feminine. And what a blessing that is for what we have left of our so-called civilization. For, no matter how busily and brutally men may be engaged in the process of exterminating each other by war, women can be depended upon to pick up the pieces and carry on.

At times we're absolutely staggered to see the poor specimens of manhood that brilliant women marry. Those who have won distinction in the professions, in politics ,in business, will appear with something that looks and acts as if it came out of the funnies, and yet with pride, some super-woman will introduce it as "My husband".

Is this because women, with sufficient brains to enter the professions and business successfully, are too often poor pickers, when it comes to men?

The ultra-feminine woman who doesn't take life too seriously and knows more about permanents than she does about politics seems to be as successful in grabbing off a good provider in the way of a husband as she is in picking up something at half its value on the bargain counter. You've seen it not once but a hundred times, where the silly little hen woman gets the matrimonial prize all over her better endowed sister.

Perhaps the answer is that women who have surmounted all the odds in the way of legal discriminations, prejudices, and have come out usually successful may feel that they can work the same sort of miracle with a Grade C man as they have with their own careers. Starting out from scratch and achieving success in their own careers, they may feel they can do as much for an unpromising male, with the odds against him, as they have done in their own line.

And gifted women are notoriously maternal. The sorry little man who has never amounted to much may appeal to the successful woman who has more maternal instinct than the average. Whatever is the cause, the answer is a choice riddle for the psychologists.

AT THE BELLE

"Let Freedom Ring"

Lusty outdoor drama of the pioneer West, "Let Freedom Ring," which is next at the Belle Theatre presents Nelson Eddy in his most virile characterization to date, surrounding him with a cast of veterans who, despite their formidable reputations, are hard put to it to match the sterling work of the singing star.

In his singing, his acting and his climactic fist-fight with Victor McLaglen, Eddy sets a new high standard for himself, the role of the young Harvard law graduate of the 1860's who must resort to trickery to win a battle against unscrupulous railroad interests being not only made to measure for his talents but offering him a scope hitherto untouched.

Picturesque in setting, stirring in its patriotic motive, authentic in detail and thrilling in song, "Let Freedom Ring" offers other memorable portraits by Lionel Barrymore as the pioneer farmer who is Eddy's childhood sweetheart, by Edward Arnold as the thoroughly melodramatic villain of a Wall Street railroad tycoon, and by Victor McLaglen as the Irish railroad foreman with whom Eddy battles in a climactic sequence. That slugging match in the mountain cavern should add to Eddy's fans by the score.

Add fine comedy from Charles Butterworth as the saloon pianist, and other convincing character studies of the period from Guy Kibbee, H. B. Warner and Raymond Walburn. Veritably a feast of talent.

"Hound of the Baskervilles"

Sir Arthur Conan Doyle's "The Hound of the Baskervilles," one of literature's most shocking, spine-chilling mystery stories and the greatest of all of Sherlock Holmes' astounding adventures is now being presented at the Belle.

AT THE McCARTHY

"THE SHADOW"

A kid's dream—free circus, convenient peep holes in the sideshow tents, thrilling death leaps by daring trapeze artists, rollicking clowns, sights of wonder and spectacle, wild animal acts and a mystery that sends chills down their spine and is just what all boys and girls from six to sixty can have come true, if they attend the present showing of "The Shadow" the circus-mystery story, now playing at the McCarthy Theatre.

A truly up-and-coming young star in the darkly attractive Rita Hayworth, has the leading feminine role opposite Charles Quigley, who is certain to go places, as a popular screen star during this year, if he continues to hit as high in future productions as he does in this his first big assignment.

Others in the cast including ??? the "Shadow", Marc Lawrence, Vernon Dent and Marjorie Main and scores of circus performers and entertainers give to the production one of the finest of casts ever assembled together, in a mass appealing picture that no one liking a change from ordinary entertainment should miss.

"Ace" the screen's Wonder Dog also James Ellison and Helen Wood in a scene from "Almost a Gentleman," on the same programme with "The Shadow," now playing at the McCarthy Theatre

"Almost A Gentleman"

"Ace" the wonder dog of the screen, James Ellison, Helen Wood, Robert Kent and June Clayworth, who are to be seen in the companion feature, "Almost A Gentleman" now playing at the McCarthy, bring to the screen, one of the most refreshing stories of a dog's loyalty, a woman's love and a man's regeneration, any movie-goer has yet been privileged to thoroughly enjoy on a silver sheet.

James Ellison, recently in "Next Time I Marry" now has the most colorful role of his career in this picture and Miss Wood, in her first appearance for R.K.O. Radio, is a delightful heroine. "Ace" previously seen as Richard Dix' dog in "Blind Alibi" and also in "Orphans Of The Street" turns in a brilliant canine performance and easily establishes himself as the foremost dog actor on the screen. See this grand double show now playing at the McCarthy Theatre.

The programme also includes this week's chapter of "Flying G-Men" which will meet with the approval of those movie fans who crave plenty of exciting adventure.

MISS NAPOLEON

By Violet M. Methley

CHAPTER XVII

"He Dislikes Me"

Chrissie reached the well. Leaning over, she loosened her hold of the box. From the water far below came a dully resounding splash and at the sound all strength seemed to leave her body and she sank limply down upon the mud parapet, scarcely conscious even of surprise when she recognised the newcomer.

"You!" she stammered. "You!"

"Yes." Leonie's voice and eyes were like ice. "What on earth are you doing?"

"I—I—" Chrissie began to cry feebly. "I found it in Ranny's office—in the cupboard. It was ticking. If it had exploded all the hangars, all the aeroplanes would have been destroyed — burnt—everybody killed. Ranny, too, if he'd been here."

"But he wasn't!"

"No, but—he might have been. Oh, Leonie, who could have put that awful thing there? Do you suppose it was one of those Terrorist people?"

"My dear child, you must have been reading spy literature!" Leonie laughed with mocking indulgence. "An infernal machine sounds most melodramatic, but improbable, to say the least of it!"

"It was, though, or a bomb or something. I'm absolutely certain", Chrissie persisted.

"Well, have it your own way," Leonie shrugged her shoulders. "Only don't expect me to believe in it."

"It's easy enough to prove. The thing is still in the well."

"Yes; whatever it was, it's still at the bottom of the well — like truth," Leonie laughed again. "And don't you think it had better stay there? If you drag it out—well, it might not be very pleasant for Ranny, you know. Especially if you're right, if it was really something which ought not to have been in his office. It might be said that he had not had taken sufficient precautions to protect the aeroplanes in his charge—they might ask where he was this afternoon; inquiries would be made."

"I see—yes. Perhaps you're right," Chrissie looked troubled. "But I must tell Ranny about it."

"I'm sure it woud be better not. Don't you see, he would be bound to take action if you did; he couldn't hush it up."

"No, I suppose not. It's awfully difficult to know what to do," Chrissie shook her head. "And I wonder where Ranny is; I made sure I'd find him here."

"So did I; that's why I came," Leonie spoke carelessly.

"To see him?"

"Well, naturally. What other business could I have at the flying-ground?" Her eyes were watchful, intent on the other girl's flushed face.

"I don't know," Chrissie said, then took courage suddenly, clenching her fists and speaking rapidly, "Leonie, do you and Ranny care for each other?"

For a moment there was silence; then Leonie spoke in changed tones.

"You poor child, so that's what you thought? But you're wrong, Chrissie. If anything, he dislikes me."

"Are you sure?" Chrissie's voice was almost piteously eager.

"Quite sure."

They walked together towards the entrance, Chrissie asking rather tim'd questions about Leonie's life in the Palace.

"Do you like being there?" she ended.

"Well enough. I'm fond of children and Krishn is an attractive little fellow."

"Shall you stay there long?"

"That's impossible to say. It depends on so many things. Well, good-bye, Chrissie, and hold your own!"

Leon'e watched the pony-cart jingle away before mounting herself, and her look was grim.

"Little fool!" she thought. "But the sort of fool one can't help liking, even when she's spoilt all one's plans, temporarily at any rate. I've failed to start the blaze through Chrissie's interference, and after all the trouble I took to decoy Ranny away from his post with a bogus telephone message. But I rode her off; she won't tell Ranny and the truth is sage—at the bottom of the well!"

And when Chr'ssie met Ranny again at dinner, stern and unresponsive, her heart failed once more. Towards the end of the meal he spoke abruptly.

"You'd better be away from here at present, Chrissie. I'm arranging to send you to the Hills, after all, while it's wise for you to travel."

"If—if you think best, Ranny, but I'd much rather stay with you" Chriss'e faltered.

"I'd feel more satisfied; this is no place for you," he said brusquely. "That's settled then? I'll see about it as soon as possible."

He rose and went out, leaving Chrissie more dumbly desolate than before. For if Ranny didnt' want her, if he'd rather she went away what was the use of holding on?

During the forlorn days which followed, music came more and more her only comfort and means of expression. She sat for hours at the piano, playing scraps of Mozart or Beethoven for herself, or trying to speak to Ranny, wherever he might be, through Chopin or the "Liebestraum," or the music she composed herself, spun from her very heartstrings, as she felt sometimes.

And, slight and uncertain though the bond might be, Chriss'e felt sometimes as though music still made a tie between herself and her husband. She dared not strain anything so frail, a touch might break it, but now and then, it seemed there, a gossamer thread floating in air, rather than joining them.

She would hear his step on the veranda when she was playing, feel that he listened — feel it through every nerve in her body, cease playing, most likely, for fear he might be waiting impatiently to say something.

Once or twice, he actually sat down, seemed to be listening, and Chrissie played on for a while until self-consciousness made her pause and speak.

"I'm boring you frightfully, I expect," she broke off, waited for the muttered: "No—don't mind me," which gave so little encouragement.

Once she said, with abrupt shyness, "shall I go on playing?" to which Struan answered: "Oh, please don't bother on my account!" so that she sat for long minutes, silent, motionless, tears burning her eyes.

There came an evening, about a week after that adventure at the aerodrome which she tried, for Ranny's sake, to wipe out of memory, when Chr'ssie was absorbed in her latest composition, playing it over softly, sniging under her breath.

The swift darkness fell: in her pale primrose dress she was a faintly luminous figure in the shadows. Through the open windows came the night scents of the garden.

Suddenly a step sounded on the veranda and Chr'ssie, recognizing it, paused in mid-chord. Ranny! Without turning her head, she was conscious of her husband standing just inside the nearest window, saw him sink down upon a low divan. He was hardly visib'e there, beside the dark oblong of the window, through which black trees showed against the dim night sky.

Evening Love Song

She remained with hands just resting on the keys, head bent, pulses throbbing wildly to the words whic hshe had just been singing. Was it chance that he had come just then....or opportunity? With no time to plan, inspiration seized upon and shook her, forced her to act, and to act without further hesitation, without putting any question to that dark figure. He was there, he was listening.... he should hear....

"And, dear God, please let him understand.." Chrissie prayed, as her fingers began to move, playing very softly; very tenderly, a rippling prelude which fell like silver drops through the silence.

And against that background of quiet sound, her voice rose, clear, as one who repeats and answers a question.

How do I love thee....?
Let me count the ways....

Something like a sharply indrawn breath came from the shadows, but the singer did not pause, dared not pause. Her voice rose, sweet and steadfast, carrying up the sustained phrase on the wings of a lovely rising rhythm.

A pause, a chord, then, very softly and tenderly, dwelling on the syllables as though in remembrance of past moments, calling up homely, peaceful pictures:—

I love thee to the level of every day's
Most quiet need, by sun and candlelight.

Chrissie's voice broke on an indrawn breath that was almost a sob. Within her she felt a strange sense of power gathering together, rising towards a cl'max that was half joy, half pain, a kind of white flame of love.

But now—now....could she put it, all that glowing, rising passion of love into the music which had seemed to came from her very soul through to her fingers—could she make him feel it too?

Would her voice be steady enough?

Suddenly she found herself singing, the clear, pure notes rising—rising as the lark's song rises on wings towards Heaven itself.

I love thee with the breath,
Smiles, tears of all my life!—, if God choose,
I shall but love thee better after death!

The last words rang through the dim room, died into the silence. And still Chrissi esat there motionless, her hands pressed down upon the keys almost convulsively, her body strung, tense as a drawn bow.

There was a stir, a movement, stumbling, awkward, and Struan was beside her.

"Chrissie....Chrissie .... did you mean it—all that—all that you said—all that you sang?"

One hand was at her throat, where speech seemed struggling, suffocating, but she answered him, without a second's pause.

HORACE G. WRIGHT NEW CONSTABLE

Police Commission Approves Application and Officer Will Assume Duties May 15th

The Belleville Police Commission today announced the employment of an additional policeman for the Belleville Police Department in the person of Horace G. Wright, formerly driver of the Canadian National Railways freight service truck between this city and Picton, and who resides on Hillcrest Ave.

The appointment of Mr. Wright to the Belleville Force was made by the Police Commission during a special meeting held at the Court House yesterday at which time the applications of 41 men were carefully scrutinized before the selection of the new officer was made. The Commission recently voted to supplement the local force with an additional constable in an effort to bring the department somewhat nearer the recognized police strength of one police officer for each thousand inhabitants.

Belleville now employs ten police officers including Chief Kidd, Sergeants Arthur Booth and Arthur Harman, Plainclothes Constable Fred Isard, Motorcycle Patrolman D. Ellis and Constables W. T. Evans, P. Thomson, H. Taylor, C. Arnott and now Constable Horace G. Wright, who commences his new duties on May 15th.

The Belleville Police Commission is composed of His Honor Judge G. E. Deroche, Magistrate E. J. Butler K.C., and Mayor Jamieson Bone.

The Stars Say

For Saturday May 13

By GENEVIEVE KEMBLE

A RATHER perplexing chain of events is foretold by a very challenging arrangement of planetary configurations. The main event will be sudden and unpredictable, and, while probably breathtaking, it may prove of unexpected benefit. This may involve change of environs, new contracts and plans of travel, but in the end will be welcome despite certain petty annoyances and inconveniences.

Those whose birthday it is may not be surprised at the advent of a quite unexpected occurrence which may cause a decided rearrangement of plans and surroundings. While its suddenness may cause annoyance and inconvenience at first, in the long run there may be bettered conditions, pleasant change and happy fulfillments. But meet the situation with good judgment, discretion and happy anticipation.

A child born on this day may be fairly progressive, original and fond of novelty, change and travel. It may also be friendly, sympathetic and generous, becoming popular and fairly successful.

Madoc

Madoc—On Thursday, May 5th the members of Trinity .W.M.S. met with a fair attendance at the home of Mrs. Jack.

Following a hymn the leader. Mrs. Manley Fox appropriately introduced the theme of the devotional period "Stewardship" by means of a poem. A prayer earnestly offered for all church advancement at home and abroad by Mrs. Robert Wickham, was followed by the reading of the scripture by Mrs. McBain.

The president Mrs. P. Dafoe, conducted the business period with the assistance of the secretary, Mrs. Earl Burnside, and the treasurer, Mrs. S. S. Ashley. Reports were received with interest concerning temperance, peace, finance and the mission band from Mesdames J. Henderson, R. C. Fair, M. Fox and T. E. Burnside.

The sixth chapter of the study book "The Word in Canada" by Rev. J. I. MacKay, dealing practically with the missionary activity in Western Canada was ably synopsized by Mrs. P. Fleming.

Mrs. Fox again presented material for thought on stewardship, having Mrs. A. H. Corrigal and Mrs. T. E. Burnside assisting. A brief discussion followed, after which a hymn was read and the benediction pronounced by the president.

The hostess was assisted by Mrs. Wareham Harris and Mrs. Lowery in the offering of hospitality.

His Pipe
Made Him an Admiral

That stout old seadog Jean Bart was commanded to present himself before the Grand Monarch, Louis XIV. Perhaps even he was nervous. Anyhow, in the king's antechamber, he pulled out his pipe and smoked. The courtiers were ready to drop dead with fright.

But the King approved this rugged independence and said, "I make you admiral of my fleet".

In those days, tobacco was crudely cultivated and cured; but it cost, literally, its weight in silver. The refinements of pipe tobaccos, cigars and cigarettes were unknown. Today the tobacco industry provides the livelihood of over 300,000 Canadians (farmers, factory workers, wholesalers, retailers, with their dependents) to ensure that you shall get the smokes you want, when and where you want them, and as you like them best.

INTERCOLLEGIATE PLAYERS JOIN TORONTO ARGOS

Westman and Anton of McGill and Willis and Farmer of Western Chosen

STOREY TO REMAIN

Lew Hayman Will Have Practically His Championship Team to Start Season

Toronto, May 12 (CP)—Two stars from McGill University and two from the University of Western Ontario will play next fall with Toronto Argonauts, Dominion Senior Football champions, the Globe and Mail says today.

The players named are Herbie Westman and Andy Anton of McGill's Intercollegiate champions and George Willis and Jimmy Farmer of Western's runners-up. Anton and Willis are linemen and Westman and Farmer hlfbacks.

Westman, the paper says, "is counted on to fill the gap left by the departure of big Bob Isbister to Hamilton," while Anton is expected to fill the inside-wing position left vacant by the departure of Coach Hamilton.

"Willis, generally regarded as the best centre player in the Intercollegiate, will make up for the loss of George Hees and Red Vail through retirement, while Farmer, dynamic rushing backfielder of purple and white teams, would be adapted to a plunging back under Lew Hayman," the Globe and Mail continues. ". . . Anis Stukus, pointed for Ottawa in earlier reports, is said to have suffered a change of heart and is a likely starter with Hayman again."

Manager Herb Boynton of the Argos said last night that "nothing is definite yet," regarding the acquisition of the four players, all of whom were named to the Canadian Press 1938 Intercollegiate all-star team.

Storey to Stick

"What Boynton did announce was that Red Storey, hero of the bombing of the Bombers of Winnipeg in that memorable day of '38, and Art Evans, captain of last year's squad, would definitely sport the Argo colors again," the paper says. Storey has been rumored as heading for various clubs, while Evans has considered the possibility of entering Western.

The paper also points out that Graham Meikle, Toronto youngster who starred for Cobourg intermediates last year, and Bobby Porter, outfielder with Toronto's International Baseball League club, attended a dinner staged by the Toronto Balmy Beach Football Club last night.

May Play at Beach

Porter would not comment on reports that he would ask the baseball club for permission to let him return to football, his first love. He once was Balmy Beach's outstanding halfback.

"Meikle is said to be ready to step into the spot left vacant at kicking half when the great Albie Box, now president of the club, announced his retirement last fall. Herb Hendrie, who played a standout game for Peterborough at centre last season, is back in the city and will line up with the Muirhead crew once again. Cal Moore, erstwhile Beacher and Sarnia Imperial will be with the old gold and blue again after a year's absence in Ottawa."

Westman, Anton and Ronie Perowne of McGill have visited Hamilton and Toronto within the past two days and it was understood they interviewed Boynton at length yesterday.

"Y" NOTES

Following a series of athletic events that covered a period of some six weeks and conducted on the Y.M.C.A. gymnasium floor under the direction of Miss Marjorie Hitchon, crests were awarded the young ladies showing the most proficiency in the various events.

The crests were presented by Miss Hitchon, with Secretary J. E. Shortt congratulating the young ladies upon their accomplishments. The crests were given to the following for the highest total points scored during the contest:

Prep Girls: 1 Shirley Oliphant 17 points; 2 Dorothy Bishop 13; 3 Frances Delong 10.

Junior Girls: 1 Ruth Oliphant 12 points; 2 Lois Wilkin 11; 2 Jean Redfern 11.

Following the presentation the girls were entertained at the "Y", while Secretary Shortt announced a large number of new members are taking advantage of the summer membership to the Y.M.C.A. which include all and full privileges.

Mickey Cochrane's baseball book was ghosted by Charlie Moran, former Newark baseball writer..In three games with the Phils, the Reds drew 22,589 fans, or 457 more than saw all their games in Philly last year.

INDIANS MOVE UP

Pirates, However Compiled Best Record of Week in Older Circuit

(By Judson Bailey Associated Press Sports Writer).

This is inventory time in the Major Leagues.

Completion of the season's first intersectional strafing yesterday not only gave all clubs a shakedown of their own strength against all the other clubs, it brought them to the place where they must do something about it—if they ever intend to.

In another week rosters must be reduced to 25 players and in another month the bars will go up against trading except by the usually impracticable waiver route. This accounts for the almost daily shunting of players off to the minors and the chumminess of club executives such as brought a fine for fraternizing a few days ago to managers Bill Terry of the Giants and Ray Blades of the Cardinals.

Cardinals on Top

The Cards, who were tied for fourth when they came east, tock over undisputed possession of the lead yesterday while rained out at Philadelphia simply because the Cincinnati Reds lost their second game in a row to Brooklyn Dodgers 4-3 on Dolf Camilli's fifth homer of the year.

Previously the Reds had ousted Boston from first when the Bees lost two in a row. Collapse of Casey Stengel's pitching staff caused the Bees to lose six out of seven games to the western teams, concluded by yesterday's 6-2 setback by Chicago Cubs.

Pittsburgh Pirates, although beaten in their road finale by the Giants 4-1 on the four-hit pitching of southpaw Cliff Melton, compiled the best record of any club in the senior circuit for the period by winning six against two defeats—the other being a 1-0 shutout at Philadelphia.

About the only club which proved its pennant calibre beyond doubt while standing pat on present strength was New York in the American League. The Yankees climaxed a western venture by beating St. Louis Brown 10-8 yesterday and returning to the American League lead.

Lose Two on Trip

The champions won eight games and lost only to Cleveland and Chicago, even though Joe DiMaggio was left in New York convalescing from a leg injury and the once dangerous guns of Lou Gehrig were silenced by his benching.

Boston Red Sox, tied for first when they hit the road, also lost twice, to Chicago and St. Louis, but bad weather kept the midle three days and their victories therefore totalled but five. Their second defeat was a 3-2 jolt yesterday on the five-hit pitching of the veteran Ted Lyons, although the Sox themselves got only four blows from Woody Rich and Denny Galehouse.

Cleveland Indians made the biggest advance, moving from seventh to third place on five victories and three defeats. Lefty Al Milnar established himself as a pitching standby by beating the Athletics 7-0 on five hits yesterday.

Worst mark for the period was Detroit's eight defeats against a single victory. In their intersectional windup the Tigers were penned 4-2 by Washington.

Among Canada's two or three outstanding hockey players last season was Russell McConnell, ABOVE of McGill University, who a few years ago was just about as famous as a collegiate gridiron star, many being the paeans sung about his ability. His return to the football wars is rumored (there's that word again!) with Hamilton Tigers this fall.

Sports Roundup

New York, May 12 (AP)— The longest hitters of baseball and golf—Babe Ruth and Jimmy Thomson—are touring the Long Island courses together these days.....Doctors have told Joe DiMaggio he can start hitting a few tomorrow.... Joe Louis is due today or tomorrow to sign formally for the Galento joust .... Pittsburgh is sending a special train-load of rooters to tonight's Billy Conn-Solly Krieger fight in the Garden.

Football showed a deficit at the University of Oregon last season.. Basketball came up with a net profit of $17,000....News of Jimmy Slattery's ring comeback plans brought only groans from his home town friends in Buffalo....Miami's $10,000 open golf tourney will be played earlier this year so the visiting British Ryder Cup players will have a chance to shoot for the yams.

The unofficial baseball traders again have Lew Riggs headed for the Polo Grounds to replace Mel Ott, who is messing up too many grounders around third.....Boston papers say the calibre of oat burners at Narragansett this season is below par....Tony Canzoneri vs. Nick Camarata at New Orleans May 15 looks like a sellout.

Ladislav Hecht, the Czech Davis cup star who arrived here the day Hitler took over, will play the United States summer tennis circuit as a free lance....His former doubles partner, Roderich Menzel, will campaign for the Nazis..New York scribes say the Pirates are the best ball team to show at the Polo Grounds this season....Just in case Boston Red Sox are interested, Lou Finney, the new addition from the Athletics, is pretty handy with his mitts if anybody feels like getting fresh.

That titles need not be involved to assure a good fight is a well-established fact in ring circles, and so one of the better knock down and drag 'em out affairs is expected in New York when Bill Conn., ABOVE, handsome light heavyweight hope, tangles with Solly Krieger a member of the "muddled middle-weight family." Although a light heavy, Conn has done most of his fighting up to date in the lower classification.

With the opening of local baseball and softball schedules only ten days off the ballsters are getting slightly jittery awaiting the starting gun. Usually around this time of the year, just prior to the opening of the season's diamond activities it is customary to comment briefly on the matter of umpires. In the major leagues there are specifically two schools of umpires, of forms of umpiring, one taking pattern off Tom Connolly, dean of the American League arbiters, and the other off the workings of Bill Klem, veteran of all diamond officials. Regarding these two systems of umpiring the St. Louis Sporting News recently carried the following editorial comment.

"Some fans are inclined to wonder why there should be two styles of umpiring technique in the majors, particularly in regard to the stance the arbiters assume behind the plate. Many observers cannot understand why the dictum should be laid down that one or the other should be followed, depending upon the league and regardless of the individual or the circumstances. It seems unfortunate that varying styles are used, especially as they are likely to confuse the minor leagues, most of which look to the majors for guidance.

In the National League, for example, all the plate umpires follow the style devised by Bill Klem in judging balls and strikes from a position off to one side of the catcher. Klem claims that an arbiter cannot properly judge a curve ball breaking in to a hitter, if he is directly behind the catcher. As a consequence, all new umpires coming into the circuit, regardless of their previous training, adopt the Klem technique.

On the other hand, Tommy Connolly, umpire-in-chief of the American League, has standardized in his circuit the practice of the arbiter standing directly behind the catcher. This has been made a hard-and-fast rule in the Harridge loop and, as a result, all American League umpires follow the method.

Which is the better style? Far be it from us to tilt lances with such authorities as Bill Klem and Tommy Connolly. Undoubtedly, both systems have their good points. Klem is generally recognized as the best man on balls and strikes in either league. Whether it is because he has a sharper eye, better judgment or better stance is a moot question.

Probably the stance doesn't make as much difference as the adherents would have us believe. The correct decision is the thing, regardless of how attained, and the individual himself undoubtedly has more to do with reaching the correct decision than all the styles put together.

Therefore, it is recommended that minor leagues, in choosing their umpires, pay more attention to the physical and temperamental makeup of the individual, together with his training, experience and intelligence, than to his use of the Klem or Connolly system. A qualified umpire will make good, regardless of his stance; the other kind wouldn't prove satisfactory under any circumstances."

With opening day just ten days off the local Bay of Quinte entry will settle down to nightly workouts next week. The Belleville nine are scheduled to start batting practice this evening, having confined their efforts to date in merely limbering up the old "soup bones." The pitchers will start to bear down tonight as they take to the firing line off the rubber slab. Incidentally the local ball team is still looking for a hard hitting outfielder and an infielder who can pick up ground balls with some degree of consistency. Otherwise the locals seem to be in fairly good straits, especially in the matter of pitching strength.

George Richards, the Jewish wrestling champion who meets Al Dunlop in tonight's main bout at the Hume arena, is one handsome lad and always a favorite with the fair sex. In the U.S.A. George is "the teacher's pet" when it comes to the ladies and the same can be said in Belleville. Women are rather effective when it comes to wrestling favourites and invariably go, in a big way, for the goodlooking types, such as Richards. The fair sex of this district is rapidly becoming rasslin' conscious and when they take a fancy to one of the contestants they really go out on the limb for their favourite and are more earnest in their convictions than perhaps are men. During tonight's main bout just take a gander at the feminine clientele present and watch their antics, especially when Richards is on the receiving end of a physical going over at the hands of Dunlop. Two other lightning fast bouts will precede the main attraction to assure the fans of a good three-card show.

Do you remember when one year ago today, young Bob Feller, of the Cleveland Indians, announced he was "sick and tired" of scientific pitching. "I'm just gong to rear back and blow that ball over" he said. He went out to meet Lefty Gomez in a battle with New York Yankees, winning a 3-2 verdict for the Tribe.

Jack Turner, former elongated Oshawa righthanded slabsman, will replace Babe Marchildon as ace hurder for the Creighton Mines Cubs, the latter pitcher now being with the Toronto Leafs. Incidentally several of the old Oshawa senior ballsters are now in Northern Ontario, including Lefty Biddle, Buzz Bennett and Red Jubenville.

We're Telling You That it's high time the Parks Board got busy and had the local baseball diamond groomed before some of the aspiring Belleville ballsters bust a limb.... Baseball practice is on tonight and the railbirds are invited up to see Belleville's 1939 diamond hopefuls workout, also one or two additional spheriod-busters....Today we find the Cardinals leading the National League and the Yanks topping the American....We see Goody Rosen has been promoted to batting in the third slot for the Dodgers ..... President Adams of the Boston Bruins tossed $15,000.00 into the Bruins' N.H.L. players' pot to swell their individual take (who says there ain't a Santa Claus).

"Instinct is probably the essence of past experience and knowledge stored up for later use." — Henry Ford.

It places more rubber in contact with the road . . . that gives you greater grip for fast starts, quick stops, with safety . . . it means slow, even wear, big mileage. Expect 100,000 at Toronto Race Track as King, Queen Watch Famous Race Renewal

By Central Press Canadian

Toronto, May 12— One hundred thousand people at a Canadian sports event!

That's the prediction of local publicity agents and turf writers of the number that will watch this year's running of the King's Plate, richest race in Canada, at Woodbine Park, on May 22.

Attendance at an average renewal of this race is around 20,000, with last year's feature bringing out over 30,000, a record. But this year it will be not only a horse race, but a race witnessed by the King and Queen, after which the former will present the winning owner with the 50 guineas, first donated by Queen Victoria and since continued by succeeding monarchs.

The King's Plate for many years has been an opening day feature at the Woodbine track, first of the city's four racing plants to get under way in the spring. This year the order of events has been specially re-arranged and "the Guineas" moved from opening Saturday to the following Monday, the 22nd, the day on which Their Majesties will be here, and thus enabled to view the race and personally present the winning owner with his reward.

Two New Clauses

This year's renewal finds two new clauses in the conditions of the race which still is for horses "property of a British subject, resident in Ontario, foaled in Ontario, raised and trained in Ontario, that never won a race, either on the flat or across country, other than a race exclusively for two-year-olds, have never left Canada and have never been for a period of three months out of this province."

One new clause confines the race to three-year-olds, whereas in the past it was open to older horses as well. The other clause raises the purse from the $7,500 of last year to $10,000, put up by the Ontario Jockey Club, in addition to the royal prize. During depression years the purse was chopped to some extent from what it had been, but the directors of the club adopted a policy of re-building the purse gradually, although it will probably not remain at $10,000 from now on.

The presence of Their Majesties at this year's running will undoubtedly increase the number of starters, with owners leaving in their horses previously entered, in the hope that there's always a chance of an unknown coming through, something to be especially coveted because of this special occasion.

Included in the entries are 19 juveniles who have never in their young lives faced a barrier, and while most of them will be scratched a few will probably remain to add to the uncertainty.

Archworth, Sea General Favors

Running neck and neck in pre-race favoritism are Archworth, and Sea General, the former trained by Mark R. Cowell, inventor of a new starting gate recently adopted for use in Western Canada Archworth, off the record is a logical choice and had local rail-birds examining their stop watches closely after a recent trial spin, one of the most sensational in pre-plate warm-ups.

Sea-General has maintained a steady pace in his trials, although he would probably rate further behind Archworth were it not for doubts held about the latter's ability to go the mile and a furlong.

Willie Morrissey, popular owner of last year's popular winner, Bunty Lawless, is not likely to repeat his triumph, even his personal optimism failing to give Gas House, his entry in the 1939 renewal, anything better than a slim chance.

Most important single item in connection with this year's race, the feature that makes it more than merely a big local turf event, is the presence of Their Majesties, and elaborate preparations have been made to see that everything runs smoothly on the big day.

The race itself has been moved forward and will be the second on the day's card, to be run as soon after the King and Queen arrive at the track as possible.

King and Queen Circle Track

The schedule at the track calls for the royal guests to enter a carriage on arriving at the track and then, accompanied by a cavalry escort of Royal Canadian Dragoons, to circle the racing strip and dismount at the members' stand, there to view the running of the race from a specially constructed royal box.

At the conclusion of the race Their Majesties will cross the track to another new stand and make the presentation. A feature of the presentation ill be that this year, instead of the usual cheque that the winning owner receives there will be the actual guineas that in themselves have practically become another name for the race.

Following the presentation the King and Queen will re-enter their carriage, be rejoined by the cavalry escort, and move down the stretch, in full view of the stands, and so out of the track.

Plans and arrangements for this unprecedented occasion have been going ahead for many weeks now and the King's Plate, always a premier event in local sports circles, will this year be a memorable occasion even for those whose interest in the turf is not as deep as that of those who pick 'em up and lay 'em down from day to day during the regular meetings.

GOVERNORS MEET

Not Likely Art Ross Will Accept Presidency of N.H.L. This Year

Boston, May 12 (CP)—Club owners of the National Hockey League met here today for a brief review of the league's affairs prior to motoring out to the Charles River Country Club to participate in the "Governors trophy" golf tournament.

Tomorrow the full board—owners and governors of the league—will meet under President Frank Calder. The most important item on the agenda is the future of Montreal Maroons. The club was authorized to suspend operations during the 1938-39 seasons.

Commenting on the meeting, Bill King, New England sports editor of the Associated Press, says in his column today:—

"Art Ross' lukewarm attitude toward accepting the presidency of the National Hockey League has forced his fellow-governors to switch their plans . . . as a result the veteran Frank Calder probably will be assured of another year in office.

"The election of the Stanley Cup manager was practically a cinch two months ago but he's not so keen about taking it now . . . it is likely that Wes Adams, the Bruins' young owner, had much to do with Ross's switch . . . a few days ago he totalled up the season's receipts and found the figures so pleasing that he tossed Ross $15,000 to whack up among the players who received $1,200 splits of Stanley Cup cash.

"With one thing and another, Frankie Brimsek, the freshman all-star goalie, wound up with about $6,000 almost twice as much as his contract called for . . . most of the other Bruins enjoyed similar financial surprises."

7 TEAMS ENTER SOFTBALL LOOP

Picton Kiwanis Club Sponsoring League for Benefit of Underprivileged Boys and Girls

Picton, May 12—Picton will have a softball league this season, the first for some years. At the Kiwanis Club meeting on Thursday, it was announced that seven teams had entered with the possibility of one or two more entering. Opening games were set for Tuesday evening, with Dominion Stores meeting The Times, and Bloomfield Royals meeting Bloomfield Tigers.

Other teams in the league are Picton All-Stars, Morden's and Brotherhood of Railway Clerks.

The league is sponsored by the Kiwanis Club and the collections at the games will be divided between the teams and the club, the latter to use their share to send underprivileged boys to camp.

Local fans will have plenty of ball games this summer. The local intermediates have had a workout but weather has been none too favorable as yet. Some new equipment is being purchased.

As regards to a junior baseball team, there has been no definite decision, despite the statements in the press that there would be a junior entry here. Last year, the team was sponsored by a few interested men here, but this year it is felt that the Intermediate Club should be responsible for a junior team, which would supply them with players. Several junior players of last year have advanced to intermediate ranks.

TORONTO LEAFS NINE FULL GAMES BACK OF LEADER

Fail to Win a Game in Six Starts on Home Diamond

PLAY IS RAGGED

Jersey City Maintains Lead by Winning Over Royals by 4-3

(By The Associated Press)

If a prophet is without honor in his own country, then the members of the Maple Leafs must be picking the back streets on their way to and from the Toronto ball park. Tail-enders in the International League, the Leafs merely have made matters worse by failing to win a game in six starts before the home town fans.

With the other seven clubs closely bunched, the Leafs are nine full games back of the leading Jersey City Giants and showing little sign of improvement.

Their trouble doesn't seem to be in batting, for Toronto stands fourth in that respect and has averaged nine hits per game. But the Leafs have committed 27 errors, getting up to eight in one game, and their pitching staff has sagged badly. Only five times has a Toronto starter still been around at the finish, with two, three and sometimes four men usually parading to the mound.

Three Hurlers Shelled

That was the case again yesterday as Newark Bears slugged Billy Weir, Woodrow Davis and Johnny Pezzullo for 12 hits and a 13-4 triumph. Weir, after giving up four runs over the third and fifth, was shelled off the mound by a five-run outburst in the sixth, and Pezzullo was clipped for another four in the ninth

The breaks enabled Jersey City to keep its distance ahead of Newark. Tied at 2-all with Montreal Royals going into the ninth, the Little Giants got the winning tallies on a walk, a sacrifice, two errors and a successful squeeze play with Ray Honeycutt laying down the essential bunt. The Royals rallied briefly in their half, but fell one run short.

Veteran Si Johnson hung up his third decision of the season in pitching Rochester Red Wings to an eight-hit 4-1 triumph over Syracuse Chiefs. Baltimore and Buffalo were idle.

$71,000 IN POT FOR PREAKNESS

Johnstown Heavy Favorite to Take Down the Biggest Share

Baltimore, May 12 (AP)— The biggest pot of gold ever piled up for the three-year-old princes of the turf will be waiting for Johnstown and his five or six challengers for glory at the finish line of the 1 3-16 mile Preakness Stakes at Pimlico Saturday.

Something around $71,000—more than for any three-year-old stake event since they've been sending 'em to the post in American racing history—is assured.

As matters now shape up, Johnstown will run as part of an entry, either with Gilded Knight, from the Wheatley Stables, or, if it comes up mud, with the giant challenge, from the Woodward barn. Sunny Jim Fitzsimmons trains for both Wheatley and Woodward stables.

SOLLY KRIEGER TO MEET CONN

Fight Fans Expecting Real Old - Fashioned Brannigan in Garden

New York, May 12 (AP)—Fight fans are expecting a genuine, old-fashioned brannigan when Billy Conn of Pittsburgh and Solly Krieger of Brooklyn tie up in a 12-rounder tonight in Madison Square Garden

Solly, recognized by the National Boxing Association as middleweight champion, is a tough mug, and he has promised to knock his young and handsome opponent cold. Conn, the finest light-heavyweight prospect to come along in many a day, is equally confident of pinning Krieger's battered ears back.

Conn, who agreed to enter the ring at not more than 172 pounds, is a pronounced favorite in the betting, largely the result of his sizzling victories over Fred Apostoli the past winter. Krieger, though the lighter man, is more rugged than Conn and a fiercer puncher.

This will be their third meeting. Krieger won the first without much trouble and had Conn on the floor. The Pittsburgh kid came back to grab the second, just after Krieger knocked out Al Hostak for the N.B.A. title.

Not considered very seriously before the race, Marshall Field's Sir Damion, ABOVE, pounded around the course at Pimlico to capture the Dixie Handicap, one of the turf's big stake events. Sir Damion led all the way and covered the 1 3-16 miles in 1.58.6, defeating Pompoon, last year's winner, Cravat, Thanksgiving and other more favored entries. In winning, he added over $22,000 to his owner's bank account.

Snatching major mound honours

Tops in major league pitching circles in this still young season is Bob Feller ABOVE, who burned a strikeout path into the big time at the end of the 1936 season and has been improving ever since. He's subscribed to the formula of good pitching in his first six games this year, allowing less than one hit an inning, striking out an average of more than one per inning and granting less than half as many bases on balls. The figures for his first six games show 47 1-3 inning pitched, in which the enemy has secured 40 hits and 13 runs, while striking out 48 times and getting 21 free tickets to first. Robert's record stands at five wins against one loss.

CANADIAN TEAMS LOSE OPENERS OF CAN.-AM. LOOP

Cornwall and Ottawa Defeated by Gloversville and Amsterdam

ONE NEW TEAM

Utica Braves Take Place of Auburn Squad but are Shutout in First Start

Open season for pennant-hunting was underway in the Canadian-American Baseball League today as eight teams from Ontario and New York State settled to the schedule grind after their first taste of action in the class C loop's fourth campaign.

Of the original eight which organized the league in 1936, only Ottawa Senators, Ogdensburg Colts and Oswego Netherlands carried the banners into yesterday's opening round, though Utica Braves were the sole newcomers from last season.

The Braves, replacing Auburn Bouleys, found the pace a stiff one and bowed 4-0, to Ogdensburg in their debut. A four-hit white-washing job by Leo Pukas stilled the Uticans' bats while Colts walloped seven hits off the combined offerings of Lefty Art Horsington and Jerry Plumb.

Ottawa, with a new name and a new manager, meanwhile found it harder to overcome an old habit that dropped them into the cellar last season. At that, Senators made a see-saw battle of it until a 10th inning homer by Henry Hoysradt gave Amsterdam's Rugmakers a 5-4 home decision.

At Gloversville, Cornwall Bisons fought from behind all the way but were unable to overcome an early four-run lead they spotted the Glovers. Bob Merrian, on option from Montreal Royals of the International League, was credited with the 6-4 victory.

The Rome Colonels-Oswego nets contest developed into a slugfest with the visiting Netherlanders capturing a 12-8 verdict. Jim Conlon tilted the balance with a brace of long homers.

Philadelphia May Join N. H. L. After Next Season

Philadelphia, May 12 (AP)— A berth in the National Hockey League may become a reality for Philadelphia after next season.

That possibility was seen by some observers today after an announcement that a new sports arena, costing $800,000 would be built during the summer of 1940.

"It would be the easiest thing in the world for us to get a big-league team here," said Pete Tyrell, a director of the arena. "There are several dormant franchises in the National League right now and the league is trying to get a club here to make an eight-team circuit."

Yesterday's Stars

(By The Associated Press)

Cliff Melton, Giants: Held Pirates to four hits in lifting New York out of the National League cellar.

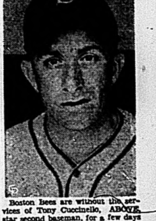
Dolf Camilli, Dodgers: Hit fifth home run of season with one on to beat Reds.

A. Milnar, Indians: Shut out Athletics on five hits.

Charley Keller, Yankees: Tripled with bases loaded to get New York off to big lead against Browns.

Ted Lyons, White Sox: Scattered five hits to beat Red Sox.

Bill Herman, Cubs: Tripled with bases filled in ninth inning to overtake Bees.



Boston Bees are without the services of Tony Cuccinello, ABOVE, star second baseman, for a few days following a game with Chicago Cubs in which he collided with Dick Bartell in a play at the base. The slight injury is not expected to keep him out of the line-up for long.

Their Majesties to View 80th Renewal of King's Plate in Toronto

From the spacious stands and expansive lawns of Toronto's Woodbine Park race track, it is expected that between 50,000 and 100,000 people will get a glimpse of the King and Queen when they visit the track on May 22, the day of the 80th renewal of the King's Plate, oldest continuously run race on the continent. The King will personally award the 50 guineas that go to the winning owner, a donation first made by Queen Victoria. The picture gives an excellent idea of the beautiful track that will be inundated by humanity on the 22nd. Shown also are the joint favorites to capture this year's running of the historic race, Archworth, LEFT, and Sea General, RIGHT.

TORONTO STOCKS CLOSE

Toronto, May 12—(CP)—Trading on the Toronto Exchange was definitely lacking in vigor today and volume dropped to about 200,000 shares to set a new low for recent years. At the same time prices eased off narrowly to show losses in all index groups. Weakness of foreign markets, reportedly the result of uneasiness regarding developments in Danzig, discouraged trading locally.

Consolidated Smelters was conspicuously weak, selling off to 41 1-4, for a loss of 3 1-2. Trading was fairly active in small lots. Nickel, Noranda and the cheaper Base Metal shares posted moderate losses. Weakness was general in the Golds but losses were held to minor amounts. East Malartic, Uchi and Pamour dropped 5 to 10 cents.

The market weakened slightly for Home Oil and Anglo-Canadian while Calgary - Edmonton was up 3 to 5 cents.

Senior Oils, Steels and Liquors were weak groups of the Industrial section.

WALL STREET CLOSE

New York, May 12. — (AP) — Downward leanings predominated in today's stock market although early losses running to a point or more were subsequently reduced.

Volume was exceptionally small throughout. Near the final hour the ticker tape frequently came to a dead stop. Transfers were about 350,000 shares.

Butter, Egg Prices Remain Unchanged

Toronto, May 12—Quiet trading, with unchanged prices, was the general rule during Thursday's session of the Toronto open produce market, according to the Dominion Department of Agriculture.

Sales were not in sufficient volume to establish prices on a firm basis on the butter market. While current receipts were not heavy, buyers displayed extreme caution in purchasing and dealers found offerings moving slowly. Ontario creamery solids closed at 20 3-4c for No. 1 grades and 20c for 38 score. Prints reflected the previous day's loss in solids by easing to the range of 22 1-4c to 22 3-4c for top grades.

Fresh receipts were ample to cover all requirements on the egg market. Trading was quiet, but prices held steady. Graded shipments were quoted at 20c for grade A-large, 18c for medium and 17c for B and C grades. Government inspected lots were offered at 1-2c per dozen premium.

Cheese Eases in Montreal

Montreal, May 12 (CP)—Ontario colored cheese prices eased fractionally but other offerings held steady and unchanged on open produce markets here yesterday, the Dominion Department of Agriculture reported.

Quebec No. 1 pasteurized fresh in wholesale jobbing lots made 20-3-4c. Receipts, 668 boxes.

Ontario colored cheese brought 10 1-4c-10 3-8c a pound. Receipts, 48 boxes.

Graded egg shipments in used free cases sold at 21 1-2c a dozen for A-large; 19c-19 1-2c for A-medium; 19c for B-large; 17c-17-1-2c for C. Receipts, 710 cases.

54 Army and Navy Veterans to Help in Guarding Crossings

Fifty-four members of the Army and Navy Veterans in Canada, Belleville Branch No. 201, will assist provincial and local police in policing the city, railway and other crossings when the Royal Train passes through Belleville on May 21st, officials of the club announced at a special meeting held in the clubrooms last night.

Twenty-two veterans will assist the provincial officers in patrolling railroad and other crossings between Marysville and the city limits while thirty-two will aid city police in guarding city crossings and performing other duties at the railway station, Past President W. J. Ford told members.

The club granted the sum of twenty-five dollars towards the expense of taking schoolchildren to Kingston on the occasion of the Royal visit, while ten dollars was granted to the newly-formed fund instituted at the Belleville Collegiate Institute for the pupose of assisting in paying the transportation of high-school students who cannot afford the expense.

Two new members, Messrs. A. Stewart and A. C. Hanks were introduced to the meeting, which was brought to a close with entertainment and refreshments.

Based on statis. which the bank said were incomplete but nevertheless showed the trend of defence expenditures, a rsume said the total cost of war implements during 1938 had increased six times that of 1928.

TWO ROBERTSONS GIVEN JAIL TERMS

Amos Given Reformatory Sentence and Carman a Jail Term for Theft

Amos Robertson, 25, of Renfrew, was sentenced to serve three months in the Ontario Reformatory, while his brother Carman Robertson of Newmarket was given two months in the common jail when the two brothers appeared for sentence before Magistrate E. J. Butler K.C., in today's local police court after they had pleaded guilty to the theft of gasoline from the gas tank of another motor car parked near the nurses' residence of the Belleville General Hospital last week.

The two Robertson boys pleaded in vain for clemency and were assisted by R. A. Pringle, local barrister, who pointed out Amos Robertson had a clean record behind him. Insofar as Carman Robertson was concerned, however, Crown Attorney B. C. Donnan K.C., introduced a list of previous convictions that had been registered against the latter and included convictions from Texas to the Canadian border.

"This man has gone straight since 1933, I might point out," interrupted Mr. Pringle. Amos Robertson asked the leniency of the court on behalf of his brother. "I have kept him straight for six years. If you send us to jail he will lose his home, car and business," pleaded the younger Robertson.

Mr. Donnan presented to the court two lengths of hose and several cans, in which were found five gallons of siphoned gasoline. "These articles are a full equipment with which to steal gasoline", suggested Mr. Donnan.

"There can be no justification for this type of crime at any time," stated His Worship as he sentenced Amos to three months in the Reformatory and Carman to two months in the county jail.

OSCAR ST. PIERRE

The loss was not discovered until some time after it was believed to have occurred.

The day following the robbery, a cardboard carton containing in the neighborhood of $750.00 was found between the cellar foundation wall and the main floor of the vacant Canadian Bank of Commerce Building directly opposite the Bank of Nova Scotia office.

Tracks were found leading from the rear of the building housing the latter office to a deep culvert that runs beneath the main street of the village. Guards were posted but the culprits failed to return to the scene.

PROSPERITY SEEN

This sum is a state credit which will be used mainly to purchase aircraft and armaments from British manufacturers. Another £5,000,000, it was reliably learned, will be raised shortly by private British interests for industrial development in Rumania. A third instalment of £5,000,000 would be used to establish a British-Rumanian bank and bolster the Rumanian currency in British markets.

Rumanian circles predicted an upswing of prosperity for their country as a result of the policy of "having well-defined relations with all big powers."

Days Named for Respective Schools To Obtain Tickets

At a meeting of the special school children's excursion to Kingston committee held in the Y.M.C.A. last evening, it was decided to name the following days for the respective schools upon which tickets may be purchased at the Canadian National Railways ticket office on Front Street:

Queen Mary School children will purchase their tickets this (Friday) afternoon; King George and Prince of Wales Schools on Saturday morning; Queen Alexandra and Queen Victoria Schools on Saturday afternoon; St. Michael's Academy on Monday afternoon, and the Collegiate and Vocational Institute on Tuesday afternoon.

Principals and teachers of the various schools are asked to prepare and provide a list of all pupils wishing to go so that the local agent may check off each child as the ticket is sold. Excursion rates of 60 cents return fare for each public school child, and $1.20 for adults has been granted.

SKULL PREHISTORIC SEA TURTLE FOUND IN ORE.

Corvallis, Ore., May 12 (CP)—One sea turtle, dead about 20,000,000 years, caused a lot of scientific excitement here yesterday. The turtle's 16-inch skull was found near Newport. Dr. E. L. Packard, Oregon State Paleontologist, said it probably weighed 1,500 to 2,000 pounds. The find was the first of its kind ever reported in North America.

Belleville Children Allotted Best Section in the Stadium

Greater Section of Covered Grandstand in Richardson Stadium is Reserved

OPPOSITE ENTRANCE

Belleville children have been allocated one of the best locations in the George Richardson Memorial Stadium for the ceremonies there on the morning of May 21st, it is shown in a stadium plan received by the local secretary of the children's excursion committee from the Kingston management today.

The 1,000 Belleville school children, twenty supervisors, and monitors have been allocated the greater section of the covered grandstand directly in the centre of the stadium, the same section where the specially reserved seats are being held for the officials, it is shown on the plan. The children will be seated directly opposite the main or central entrance through which the Royal cars will arrive, and directly in front of the spot where the services will be held within the grounds.

Special silken official badges, printed with the wording: "Official, Visit of Their Majesties. George Richardson Memorial Stadium, Kingston, Ont., May 21st, 1939," were also received by the secretary for distribution to the officially named supervisors, who will accompany the Belleville children.

Instructions Issued

The following regulations passed at a meeting of the Kingston Committee yesterday have also been received by the local committee for guidance:

Entrance will be by the main entrance. The time set to assemble is 9 a.m., Daylight Saving Time. Out-of-town children should bring lunches. Officials will conduct the children into the Stadium in groups. It is advisable for each child to have an identification card with his or her name or address. Lost children should go to Victoria School. Parents or supervisors may enquire there. All must be in the Stadium by ten o'clock. All must be off the track and seated by eleven o'clock. All instructions will be given over the loud speaker system. Only those adults with official badges will be permitted to enter. The car containing Their Majesties will be the second car to enter the gate. After the procession leaves the Stadium grounds, no one will be permitted to leave until directed, and then only in groups.

Lunch Boxes of Standard Size

At a meeting of the Belleville committee and citizens held in the Y.M.C.A. last evening, it was decided that lunch boxes of standard design, with suitable tape for carrying over the children's shoulders, and with the lettering "Belleville" printed on them, would be given free of charge to each child by the committee. Special arm bands and other identifying markers for the supervisors and children will also be provided. Supervisors will be equipped with official silken badges, the gift of the Kingston management. Banners with the name of each Belleville school will also be provided, it was hoped.

A special purchasing committee composed of the general chairman, the secretary, and J. Shepherd was named to carry out the provisions of the committee in the matter of lunch boxes, banners, arm bands and children's badges.

Plans call for the children to assemble in the Collegiate grounds on the morning of May 21st at which location they will march in orderly array to the train which is expected to be waiting on the 6:30 o'clock, Belleville time from Pinnacle Street spur line.

Further details of the excursion will appear in this paper as soon as last moment plans have been completed by the committee.

VICTIM OF SEIZURE HAS RELATIVES HERE

Believed to have died of a heart attack when the United States schooners Isabelle Parker and Edith C. Rose' collided and sank in a dense fog off Yarmouth, Nova Scotia early Tuesday night, Frank Nickerson, 62, the only fatality reported as yet, was a brother of the la[illegible] Mrs. (Captain) G. R. Strahan o[illegible] this city. Captain G. R. Strahan former master of the 'Oriole IV" and his son William 'Bill' Strahan reside at the family residence on Cedar Street.

The late Mr. Nickerson was a member of the crew of 'Isabelle Parker' and was found slumped at the bottom of a companion-way after the collision occurred. "He was an old man and must have died from a heart attack" a seaman, one of three, who carried Mr. Nickerson to a waiting dory, stated.

T. C. HASLETT K.C. WAS BORN HERE

President of Hamilton Law Association, Dies Aged 87 Years

Hamilton, Ont., May 12 (CP)—Thomas Colhoun Haslett, K.C., Dean of Hamilton's Legal Fraternity and President of the Hamilton Law Association for the last 30 years, died today at his home here. He was 87. His health has been failing for some time and it was a year since he had visited his office. Three weeks ago, Mr. Haslett broke his hip in a fall and since then had been confined to his bed.

Born in Belleville in 1852, the son of John James Maslett, civil engineer, Mr. Haslett was privately tutored and then passed through a grammar school. He entered what was then Albert University at Belleville, graduating with the degree of Bachelor of Arts in 1870. In 1873 he came to Hamilton after having proceeded with the study of law which he continued for another two years. At that time, in 1875, he was admitted to the Bar and became a partner of the late D. B. Chisholm, a former member of parliament.

SURVIVORS STAGE

into the Parker. I ran down to get on a pair of boots and when I got out again I saw we were sinking fast. The bow was partly under water, anyway.

"Some of the men were trying to lower a dory. One got away and about fifteen men tried to get in but they all couldn't and some were forced into the water.

"Then I saw that four of the men, John Godick, Herbert Surette, Kennety Devine and my son, Ted, were trapped forward. I yelled to the Parker to pull out so they could be saved.

"The men on the Parker heard me and they hauled out and we got the four men out safely. I didn't want to see them killed. You know, I lost another son in the Ellen T. Marshall when she blew up five years ago.

(The Ellen T. Marshall caught fire and burned to the water's edge off the Nova Scotia coast in December, 1933. Three men were lost.)

LeBlanc was pinned into his bunk but we got him out all right. I really did not think all the men would get off. When they did I put on a lifeboat and after Ted jumped overboard I followed.

"I started to swim to the Parker but I saw she was sinking too, so I didn't know what to do. By then I was all fagged out but two fellows in a boat picked me up.

"We had no compass, no food, no water, no hats, nor underclothes. We had a sail and some oars. We rowed 150 miles and were picked up last night. We sure were thankful to be found. The people were mighty good to us everywhere and we appreciated everything they did to make us feel like humans again."

Nine—five from the Rose and four from the Parker—were landed here last night from the Yarmouth coastal vessel Amacitia which came across them as she headed toward Boston. They were in two separate boats.

The dories were out of sight of each other—and completely unaware of each other's whereabouts—when the Amacitia found them as she headed toward Yarmouth from Boston. After one dory had been taken aboard, the other was sighted a few minutes later, eight miles away.

So far as these nine knew, the only fatality was Frank Nickerson, member of the Parker's crew from Argyle Sound, N.S., the 62-year-old seaman was found at the foot of the schooner's forecastle ladder a few minutes after the collision.

"He was rather an old man, and I know he must have died of a heart attack," said Fred A. Bourque of Lynn, Mass., and Hubbards, N.S. Bourque said he and two companions carried Nickerson's body to one of the dories. That dory hasn't been found yet.

In the language of the fo-cas'le, Bourque described the collision as "a holy fright."

Take 3 Survivors p

Through the impenetrable fog, both craft were running under the power of their auxiliary gasoline motors. The Parker was coming out of Boston for the fishing grounds, and the Rose was running into port with a full fare of fish taken on Brown's Bank, 100 miles off Yarmouth.

There was no warning. First indication the men on the ships got was when the impact tumbled sleepers out of their bunks to the floor.

The larger Parker thrust her nose six feet into the forward section of the Rose. As she bounced off, tons of water cascaded into the fishermen's living quarters.

The heavily burdened Rose sank almost immediately; by the time dories could be loosed, they could be floated off the deck. Only two got away. Members of the crew leaped into the water and swam toward the other craft, but she did not last much longer.

Captain Albert Hines of Argyle, N.S., and East Boston was seen getting into one of the Rose's dories. Captain George E. Goodwin of the Parker, who lives in Lynn, Mass., got away in one of the Parker's boats.

Survivors said only twelve men managed to leap into the Rose's two boats before they were washed overboard. Some had swam to the Parker and got into her dories by the time they were launched. The outbound ship's dories picked up those clinging to wreckage before they rowed off.

All Wednesday, the dozen dories kept in sight. But after night fell they became separated.

Couldn't Swim

"When he grabbed ahold of the tub, it went over and chucked me into the water. It was cold. And I can't swim a stroke.

"Somehow I stayed up, though, and paddled over to the ship. The deck was so low I just rolled onto it right easy. We lowered a dory and got into it.

"There was Tom Bowridge, Frank Hubbard and someone else. We rowed over to the Parker and went aboard to try to find some dry clothes, but we couldn't find any.

"By that time I didn't know where my dory was, so I got into another one with Ambrose Doucette and Fred Bourque. We shoved off and watched both boats go down."

Heart-Breaking Experience

Charles Leblanc of Revere, Mass., told of a heart-breaking experience he and four mates went through more than 29 hours after the Edith C. Rose sank and just an hour before another craft finally picked them up.

"A freighter steamed past us less than a mile away," Leblanc said. "We hollered and made all kinds of noises. They couldn't hear us."

One of the men manning the Rose's auxiliary engine, Leblanc said he was about to go off duty when the ships met bow-to-bow.

"I had been playing solitaire," he said. "I threw the cards on the table and climbed on deck alongside the Captain. There was a crash. We didn't know what happened. By the time I scrambled to my feet, men were running all around and the ship was sinking."

AGREEMENT

The prime minister's announcement brings Turkey into the anti-aggression bloc along with Britain, France, Poland, Rumania and Greece.

The Anglo-Turkish pledge, which is reciprocal, covers the entire Mediterranean area. It means that if war starts anywhere through an act of aggression and extends to the Mediterranean, Britain and Turkey will pool their resources.

Security In Balkans.

The prime minister said the "two governments recognize it also is necessary to establish security in the Balkans and they are consulting together with the object of achieving this purpose as speedily as possible."

"This arrangement does not preclude either government from making agreements with other countries in the general interests of the consolidation of peace," the prime minister added.

Mr. Chamberlain emphasized that the Anglo-Turkish declaration was not directed at any particular power. This apparently was added to dispel any impression in Germany that the anti-aggression bloc is intended to encircle the Reich.

"This declaration is not directed against any country," he said. "It is designed to assure Great Britain and Turkey of mutual aid and assistance should the necessity arise.

"It was recognized by the two governments that certain matters require more precise definition, and an examination of them is proceeding."

Turkish Position Strategic.

Turkey, occupying a strategic position in the eastern Mediterranean, is looked upon in Britain as a valuable ally in the event of war. She controls the Dardanelles, entrance to the Black sea, and is in a position, if necessary, to came to Britain's aid in defence of Palestine and Egypt.

Clement Attlee, Labor Opposition leader, expressed satisfaction with Mr. Chamberlain's statement and asked if it would be followed by Anglo-Turkish staff talks.

The prime minister said it would not be until a full agreement had been signed.

When Lieut.-Commander Reginald Fletcher, Labor asked if the term "Mediterranean area" was employed in order to exclude the Dardanelles and Black Sea, Mr. Chamberlain replied, "No, sir."

Asked whether the term included seas leading from the Mediterranean such as the Adriatic and Black Sea the prime minister answered, "I should prefer not to give a definition."

Mr. Chamberlain said a similar statement would be made at Ankara, the Turkish capital.

Soviet Nearer to Agreement.

The House recessed for the week-end amid laughter when Mr. Chamberlain was asked if an "act of aggression leading to war in the Mediterranean" meant an act of aggression anywhere or only in the Mediterranean and replied "it means an act of aggression which leads to war in the Mediterranean area."

France and Soviet Russia also have been negotiating pacts with Turkey and British commentators were confident an agreement between Britain and Soviet Russia was near.

Old Homes and New

By GRACE D. GOODRIDGE

Nan Hubbard shivered with disappointment and dismay as the little car struggled up the steep hill, and John stopped it at the top and turned to his bride, with a great joy shining in his eyes.

"There before you you see the old Hubbard estate, famous for—famous for—well, anyway, it's famous for having all that makes life worth while," and he laughed and drew her close. And over his shoulder Nan saw the weatherbeaten old farmhouse and the huge barns fallen into decay, standing desolate amid the sere fields of late winter.

If John had lied to her purposely she would have turned back then, but she knew there was only honest pride in his heart about his old home; he saw it in reality as he had so often described it to her, a home he loved and found beautiful because of his love.

But as the days went by, Nan found herself balked in her plans for creating the home she had always hoped for.

When she had tried, very tactfully, to get rid of the unsightly furniture and dust - collecting ornaments, John listened in real amazement. "But, dear, they belonged to my folks, you know, and mother made those knitted things herself, and I'd hate to get rid of them."

It was in the early spring when she asked John about an old empty house farther down the road. "Why, that is the original Hubbard farmhouse. Here's a key to the back door; go in and look around. You like old furniture, and I think there is some left in there."

When Nan opened the door of the old house and went in, she was surprised at the appearance of the place. It was so different from the usual deserted house. It was swept and clean, and while the three big rooms on the ground floor were bare of furniture, upstairs two rooms were piled high with neatly arranged pieces that would have driven a collector wild with envy. Nan exclaimed aloud at the old tables, chairs and a beautiful old settee that stood near a fireplace. And then and there her idea was born.

Here she would play at the sort of home she wanted, until the time might come when she could have a home in reality.

Before she locked the old house up again that afternoon two back rooms were swept and cleaned, ready for their furnishings. As they were on the back of the house she thought it quite safe to place curtains and draperies at the windows. At the end of two weeks Nan had two rooms that satisfied her beauty-loving soul.

Every afternoon when she was alone Nan brought her sewing, and sewed and rocked in the big chair by the window. She felt quite safe about being found out, as John was too busy, and she knew he had no reason for coming near the old house.

But one day she heard steps on the porch. For a moment her heart beat faster as she remembered she had carelessly left the key in the lock. John had come down there perhaps to look for her. His cheery voice called her and she went into the hall and met him as he reached the top stair.

"Nan, what are you doing up here? You'll get a cold in this—" His voice trailed into a murmur as he looked beyond her into the room she had left.

Then his face changed from utter astonishment to a look Nan had never seen there before. Swiftly he crossed the room, dropped to his knees and hid his face against her.

"Nan, to think I have been cheating you all this time, cheating you of the right to your own home. When I see how beautiful you have made these rooms, and realize what I have been making you live with in our home. I feel like the meanest man on earth. Will you forgive me and make our home like this?"

But there was no need to ask forgiveness; for before he had finished, Nan's tender hands had encircled his head, and Nan's lips were laid against his own.

Before another week had gone the old house was rifled of its treasures to fill the places left vacant when the horsehair furniture and its accompanying ornaments were packed away, possibly to become valuable in their turn in some future day.

Little Benny's Note Book

Shorty Judge was sitting on his front steps and I stopped walking passed, saying, Hello, eggface.

Be careful who you're calling that to, Shorty said.

Him being easy to call names on account of h's size and disposition, and I said, Why, what's a matter, eggface?

I'll soon show you, Shorty said.

And he jumped up and started to jump around puntching the air like a boxer, saying I guess you didn't know I been taking boxing lessons, did you, bang bang, smack smack, did you see that uppercut? Go ahead, call it to me again, just once, I dare you, he said.

Meaning eggface, and I said, Go on, where have you been taking any boxing lessons?

In my father's gyminasium where he goes to reduce his waist, that's wheere, crack crack, smash smash. O boy, it's a lucky thing you weren't in the way of that one, Shorty said. Well go on, call it to me, he said.

And he kept on jumping around like a boxer, looking as if he really proberly had been taking lessons, me thinking, Good night, it wouldn't be fair, I never took any boxing lessons, and Shorty sat down again saying, Well I guess that's enough practice for a while, there's no use getting out of breath without even knocking anybody out, what did you say I was?

Me not saying, and just then his mother came home from somewheres, and I said, Did Shorty ever take boxing lessons, Mrs. Judge? and she said, Well I should hope not, I'm opposed to fighting in any manner or form.

And I waited for her to go in the house so I could call Shorty eggface again, only he quick went in with her.

Proving you're safe as long as other people aren't positive whether they ought to be afraid of you or not.

ROYAL FLOTILLA

press has encountered storms and fog, but none of the officers doubt she will not dock as scheduled. Vice-Admiral Sir Dudley North, Commander of the royal flotilla, emphasized last night the Empress still has plenty of time to spare.

After hoping vainly all yesterday that the fog would lift and enable the Empress and her convoying cruisers, the Southampton and Glasgow, to proceed, Capt. Meikle and his officers on the bridge waited throughout the night for any improvement in visibility.

At 9.45 o'clock, E.D.T., last night an effort was made to get under way. The Southampton turned on her penetrating searchlight to show the way. The light gleamed blue white as it cut through the fog.

Vessel Again Stopped

For 15 minutes the liner moved ahead slowly but it was no use. The vessel again was stopped and drifted idly until daylight.

The sun rose from behind the mist at 4.15 a.m. (12.30 a.m. E. D. T.) but daylight brought no improvement in visibility. It was not until 6.19 a.m. that conditions were sufficiently favorable to enable the Empress to grope its way along a short distance.

At 10 o'clock visibility was somewhat better and the liner's speed was jacked up a bit.

And with that a man pacing the promenade deck was heard whistling:

"Merrily we roll along...."

Collector Sentenced For Misappropriations

Napanee, May 12.—Merton H. Mellow, 48, and father of six children, was sentenced yesterday to terms of four years and three years to run concurrently in Kingston Penitentiary for thefts totalling nearly $15,000 from the muncipalities of Bath and Amherst Island. He had been tax collector of Bath village from 1930 to 1938, and of Amherst Island Township from 1931 to 1937.

Shortages in Mellow's accounts were first found by County Auditor C. H. Lapum last November. The collector could give no satisfactory explanation of an apparent defalcation of $1,480 in the Amherst Island accounts for 1937 and further check was made on the rolls back to 1931.

Mr. Lapum reported a total shortage of $11,179 in the township, and when the village rolls were checked a deficit of $3,787 was uncovered. Fourteen charges in all were laid and Mellow was sentenced to four years on the Amherst Island charges and three years on the Bath charges, the terms to run concurrently.

Mellow assumed full responsibility for misappropriations. Magistrate E. J. Butler said it was "sad to see a respectable family placed in such a disgraceful and humiliating position". The law must be enforced and full punishment meted out for the crime, he added.

Mellow was a former reeve and county councillor.

Grain Dust Explosion Blamed for Blasts, Elevators Destroyed

Ruins Searched for Traces of 8 Men Believed Perished

Chicago, May 12—(AP)—An explosion of grain dust—fine particles of corn, rye and wheat—was cited today as the probable cause of the blasts and fire that levelled five grain elevators on Chicago's South Side yesterday.

Searchers poked through the smoking debris for traces of eight men believed to have perished. Twenty-three men, including 18 firemen, were injured.

Throughout the night firemen played streams of water over the smoldering ruins at 102nd Street and the Calumet River.

Most estimates placed the loss at $4,000,000 Market traders calculated a loss in excess of $2,000,000 to the millions of bushels of grain stored in the elevators. Three of the elevators were operated by the Rosenbaum Brothers Grain Company, the other two by the Norris Grain Company. The total storage capacity exceeded 6,000,000 bushels.

PICTON

Plea for Gracious Living Is Made by Bride Broder

Noted Writer and Native of Picton Returns to Scenes of Childhood

NEWS OF INTEREST

Picton, May 12.—(Special) — A plea for gracious living was made by Miss G. C. Mary White, better known as Bride Broder, of the Globe and Mail staff, when she gave a lecture at St. Andrew's church here Thursday night. Miss White was born in Picton and had many interesting stories to tell of her life here. She said it was here ,that she had gained the knowledge which had enabled her to follow various phases of journalism.

A large crowd was on hand to welcome the noted writer, whose discourse was given in a charming manner, yet she did not mince words in expressing her opinions on the subject of gracious living. She felt that if gracious living was necessary in times of peace it was absolutely essential in times of crisis.

Miss White defined her subject as 'living simply, unhurried calm, hospitable and without ostentious display'. She regretted that so many persons were wont to entertain a few friends at the Golf and Country Club instead of in their own homes, and believed that the homes of today lacked the hospitality of those of our mothers and grandmothers. She regretted that there wa sso much 'keeping up with the Joneses' ,and urged smaller places not to ape their city cousins.

"Haste was the opposite to gracious living", said the speaker. "There could not be gracious living in a hurried atmosphere. She was of the opinion, that hurry was a sign of a disordered mind and nature.

Rev. Dr. M. E. R. Boudreau and Miss Kathyrn Hadden were heard in piano solos and Rev. J. B. Creggan in vocal solos. A social time was spent.

Anniversary Observed

The 25th anniversary of the Macphelah Rebekah Lodge was observed on Tuesday evening, when 45 members of the Trenton Lodge were guests. The visitors presented the local lodge with a travelling Bible, in memory of the Past President, Mary Williams, and this will be passed on to the Belleville lodge after it is used here.

Membership jewels, representing fifteen years' membership, were presented to Mrs. George Francis, Bertha Francis, Mary Jones, Mrs. S. Bowers and Edra Hicks, the presentations being made by Assembly Inside Guardian Sister Milligan of Trenton.

During the social hour, a birthday cake with twenty-five candles was brought in and was cut by three of the charter members, Mrs. Kenneth McKenzie, Mrs. Doney Thompson and Mrs. H. Norwood.

Russell T. Kelley of Hamilton, was speaker at the Kiwanis Club on Thursday. He believed that the only way that real prosperity can return to Canada is by securing a better price for farmers' prices. Those on the land were in the majority in Canada, he pointed out, and if they had the buying power it would benefit all of Canada. Mr. Kellty expressed a wish, that there was more vigorous leadership in Federal affairs. He felt, that there should be action in regards to prices for farmers' produce and that the railway problem, which is costing Canadian taxpayers $1.50 every second, should be tackled. Australia and New Zealand, had shown the way by fearless leadership and planning, he said. The speaker was thanked by H. B. Tully.

Plans were made for an evening celebration on May 24, when there will be softball, an old car race, a model airplane flying contest and a display of fireworks. Proceeds will be for the Club's work among underprivileged children.

New Uniforms for Band

Sid Lockyer, bandmaster and Lt.-Col. Sherman Young, O.C., of Hastings and Prince Edward Regiment, were in Ottawa, this week and returned with new uniforms for the Regimental band. These will be worn for the first time on May 21, when the band accompanies the Regiment to Kingston on the occasion of the visit there of the King and Queen.

It was announced on Thursday that a special passenger train would be run from Picton to Kingston on May 21. This will leave at four a.m. that day. There was a demand for such a train as many motorists did not wish to encounter the heavy traffic and also have a parking problem on their hands. All the Collegiate students will go to Kingston that day, but no arrangements have been made for the public school children, but it is expected that most of them will go with parents or friends on this train.

Canned goods shipments are heavy from Picton this spring. On Wednesday, the Lethbridge called at the C.S.L. dock and loaded 450 tons of canned goods for the West. It was the first west-bound freighter here this season, though there have been several east-bound boats here.

During her stay in town, Miss Mary White was entertained by Rev. and Mrs. M. E. R. Boudreau.

Masons Entertained

Forty-five members of the Brockville Masonic lodge were guests of Prince Edward Lodge on Wednesday evening. The third degree was exemplified and a banquet followed. Among those present was Claude Hurlburt formerly of Picton.

Mr. Lavergne McLellan of Belleville spent Sunday with his mother, Mrs. John McLellan.

Bert Prior, Jr., has completed a course in radio at a Toronto school.

Miss Maude Hobson of Toronto, is a guest of her cousin, Mrs. Lucy Shaw.

Miss Kathryn Hadden is a guest of Mr. and Mrs. J. F. Rowland at Kingston.

Dr. Walter Couch, who has spent the winter in Detroit, returned to town for the summer months, this week.

Mrs. Finlay McArthur entertained at a dinner party this week, honoring the birthday of her grandmother, Mrs. D. F. VanDusen.

Mr. and Mrs. John Shannon, Mr. and Mrs. Bernard Shannon and Mrs. Masten have returned to Bloomfield after several months spent in Florida. Their return was delayed owing to illness of Mrs. J. Shannon.

"I guess it's all over. I want to see you about a divorce!" Those were the words of Mrs. Nina De Milo - Canfield - Martin Monroe - Martin - Colton - Colton - Graves, of Los Angeles (shown ABOVE,) as she called her attorney, just a single day following her marriage to Billy L. Graves, 26-year-old musician. "I'm getting an annulment", Graves said. "I'll get a divorce,' said Mrs. Graves, just a few scant hours after she heard herself pronounced "wife" for the eighth time. Both parties agreed the rift was caused by the bride's previous mate, Darrel Lynn Colton. He had phoned her it seems, too many times since her elopement. Mrs. Graves gave her age at time of elopment as 28.

STRANGE MALADY AFFECTS YOUNG PIGS IN P .E. CO.

Animals Die After Short Illness — Disease Attacks the Blood

SEVERAL HERDS LOST

A strange malady that saps the blood of young pigs is making great inroads in swine herds of farmers residing in the Wellington, Bloomfield and Hillier districts of Prince Edward County.

Hubert MacDonald, Bloomfield farmer lost thirty of his young porkers out of a herd of thirty-four. Twenty-four of John Palmer's herd of Hillier have already succumbed to the disease while George Baitley, Wellington agriculturist lost three of his choice herd yesterday.

Dr. J. G. Smith, Wellington veterinary, called by Baitley yesterday, performed a post-mortem on one of the animals and discovered they contained practically no red blood at all. A small amount of pale pinkish fluid was found near the throats of the animals. The intestines were found to be normal.

Dr. Smith was at a loss to diagnose the strange cases. "I have never seen anything like this before" he told Baitley.

The pigs affected range between the weights of twenty and thirty-five pounds. The animals eat well and act normal until an hour before they lie down and die.

Retired C. N. R. Worker Presented With Purse By Former Associates

F. D. Hulley Had Been With Railway Workshops for 32 Years

Veteran of the Canadian National Railway workshops for the past thirty-two years, Frederick D. Hulley, 165 College Street East, who retired from active service with the company when he attained his 65th birthday on April 16th this year, was honored this week by a large group of his former fellow employees when they presented him with a purse of money, in appreciation of many years of happy associations.

The presentation was made by Mr. J. McKenzie, while Mr. A. H. Jones, locomotive foreman, in a brief address, expressed his congratulations on Mr. Hulley's attainment of his railroad majority, and voiced the regret of the former colleagues of the retired veteran at the severance of happy ties that lasted down through the years.

Mr. Hulley entered the service of the railroad in 1907, joining the staff of the car-repair department. In 1912 he was transferred to the motive-power department where he served faithfully and efficiently as a machinist until his retirement a few weeks ago.

FOG DELAYS ROYAL PARTY'S ARRIVAL ONE DAY

Hollywood Publisher Found Soon After Kidnapping

George P. Putnam Says Kidnappers Wanted a Name

Both "Snatch" Men Spoke Excellent German and Appeared to be Well Educated

FOUND IN HOUSE

Putnam Went to Garage at His Home Where He Was Seized, Blindfolded and Gagged

Bakersfield, Calif., May 13 (AP)—Bound and gagged, George Palmer Putnam, 52, Hollywood publisher and husband of the late Amelia Earhart, was found in an incompleted house here, today, a few hours after he was kidnapped from his North Hollywood home.

Putnam, unhurt, said the kidnappers demanded the name of the author of the anonymous book, "The Man Who Killed Hitler" and suggested it would be "healthier" if he ceased printing it.

A statewide search for the pair and for Putnam's car, in which they brought him here, was ordered by Sheriff's deputies.

"They were very decent to me," Putnam said. "They didn't rough me at all."

Demands Refused

The publisher said he refused their demands and recalled ruefully that he had "thought the other warnings were phonies." Receipt of a bullet-ridden copy of the book, two letters and a telephone call threatening his life, were reported to Los Angeles police within the past month and on one occasion he fired two shots at a man who was climbing a tree near his bedroom window.

"I'm a little upset but I'm not hurt," Putnam said, as he sat in the Sheriff's office here.

Why the Weather!

Fogs at airports! To get rid of a fog at an airport means controlling the weather to a certain extent. Weather can, of course, be controlled in limited spaces as we do in our homes and to a less degree in orchards when frost is impending. It seems impossible for man permanently to remove fog from an airport. The problem is to remove enough of it for a sufficient length of time to enable the pilot to land safely. Two methods may be used: First, calcium chloride is sprayed high in the air and as the foggy air passes through this drying curtain, water vapor is partially removed and the dried air absorbs the fog: second, foggy air is sucked into a container and dried, then pumped out again, drying the space to be cleared.

NEED OF CANADA IS LONG-RANGE DEFENCE POLICY

Howard Green Advocates Defence Cooperation With Britain and United States

ESTIMATES CONSIDERED

Hon. R. J. Manion Suggests Committee to Discuss Defence Matters Behind Closed Doors

Ottawa, May 13—(CP)—A policy of defence co-operation with the United Kingdom and the United States should be openly adopted by the Canadian Government, instead of "pussyfooting" around the subject, according to Howard Green (Con. Vancouver South).

What Canada really needs, he says, is a long-range defence policy on a permanent basis, in which government-owned arsenals would be greatly expanded for the manufacture of military equipment, instead of merely making ammunition.

Such a planned policy would do away "with all the rushing about, the excitement and air of mystery" which only served to upset the people generally, he told the Commons last night as defence estimates were considered.

"We shall always have to defend ourselves, so we might as well get our defence forces, our defence

GOVERNOR ROE OF NAPANEE JAIL SERIOUSLY HURT

Attacked from Behind in Cell Block by Inmate Armed With Steel Rod

HIT ON HEAD

Napanee, Ont., May 13 (CP)—Attacked by a prisoner while proceeding through the corridor of Lennox County Jail, Governor W. H. Roe suffered serious head injuries last night. He was taken to Kingston Hospital where his condition was reported today as "serious".

Roe was locking cells when he was attacked from behind by a man alleged to be Earl Sullivan, Ottawa, and was struck over the head several times with a piece of steel 20 inches long. Another prisoner, whose name was said to be Patrick, rushed from his unlocked cell and overpowered the attacker.

Roe crawled to a telephone and was connected with Police Chief Watts. He uttered the word "Jail", then collapsed. Chief Watts sped to the jail and found Roe in the Jail office, bleeding and unconscious. The head injuries included two serious blows at the base of the skull.

Sullivan had been confined to jail here since March 30 when he was sentenced to three months on a charge of breaking and entering the Napanee Creamery plant.

Baron Rothschild Not Allowed To Discuss His Imprisonment

Paris, May 13 (AP)—Baron Louis Rothschild, white-haired and visibly aged after more than a year's imprisonment by Nazi Secret Police in Vienna, arrived in Paris today from Zurich, Switzerland, where he had flown last night from Vienna.

Smiling in his new-found freedom, the 56-year-old Austrian member of the well-known international banking family chatted with his brother, Baron Eugene de Rothschild, at the Paris East Station. Special police guards escorted the released banker and his associates.

The party drove immediately to the mansion of Baron Eugene in the Auteuil section of Paris where the Baroness Eugene de Rothschild greeted the guests.

Baron Louis was accompanied to Paris from Zurich by several Rothschild attorneys whom he has instructed to sue the German government in an attempt to recover at least part of his fortune said to have been confiscated after Germany's annexation of Austria in March, 1938.

One of the baron's close friends said Louis was "in good condition" despite the long imprisonment.

"Conditions under which Baron Louis was released by German authorities make it impossible for him to discuss his imprisonment under any circumstances," this friend explained. He revealed also that Rothschild's relatives and associates still in Germany are under unspecified restrictions which depend on Baron Louis' activities in France.

Baron Louis spent the period of his imprisonment on the top floor of the Hotel Metropole in two rooms adjoining those in which former Chancellor Kurt Schuschnigg presumably still is prisoner. It once was reported that the Duke of Windsor asked German authorities to release the Baron, soon after his imprisonment.

Major Powers Linked Against Aggression, Reformed League Plan

By EMILE DELAVENAY
Copyright, 1939, by the Havas News Agency

London, May 13—(CP-Havas)—Turkey or Russia will soon present a plan for sweeping reform of the League of Nations, dividing the Geneva body into one group of major powers linked by strong pacts of mutual assistance and another group of smaller states not committed to any "Security League," it was predicted last night.

Well-informed quarters said the project would be presented to the League Assembly in September and might even be discussed May 22, when the Council convenes. The plan was envisaged as joining up the greater powers in a solid front against aggression.

Unsuccessful efforts to reform the League have been advanced since it failed to halt Italy's conquest of Ethiopia by sanctions.

The new plan would be of value to Turkey, which is the keystone of various regional defence systems—the pact of 1937, linking Turkey to Iran, Iraq and Arghanistan in a middle eastern front; the Balkan Entente, in which Turkey is a partner of Greece, Yugoslavia and Rumania; and the agreement with Britain, as announced in the London and Ankara Parliaments today, for mutual aid in the Mediterranean.

CROSSED FALLS ON TIGHT WIRE

J. E. Hardy of Toronto, One of Greatest Aerialists, Dies, Aged 64

Toronto, May 13—(CP)— James E. Hardy, once one of the world's greatest aerialists and noted particularly for crossing Niagara Falls on a tight wire in 1896, died of a heart attack in a west-end fruit store. He was 64.

Hardy, native of Toronto, crossed the Falls on July 1 and July 4, 1896, and thrilled thousands of spectators by balancing himself on chairs and doing dancing steps on the way over. He ended his career nine years ago with an exhibition of blindfold walking, dancing and bicycle riding on a wire strung 40 feet above Sunnyside Amusement Park here.

He was refused permission in 1928, to try to repeat his walk over the Falls. A film company was reported to have offered him $10,000 if he could do it.

Only 21 when he gained fame, Hardy soon established a worldwide reputation by crossing Genesee Gorge at Rochester, 600 feet wider and almost as deep as the Niagara Gorge, and Montmorency Falls, near Quebec City. He was acclaimed in Europe.

SAYS SUAVE JOHN SLAPPED HER FACE

Elaine Barrie Says John Barrymore Called Her Vile Names

Los Angeles, May 13—(AP)—John Barrymore, the suave lover of the screen, slapped her face in Hollywood and kicked her shins in St. Louis, his dark-haired fourth wife, Elaine, charged as she demanded for the second time a divorce to end their 30-month marriage.

The 23-year-old actress — who met the husband twice her age in a New York hospital in 1935, changed her surname from Jacobs to Barrie out of admiration, followed him in their celebrated "Ariel and Caliban" transcontinental game of tag and finally wed him in Yuma, Ariz., in November, 1936 —signed a complaint similar in many points to one she filed in January, 1937, but later withdrew when they became reconciled.

She described again a gay New Year's eve party at a night club soon after the wedding, during which she said her face was slapped. She reiterated claims that he called her vile names and threatened her life.

GERMAN DECLARES KING GEORGE VI IS BOND OF EMPIRE

Dr. Ullman Says Canada is 'Suffocating in Abundance'

LOYALTY TO CANADA

German Newspaperman Sees Canada With Britain in Event of War

Berlin, May 13—(CP—Havas)—Canada is "suffocating in abundance," Dr. Hermann Ullman, special correspondent of the Boersenzeitung, said today in an article entitled "Canada in World Politics."

While dealing principally with the significance of the visit of the King and Queen to the Dominion and the United States, he mentioned the economic situation as follows:—

"This country, as large as Europe and one of the richest in the world, suffers from a flight from the land, and from the point of view of exports passes as already over-industrialized."

Dr. Ullman said the visit of the King and Queen goes much farther than to confirm the links between Canada and the Empire, being the symbol of a route from London through Ottawa to Washington.

Canadian Liberals, he said, prepared the Royal visit to bring the United States and the British Empire closer together.

POLICE DISCOVER COINS IN TANK OF ACCUSED'S CAR

Additional Charges Will Likely be Laid When Oscar St. Pierre Appears on Bank Robbery Charge

CAR CONFISCATED

Oscar St. Pierre, 60-year-old Hillier resident, who was arrested at his home yesterday in connection with the four-year-old robbery of the Wellington branch of the Bank of Nova Scotia in March of 1935, was lodged in the Picton jail without bail on a charge of bank robbery.

Today, however, Crown Attorney Gordon Walmsley, Picton, stated to The Ontario-Intelligencer, that additional charges of a serious nature would be preferred against St. Pierre, when he is arraigned in Police Court next Wednesday. "I am also informed that Provincial Police obtained a statement from the accused man last night which may result in startling developments," stated Crown Attorney Walmsley as he added that in all probability no witnesses would be called next week, this being at the request of the accused.

St. Pierre is said to have been apprehended following altercations with Cecil Bovay, a neighbour and during which the accused is said to have threatened Bovay A third party heard the quarrel and notified County Constable James Lovelace of the incident. Others are reported to have been implicated, but both Mr. Walmsley and Sergeant

King and Queen To Reach Quebec On Tuesday Next

Fog Persists and Causes Long Delays to Schedule of Liner Bearing Royal Party to Canada

BOAT MOVES, STOPS

Early Today Vessel Had Over 1000 Miles to Go to Reach Quebec Where Tour Will Open

By R. K. CARNEGIE
Canadian Press Staff Writer

Aboard Empress of Australia, May 13—(CP)—Helpless in a thick fog that lifted only intermittently, the Empress of Australia today was so far behind schedule on her voyage to Canada with the King and Queen that there remained no hope she could reach Quebec at 10 a.m., E.D.T., Monday as scheduled.

While there was no official word available here it was believed the Empress would not dock before Tuesday morning where Their Majesties are to be welcomed to Canadian soil by Prime Minister Mackenzie King.

The Empress was 250 miles off Cape Race, Newfoundland, this morning and it was estimated the big liner would require 54 hours from this point to make Quebec, travelling at her best normal speed of 18 knots.

Moves and Stops

Throughout the night and this morning the Empress alternately moved and stopped, her siren blowing continuously. Her best run took place at 9 a.m., E.D.T., when the fog partially lifted before bright sunshine. The liner immediately speeded ahead but within 20 minutes she was again forced to stop when the fog dropped.

Surrounded by icebergs that could not even be seen from the decks, the Empress of Australia was about 1,080 miles from Quebec.

All aboard have been waiting impatiently since Thursday morning for the fog to lift and allow the ship and her convoy of cruisers, the Glasgow and Southampton to push ahead.

Government officials who arranged details of the historic Royal voyage to Canada were quite aware of the fog hazard at this time of year off Newfoundland. In an effort to avoid a delayed arrival at Quebec they changed the original sailing date at Portsmouth from May 8 to May 6.

Fog More Persistent

But the fog has been far more persistent than could be foreseen and today all hope of landing on time had passed.

Montreal, May 13—(CP)— Officials of Canadian Pacific Steamships estimated today the liner Empress of Australia, carrying the King and Queen to Canada, could not reach Quebec before "nine or 10 o'clock Monday night," at the earliest, even allowing she could continue the rest of the route at 18 knots.

The estimate was made after the following report was received from the liner's commander, Capt. A. R. Meikle:

"250 miles east of Cape Race (at nine a.m. Dalight Time), northeast wind, steady, calm, smooth; dead slow, thick fog with ice about. Impossible give arrival time. Will keep informed."

Little Change in Program Except Shortening of Visit to Ottawa is the Plan Announced Today

ADDRESS OF LOYALTY

State Dinner in Ottawa Will be Held on Thursday, Not on Wednesday, as Originally Planned

Ottawa, May 13. — (CP)—Prime Minister Mackenzie King told the House of Commons today the King and Queen would reach Quebec Tuesday instead of Monday and that no material changes would be made in the itinerary except that the Ottawa visit would be shortened to three days instead of four.

Shortly after the Prime Minister made this announcement the House of Commons in a joint motion by Mr. Mackenzie King and Conservative Leader Manion, passed a resolution expressing loyalty to Their Majesties, to be presented to the King and Queen when they land in Quebec.

Persistent fog and ice had so delayed the progress of the Empress of Australia that the ship could not reach Quebec at the time fixed for Their Majesties' arrival, the Prime Minister said.

Revision of Program

This necessitated revision of the program and, after consultation with Government House and with the King by wireless it had been decided that the program arranged for Quebec Monday would take place Tuesday. The Montreal program for Tuesday would take place Wednesday and arrival at Ottawa would be Thursday morning instead of Wednesday morning.

The State dinner scheduled for Wednesday night in Ottawa will be held Thursday night and the parliamentary dinner planned for Thursday night will be given Friday.

This method of meeting the situation would avoid the disappointments involved in a general change of the itinerary right across Canada the Prime Minister said.

Although no further details were given it was assumed other Ottawa fixtures in the program would be crowded more closely together.

Actress Likes Hitler Tremendously But Does Not Dare Say More

London, May 13 (CP)—Miriam Verne, the American dancer who Chancellor Hitler personally engaged to perform at a Munich Theatre, today told an interviewer she admired the Fuehrer "tremendously, but I would not dare to say more."

The comely dancer gave her impression of the Chancellor in an interview with The Daily Sketch.

The interview follows:—

"I was frightened when I first met him, but now....I think....I almost feel that I....No....He is such an important man, I should not say that at all, I am only an artist. I'll say this, I admire him tremendously but I would not dare to say more.

'Do I think he is in love with me?....What a question! He does me honor, he admires my dancing."

At this point the correspondent interpolated the remark that the dancer also goes to parties with the Fuehrer where there is no dancing. On Thursday night, he pointed out, the Chancellor went with Miss Verne to the Munich Kuenslerhaus (Artists' Club) after her performance at the theatre.

"It is a small club where artists take their friends," the dancer added. "There were only a few other people there—a few of our friends.

"He saw me dance at Berlin and sent for me. He asked me if I did not think it would be a good idea for me to come to the theatre at Munich Of course I was delighted."

DAIRY INSTRUCTOR COMMENTS ON COLOR OF CHEESE

Questioned regarding the statement made at a recent local meeting of district cheesemakers that colored cheese from Peterborough factories retains its color for much longer periods than the same colored cheese in Belleville area, W. J. Moore, district dairy instructor of Peterborough, stated it had for some time been a well-known fact.

Some mineral or element present in the Peterborough district grass or soil, and absent in the Belleville region, is believed accountable for this.

"The color does stand up in this section", stated Mr. Moore. "As a matter of fact the Peterborough district makers have had the opinion they cannot make white cheese and over in Hastings County it is the other way around. Our scoring for color is generally very satisfactory."

KINGSTON'S OUTLAY FOR ROYAL VISIT

Kingston, Ont., May 13 (CP)—It was revealed a meeting of the Royal visit committee that the committee is likely to exceed its original allocation of $2,500 from city council by $1,000 in preparing for the visit of the King and Queen May 21.

General Secretary H. Stetham said the committee had spent around $3,000 already and expenses had not yet been accurately tabulated. Most members of the committee in their remarks gave the general impression that since Kingston was honored by the Royal visit the appropriation should not be begrudged and it was certainly not going to be too excessive.

Safety Campaign Informs of Danger and Possible Injury

HIGHLY EXPLOSIVE

Ottawa, May 13—Statistics gathered over the past seventeen years by the Explosives Division of the Department of Mines nad Resources at Ottawa reveal that 25 children were killed and 558 injured—the majority of them under 12 years of age—as a result of playing with carelessly discarded blasting caps. While no deaths were reported during 1938, 26 children suffered the loss of two or more fingers, an eye or eyes, as well as permanent scars to face, body and hands.

Both the Department of Mines and the Explosives Division of Canadian Industries Limited have carried on from year to year a relentless campaign to parents, teachers and children, warning of the dangers of playing or tampering with blasting caps found lying about in the vicinity of recent blasting operations. Safety literature in the form of illustrated posters appealing to all users of blasting material in mining and construction camps to keep all blasting caps under lock and key and to destroy all surplus caps, is having the effect of reducing the yearly number of accidents.

A blasting cap, is a small aluminum or copper cylinder, about an inch and a half long with or without a length of wire attached, which is open at one end and closed at the other. The closed end contains a small charge of an extremely high explosive which, when disturbed by a blow or prodding with a stick or nail, will explode, causing serious injury.

The present safety campaign seeks to enlist teachers and parents in warning children against the handling of these dangerous little missiles. No harm will result if a blasting cap is picked up and carefully dropped into a nearby body of water where it cannot be resurrected or better still its location reported to the police or some other competent authority who can dispose of it with safety.

FIRST APPEARANCE OF ASPARAGUS

Sells at 15 Cents per Half-Pound — Fresh Rhubarb Plentiful

The greens of new spring vegetables, the yellows and reds of the newly-blooming flowers and potted plants, the whites of wild trilliums fresh from the verdant carpets of greening woods of the district, formed a colorful seasonal touch to the city market today in spite of the fact that a decidedly cool breeze tempered the warmth of a brilliant May sun.

With the exception of egg quotations that dropped a cent in price from levels of last week, price tones remained fairly steady. Extra "A" selects were quoted at twenty-three and twenty-four cents, with slightly inferior qualities selling at 22 cents per dozen. Mediums were quoted at 21 and 22 cents. Farmers' butter was firm at 50 cents for two-pound rolls, with "singles" offered at 26 cents each.

New asparagus made its 1939 seasonal debut today with some fair qualities offered at fifteen cents per half-pound bunch, or two bunches for 25 cents. In one place slightly inferior quality could be had for 10 cents per bunch.

Rhubarb fresh from garden and farm was plentiful with practically every vendor on the market having the vegetable for sale. Bunch lots were offered at 5 cents each, and brisk business was done during the early hours. New spring onions and lettuce likewise caught the eye of the large crowd of Saturday morning shoppers selling at five cents per bunch. Radishes proved popular selling at the same price.

New plant seedlings were offered in profusion with zinnias and carnations offered at 20 cents per small box and pansies and sweet alyssum offered at 25 cents and two for 25 cents respectively. Strawberry plants were quoted at 40 cents per hundred with Cuthbert raspberry canes offered at 2 cents each. Cabbage and cauliflower plants were available at 15 cents per small flat and tomato plants at 50 cents per hundred.

Many Broilers Offered.

Broiler chickens again featured the display in the inside market where choice weighty young ones were offered at $1.15 per pair. Prices however were commensurate with size and quality with the low being 65 cents per pair. Yearling chickens were available at from $1.00 to $1.25 each with fowl ranging from 65 cents upward. Baby chicks were offered at 8 cents each.

Home cooking stands catered to a large clientele with many fair marketers taking advantage of the opportunity to buy the farm and home cooked delicacies at attractive prices. Watercress was offered by two small boys at 5 cents per bunch.

Potatoes remained steady and were in abundance. Good quality "spuds" were offered at $1.35 per 90-pound bag with other grades selling at a few cents less. Staple vegetables were scarce and what few were available sold sluggishly at last week's quotations.

Fresh lake trout and whitefish headed a variable fish offering with the former selling at 20 cents per pound and the latter at 25 cents sliced or 20 cents "in the piece". Mudcats noted a slight increase in price today as vendors prophesied the end of the season. This popular fish sold at 15 cents per pound. Fresh large-sized rock-bass were offered at 5 cents each with mullets demanding 25 cents for three large fish.

Activities of the Hospital Viewed by Many Visitors

Hospital Day Enables Citizens to Get Insight Into the Operation of Local Institution

NEW RESIDENCE OPEN

Accepting the invitation of the Belleville General Hospital to visit that institution on Hospital Day, May 12, citizens of this community had the opportunity yesterday of seeing a cross-section of activities that are part of daily hospital life. After inspection of the various departments and talks on special phases of the work, visitors had a clearer understanding of the factors which contributed to the efficiency and the high standard of their hospital, and of the organization by management and staff which brought many units into a smooth working whole.

Welcoming the many ladies and gentlemen who arrived during the period of "Open House" were the administrator, Mr. G. A. Friesen, and the superintendent of nurses, Miss Ruth Thompson, who with a bevy of student nurses directed the guests about the buildings. Groups gathered in the smartly appointed waiting room, which had been furnished by the Women's Hospital Auxiliary, and were then shown the handsome board room where directors, and doctors held their conferences. The next point of interest was the X-ray room, where Mr. R. G. Williams showed reproductions of X-ray films and actual X-ray films, explaining how the presence of disease or obstruction are detected. A demonstration of the use of the fluoroscope was especially interesting in this department.

Operating Room

Miss Hilda Collier, supervisor of the operating room, had arranged a fine display of the various types of anaesthetic and described just how each was administered, and for what type of operation. Methods used in suturing wounds were also explained. A display of instruments for an operation for appendicitis, for which the scrub nurse is responsible in the operating room, was inspected by the visitors, and the supply table of instruments. The sterilising room was next visited and those present saw how instruments and supplies are packaged and sterilized.

The service department of the hospital on the ground floor next engaged the attention of the visitors. Here, Miss N. Burke, dietitian, showed sample trays prepared for those on salt-free diet, light diet, diabetic diet and normal diet. The actual kitchen proved a fascinating place and the new Aga cooker, the great cook stove with its five ovens, which uses only one ton of coke a month and will effect a saving of about seventy dollars monthly. Five hundred meals a day are prepared in this department. The efficient laundry, through which 2,500 pieces pass in a day and the well arranged food storeroom commanded the admiration of the visitors.

Pharmacy Department

The pharmacy department in charge of Mr. Gordon Barclay, assisted by Mr. Alex Broad manufactures 52 preparations used in the hospital. Mr. Barclay discussing the advances in pharmacy in recent years illustrated his point with a demonstration of the progress made in the treatment of pernicious anaemia. Formerly fresh liver had to be taken daily, later liver extract in capsule form was introduced, twenty of these capsules being needed daily. Finally a more concentrated preparation was advocated until now "anahaemin" requiring only two injections a month is equivalent to the patients taking one and a half pounds of fresh liver a day. Mr. Broad explained the first aid remedies prepared in the pharmacy and advocated each home to have the essential first aid necessities.

A hint to those who might have friends ill in the hospital was the innovation of individual radios for renting at one dollar a week, a more original gift than the usual flowers and candy. Patients of their friends can arrange for this service.

Nurses' Residence

The hospitable charm of the Mary Ritchie Hall, the new residence for nurses welcomed the visitors, following inspection of the main building. Entering the ground floor the bright, airy lecture room equipped with indirect lighting planned by an engineer to give the correct amount of light for study was visited, as was the four-bed demonstration room where Miss Muriel Thompson, instructor of nurses, explained the use of the oxygen tent which was exhibited. The laboratory, offices, cloak rooms and laundry, all finished in cream shade with soft green tones in the floors as contrast. Everything for the comfort and convenience of the students has been introduced, even to a perfectly appointed kitchenette for a snack before bedtime. The bedrooms are fitted with smart maple furniture in colonial style. The library for study and the charming reception room were visited in turn, while the lounge room with its modern furniture, richly finished, its spaciousness enhanced by its glassed-in arrangement seemed an ideal centre for the girls in their leisure moments. Thirty-five students are accommodated in this building while the residence next the hospital has room for forty-two nurses. At present there are fifty-seven nurses attending the training school. In addition to the Misses Thompson, there is a staff of five instructors, while the graduate staff of the hospital includes about fifteen. A rock garden, flowers, green lawns overlooking the bay make ideal surroundings for the nurses in residence.

Throughout the afternoon the many visitors at the hospital were accomodated without confusion, every means being taken not to disturb the patients.

Tribute Paid Salvation Army As Building Fund Campaign Starts With a Banquet

Forty Representatives of Business Life in City Pledge Support to Worthy Cause

TO RAISE $3,000

If enthusiasm and optimism regarding the ultimate outcome of the forthcoming Salvation Army Campaign to raise three thousand dollars toward the erection of a new citadel here is any criterion, then the success of the fund is assured.

For last night at the committee pre-campaign banquet held in the Y.M.C.A. forty representatives of the business, industrial, professional, civic walks of city life pledged themselves unfeignedly to the support of the campaign that starts on Monday next. Speakers spoke in glowing terms of the work done by the Salvation Army, while a general note of optimism regarding the response of the general public to the appeal for funds was evident throughout the meeting.

Tribute to the splendid work done by the Army was paid by Mr. W. B. Deacon. "It is doing the work other churches don't seem to take care of," he said, "and is often called upon to do work the ordinary Christian organization is not called upon to do."

A Moral Obligation Claimed

"How can it do this work if we do not give it our moral and financial support? There is a moral obligation on the part of the community to support the Salvation Army to the fullest extent," Mr. Deacon said. "Go out and sell the Salvation Army. Hit the people between the eyes with the force of your appeal. You've the best thing of a religious nature in the world to sell."

Referring to the amount of unemployment in the city, Mr. Deacon told his listeners that next year "we should avail ourselves of the opportunity to construct some place where men who are down and out can get hot meals. We will always have transients," he said.

"The campaign is for a splendid cause," he concluded, "and you will find at its conclusion that Belleville has not been found wanting."

Confident of Success

Mr. Harry Ackerman said that in the past Belleville has given its fullest co-operation to similar campaigns and was confident that it would do the same again.

"It is not necessary to sell the work of the Salvation Army to Belleville," Mr. J. B. Boyce told the committee, "and I promise you that you will receive a warm reception wherever you go. Do the job thoroughly and there will be no question as to the outcome. No Christian organization on earth does the same amount of real Christian work as does this splendid organization."

Brief addresses eulogizing the work of the Army and pledging work and support were given by Messrs. Frank Correll, Alderman Harry Rollins, P. C. McGuire and Major S. Bilmore.

Included in the gathering were representatives of the Kinsmen, Kiwanis, Y's Men and Rotary service clubs of the city, the Army and Navy Veterans, Life Underwriters, the Eastern Star Lodge, city banks, Major H. S. Alderman and several members of the local corps of the Salvation Army.

Interest Quite High

In a brief address Major Benjamin Bourne proffered his sincere thanks to the co-operation shown him by all phases of city life since his arrival here to conduct the campaign. He expressed appreciation of the press and many other courtesies shown him here. "I came here as a stranger and you accepted me as a representative of our organization. I thank you sincerely, gentlemen," he said.

"Interest in the campaign is high," Major Bourne said, "that is exemplified in the fact that a lady came to us, thinking the campaign had already started and gave us, unsolicited, her cheque of $20."

He outlined the various duties to be undertaken by the captains of teams. He asked that they select their own subscription cards and thus facilitate matters for themselves. He urged that cards be given out and followed up "for we want to make the campaign a success as I assure you, gentlemen, we are extremely anxious that the new citadel be erected. He asked for a report on the campaign next Wednesday night and a complete report on Friday when the campaign closes. A tag day will be held on Saturday while the Salvation Army house-to-house canvass takes place later. The various phases of the campaign should be cleaned up and a full report submitted by the end of May, he said.

Build of Brick

In answer to a query, Major Bourne stated that while the plans of the new citadel are not as yet available the building will cost $15,000. "We have been bequeathed a large sum of money and accumulated interest has brought it to $13,000," he said.

The new building to be erected with red brick will be somewhat smaller than the present citadel and will include modern equipment for a Young People's room, senior rooms, band-room and kitchen.

Living quarters for the local corps commander have hitherto been situated in the citadel but it is hoped that in the near future this will be done away with and a private dwelling erected, Major Bourne said.

"It will be beneficial to the community to spend the money in the community now," he concluded, voicing his confidence in the gathering to make the campaign a success that all desire.

The Salvation Army Campaign office is located at 252 Front Street and can be reached by telephone by calling 1686.

Chairman Morley Duff of the general committee presided over the meeting which was featured with spirited community singing led by Harry Moorman with Alec Gordon at the piano.

Monday the dealers in modern electric ranges in Belleville will begin a campaign to demonstrate the usefulness, convenience and thrift of cooking with modern electric ranges. This campaign is sponsored by the Public Utilities Commission and will contain some very interesting features including a rebate of fifteen dollars on the cost of wiring where the home is not already wired for an electric range. Special financing will be arranged to make it easy to purchase an electric range on small regular payments, spread over a long period.

AS THE KING AND QUEEN COME

A history-making series of events will begin early next week when Their Majesties King George Sixth and Queen Elizabeth, the first reigning Sovereigns of the British Empire to step on Canadian soil or to land in the Americas, will disembark at Quebec. The tour has been stirring the Canadian people in anticipation of the coming of the King and Queen for their extended visit of the Dominion, during which Canadians will pay them tribute and homage worthy of the exalted office of the Sovereigns and of this Dominion.

Canada now occupies a high status as one of the free nations of the Empire in that the Sovereigns are by the Statute of Westminster the King and Queen of the Dominion as they are of the Motherland and other parts of the Empire.

The coming weeks will be a regal time for the Dominion and for the Sovereigns a royal progress from coast to coast and people of the United States who will have them on a four day visit as guests of the President of the Republic and Mrs. Roosevelt will fete the royal visitors in true American style.

The people of Canada will always remember their King and Queen who are so kind as to visit Canadians at home and Sovereigns and people will never forget these days when the rulers of the Empire are among their subjects in Canada in the New World.

STATISTICS OF PRISONS

While Ontario's population is approximated at 3,731,000 for the year ending March 31st., 1938, there had been sentenced to prison in that period 23,649 persons. The increase in the last year was marked, for the previous year the total of persons was 20,618. Back twenty-five years before, that is in 1913, the population at 2,767,000 had 11,987 sent to prison.

The latest prisons' report comments on the serious fact of "a huge increase in the number of prisoners in recent years," and says "this increase is out of all proportion to the increase in the total population of Ontario. A glance at the number of commitments in the various categories of crime shows that the increase has been in crimes against Order and Peace and against Property and comparatively little increase and against Public Morals and Decency."

The report goes on to show that "careful search for the causes of crime brings the conclusion that they have not materially changed through prolonged time and consist of the undesirable characteristics and weaknesses of human nature that have caused grief, sorrow and tragedy through the ages. Yet while they have not varied in kind they vary in volume and the number of persons involved. It is obvious from a perusal of the criminal statistics of crime in this province during the year that by far the greatest proportion of crime is still committed by those of below average intelligence, elementary education and perhaps as a result of these two preparations for life, unskilled or entirely without a trade or profession. In times of economic stress such persons, if already employed, are the first to get pushed out of work and find it almost impossible to find remunerative work again. They follow the line of least resistance and being what they are, lacking in intelligence and moral stamina gravitate to crime.

"The present high point of crime is therefore easily understood in view of the present world, national, family and individual conditions and the resultant economic conditions."

The report says "but even in present economic conditions the amount of crime could be very much reduced by better training of the youth of our land. Most of current crime is committed by adolescents and young men. It is true and gratifying that much is being done by many agencies but much more could be done."

The value of the home is stressed as the place above all others where youth has been properly trained or spoiled and it is now. If parents do not do this important work of properly training their children it probably will not be done. Yet one sympathizes with many parents of our present day. Distraught with the effort to find the necessaries of life such as proper shelter, food and clothing, for their family, it is not surprising that weary mentally and physically and discouraged they sometimes fail to properly influence their children.

The Deputy Provincial Secretary, C. F. Neelands, in presenting the report says that "generally speaking the youth of our land think and act straight, are willing to work and get ahead in life by their own efforts and will likely make a better job of living than generations preceding them. If we give them a chance at useful work they will successfully make their way."

An interesting comment is made by Mr. Neelands, showing how the unrest in the world has effected the prisoners as well as the people outside prison. He points out that there has been a material increase in the per diem daily maintenance cost per prisoner, for "the disturbed conditions outside the institutions were felt inside and to maintain order and discipline it was necessary to increase custodial staffs." One good sign is that "good discipline in general was maintained. If prisoners do not learn to respect law and order inside prison they are not likely to do so after discharge."

In spite of the large increase of the total of prisoners the percentage of repeaters dropped from 48.6% to 45.3% and the majority of repeaters are comparatively young men.

MOTHER

Mother's form is bent and weak
And her step is slow,
And the roses of her cheek
Faded long ago;
Now her hair, once brown and bright,
Gleams like silver shells,
But her eyes' deep tender light
Love's own story tells.

Though the tender, tireless hands
Show toil's deep impress,
Kindly yet their tender touch
Lingers in caress;
Though her form has lost the grace
Of the years ago,
In her calm and placid face
Faith and hope do show.

You who have a mother yet
Bent and bowed and gray,
Leave no cause for vain regret
When she's gone away;
Cherish her with all your heart,
Dry her falling tears—
Then how sweet the memories
That will linger through the years!

PARKING PROBLEM THREATENS TO BREAK OUT AGAIN. Parking problem is acute wherever automobiles gather in crowded communities and no satisfactory solution has been arrived at anywhere. One thing seems certain that Every time a change is made in the parking system trouble of one kind or another occurs.

Toronto is typical of parking problems in large cities, and no solution has been proposed yet satisfactory to all although the nickle-metre system holds promise.

Merchants watch any approach to parking regulation changes with suspicion and dread for it is very easy to discourage motor car trade especially by a ticket to report at police headquarters after enjoying an hour or so's shopping—kinda takes the enjoyment all out of it and starts the shopper humming "I won't come here anymore".

The City Council has certainly achieved wonders in providing parking space at the rear of stores and if the Council could go just a teeny bit farther and secure entrance and exits on Bridge street and up near the upper bridge, eliminating the necessity of using narrow lanes opening off Front street a decided advance would be made toward solving the Belleville parking problem.

There is no prospect of any proposed solution being satisfactory to all, but there is prospect that any further tinkering would make a worse muddle. That seems to be the opinion of merchants, who, while acknowledging that angle parking on both sides of Front street, coupled with occasional double parking, certainly makes navigation precarious in the limited space left in the middle of the street on Saturday.

The proposal mooted of fifteen minute parallel parking on Front street which is likely to come before the City Council on Monday evening, will likely meet with vigorous opposition from outside the Council.

NO POLICEMEN OR HOOSEGOW IN NAIRN CENTRE, a community in Northern Ontario so quiet that Harry Lindley, the comedian, who used to play there, said he could hear the bed tick. Our experience with ticks in Northern Ontario led us to remind Harry that there were other kinds of ticks which frequented beds in new towns near the bush, which have no wings at all, or noise, or what have you, but get there just the same—in a very unpleasant manner. Nairn Centre Community Fathers consider saving the salary of a policeman by dispensing with the services of such an official, but have they considered who will take up the sidewalks when the community goes to bed, and turn out the street lights if any. And don't forget that when the boys come off de bush and de ribber, Nairn Centre is going to need a whole mob of policemen.

Insuring Against A Hole-in-One

Have you ever made a hole-in-one? I don't mean in a doughnut but on the golf course.

If you haven't you doubtless yearn to enter what sportswriters call "the Hall of Fame by sinking the pill for an ace".

If you have succeeded you are not so anxious to repeat the achievement for making a hole-in-one can be an expensive feat.

According to tradition the hero is supposed to stand the professional a bottle of Scotch, he must do something for the caddies, his partners in the game must be looked after and he must dispense liquid largesse to club members. This comes higher than a round of "Igorotte" with some of the local sharks.

But as usual necessity provides a remedy. Golf has now become a streamlined game. The old days of nondescript clubs has gone. Matched sets are the rule. You are told that "the clubs do the work". All you have to do is judge distance, take the club numbered for that shot and let nature take its course. The game has reached such a pitch of scientific perfection with such a multiplicity of clubs that the powers that be have stepped in and limited the bag to fourteen.

And following this progress the victims of holes-in-one have hit on a happy scheme which saves them money and yet provides liquid joy. They now have hole-in-one insurance.

For a modest premium of 25 cents paid to the bar steward you can get protection. The amount of the pool varies with the number of subscribers but there is usually a sizeable pot.

If you make an "ace" you can stride into the clubhouse without any financial fears.

You cheerfully tell the steward of your accomplishment. "How much is there in the pool?" you say.

"Fifteen dollars," perhaps the steward replies.

"Shoot the works," you proudly command—and away she goes. All shareholders within call rally round and the accumulated fund is "blown in" while non-share-holders lick their lips enviously and stampede to get in on the next "pool" which is promptly "floated" in more ways than one.

Most of the Vancouver golf clubs now have this form of musual insurance — Ronald Kenvyn in Vancouver Province.

NOT PASTEURIZED

An English court has just awarded £195 18s 2d damages and costs against a dairyman whose customer had proceeded against him because he had contracted undulant fever through consuming milk from cows suffering from contagious abortion. The justice trying the case held to the base fact, and that fact was that the dairyman had agreed to furnish to his customer milk that was fit to drink, and he had not done so. The justice exonerated him from intentional wrongdoing in the matter, but he had no recourse but to find according to the fact.—Winnipeg Free Press.

Capital Close-ups of Week

By Ross Munro

Canadian Staff Writer

Ottawa, May 13—(CP)—A farm drama in four acts with Hon. James G. Gardiner in the lead role, supported by Hon. W. D. Euler, holds the political stage as parliament strives to drop the curtain on another session.

The vehicle of the agriculture and trade ministers for the government's big show in the House of Commons is being dubbed the "New Deal" for the Canadian farmer.

Although the critics disagree emphatically on its ultimate merits there is unanimity in the conclusion that it is the most ambitious farm program in this country's history.

The three Gardiner bills to assist co-operative marketing of wheat and other farm products and to provide an acreage bonus, together with the Euler Bill to pay an initial wheat price of 70 cents a bushel, will have influence on the whole Canadian economy.

Apparently concluding that agricultural assistance is here to stay, the government takes a long-range view and widens the application of much of its legislation to all Canada instead of just the west.

Launching this program created one of the most violent behind-the-scenes battles of the present parliament and wheat chaff literally blew through cabinet council and caucus meetings. The government's decision to yield to demands for a higher initial price than the 60 cents originally proposed and compromise with the 70-cent illustrates the tremendous pressure brought to bear.

Nearly a dozen western members have staked their political future on this legislation by outspoken utterances in the Commons both for and against the bills. The liberal bolt of five members on the Initial Price bill will have particular significance during an election campaign, even Mr. Gardiner, himself, who many observers feel will be Federal Liberal leader some day, may have a joust with public opinion on this question.

Journey's End

After four months' debate over the nation's problems, members of Parliament are becoming tired of political squabbles and anxious to get back to their homes. Hot weather and high humidity plays havoc with house attendance and it is likely the session will wind up without much delay, possibly by May 24. A session's end atmosphere of irritation and lazy good humor permeates debates.

Corridor Notes

The carillon in the Peace Tower is one of Ottawa's proud possessions but M. P.'s working in committees have not much use for carillonneur Percival Price and his bells when they are considering legislation. The electoral committee met in a room close by the tower and Mr. Price started his music at noon. The members became annoyed at the "noise", closed the windows and continued with only a tinkle accompanying their discussions....Ninety-nine different companies make up the Canadian National Railways system, says the annual report....several Senate offices are going to be renovated shortly in anticipation of the appointment of several new members to the Upper House. There seems to be some lack of adequate accommodation for one large room is to be divided to provide two offices...

William Fraser (Lib. Northumberland), chairman of the Public Accounts Committee, thinks his committee will submit a final report on its inquiry into the Gren gun contract before parliament is prorogued. A canny Scot, he put up 10 cents cash, when a bet was offered him that no final report would be tabled this session — the biggest pipes — the kind you smoke — on Parliament Hill are those of William Moore (Lib. Ontario). They're larger than one ever sees in Canadian stores and one package of tobacco is good for only two fillings. Mr. Moore imports three pipes from England each year....

Capital Personalities

Big, heavy Dave Spence (Con-Toronto-Parkdale) is one of parliament's few remaining rugged individualists and he looks to Herbert Hoover as his idea of a public man. Of the former United States President he says "I admire both his speeches and his principles". ...

Col. J. J. Duffus, popular Liberal member for Peterborough West, came back to the Commons this week after a serious illness and was given a great hand as he took his seat... Walter Tucker (Lib. Rosthern), the western reformer, is proving himself one of the ablest speakers among the younger Liberals. They say this Saskatchewan lawyer will go far in public life... When you talk about democratic-spirited cabinet ministers, take the case of Hon. T. A. Crerar, Minister of Mines and Resources. Several nights a week he walks the two blocks from Parliament Hill and climbs aboard a streetcar to take the trolley home...

Senator Duncan Marshall, who farmed in both Ontario and Alberta and was Agriculture Minister in both provinces during his career, was an almost daily spectator in the Commons gallery during the agriculture debate. Then he piloted the government wheat legislation through the Senate and ran into very little difficulty...Trade Minister Euler and Ross Macdonald (Lib. Brantford City) are the latest M. P.'s to become air-minded. Mr. Euler addressed a luncheon on Hamilton and flew back to Ottawa in time for the afternoon session of the House...

Royal Gossip

You can5t keep items about the Royal visit out of an Ottawa column these days for it's about all they talk about outside parliament ...The King will officially unveil the National War Memorial here but it will take 10 men to do the actual work of dropping the flags which will drape the monument.. Prime Minister Mackenzie King is having quite a time mastering all the various formalities he will have to perform during the tour. A special confidential booklet for his personal use has been prepared by his secretaries to guide him over the tough ceremonials....

Those travelling on the Royal train are wondering if sleep will be disturbed at night by the blazing flood lights which will be turned on the coaches as a safety precaution to assist police...Dr. H.L. Keenleyside, secretary of the Inter-departmental Committee in charge of the tour and regularly attached to External Affairs Department, is without a doubt the busiest man in Ottawa. But he takes it all with a slow smile. There is talk on Parliament Hill he will possibly be appointed Canadian Minister to Tokyo this summer....

The American Legation has had its white-stone facade scrubbed spotlessly clean for the visit. It is directly across Wellington Street from Parliament Hill where the trooping of the color will take place next Saturday morning. Many government officials and newsmen have been invited to the Legation to witness the ceremony from the windows. The new American Minister, Daniel C. Roper, will be there.

Pert, little Teresa Maloney, who knows most of the secrets of the state department but has amazing ability for a woman to keep them to herself, claims she has not had time "to be really excited" about the fact she will be the only Canadian woman on the Royal train... This charming, dark-haired girl is secretary to Dr. E. H. Coleman, Undersecretary of State, and will handle most of the official documents during the tour.

Kids Can't Take it Now

In a Northern Ontario town recently, a teacher was hailed before the trustees on a charge of making marks on a boy's legs with a pointer. Things are changing in the lickin' business at school.

A few decades ago when the teacher crooked his finger to the offending youngster, it meant a march double quick to the front and face the wallop. And how the school teachers of former days could hit!

And woe to the youngster who dared to 'draw back' when the strap was sizzling around in the ozone ready for business—such a trick always meant two extra cracks.

But the boys used to reduce the taking of a strapping to a science. With the coat sleeve pulled well down over the wrist, the hand would descend with the oncoming strap and the force of the blow would be broken. It was the piece de resistance of the year to take ten slaps and walk back to your seat with a grin lurking in your face that said, "Aw, you can't hurt me".—Guelph Mercury.

CHANGE OF NAME

The First German Presbyterian Church of Orange, N.J., has changed its name. "The word 'German' is not very popular with people here," explains its pastor. Hereafter it will be the William Street Presbyterian Church.

Somehow we're sorry. We're reminded of the unhappy days when patriotism seemed to demand that German measles should be called liberty measles, that German silver and German fried potatoes must have other names, that even sauerkraut must be liberty cabbage. It would be too bad to go through all that again.

For, despite what is being done by the temporary rulers of the German people, the word "German" does not deserve our hatred. It stands for the ancestral country of millions of fine and loyal Americans. It did stand within our memory for a peaceful, friendly nation, rightfully proud of great achievements in science and literature, music and art.. And some time it will again.—N.Y. World Telegram.

CRAZY DRIVERS

After examining 190 of 467 motorists brought into court for traffic law violations, the psychopathetic clinic of Detroit's Recorder's Court recently found 190 to be mental cases. These "crazy" drivers were, in reality, crazy in varying degrees. Seven were found insane and forty-six feeble minded. Ninety-seven were classed as mentally so unstable as to be dangerous behind the wheel, and alienists listed furty as on the verge of insanity.—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

BREN GUN STRONGER

Owing to the adoption by the army of the Bren light machine gun the banks at the Bisley ranges have had to be strengthened to stop bullets from going through. This was stated at the London general meeting of the National Rifle Association.—Manchester Guardian.

THAT BODY OF YOURS

By James W. Barton, M.D.

Large Meals May Cause Attacks of Angina Pectoris

A professor of medicine died a few months ago at the age of 80. When he was about 45 years of age he discovered that he had heart disease and would have to live a careful life if he was to live at all. Comparing himself to a bridge that had been able to carry ten ton but could not carry only five ton, he endeavoured to do his work at half his usual speed. The result was that he saved or prolonged his life by over 35 years.

Now, doing your work at half speed does not refer to physical work alone but to all the daily body processes and particularly to the eating and digesting of food.

Dr. G. Werley, El Paso, Texas, in Southwestern Medine in discussing angina—pain under the breast bone—and hardening of the bloodvessels carrying blood from the heart to all parts of the body and to the heart muscle itself, says that many cases are due to allergy—being sensitive to various substances—and, in some cases, this sensitiveness combined with nervousness. However, these attacks of angina may be a blessing in disguise in that they call attention to what would be a dangerous or fatal condition if the individual were to be careless about his daily life habits.

"The presence of angina is a signal of danger that if heeded and followed by correction, especially of bad eating habits, may actually prolong life and thus be advantageous."

I have spoken before of the man past seventy, all of whose brothers had died in their early fifties. When asked why he was so fortunate as to be alive at his advanced age, he replied, "Well, I always had a poor appetite."

Dr. Werley tells us that the chief cause of angina can be traced to what has gone down the gullet (throat).

Another warning is that overweight generally comes from eating too much and especially too much fat, along with which always goes cholesterol (a pearly substance found in fat)—the one important cause of hardening of the walls of the bloodvessels.

The thought then is that overeating puts extra work on the heart, just as does physical work, herefore, small meals may prevent these attacks of angina.

FISHERMAN'S LUCK

G. P. Boyd, of Kansas City, was cruising in his motorboat on the Lake of the Ozarks. His propeller struck a cruising smallmouth bass, (weight four and a half pounds), and stunned it. When the fish floated to the surface, Boyd reached out and picked it up. "Easiest catch I ever made", he said in recounting the incident.

No competition in the fishermen's luck sweepstakes seemed possible until Albert Shelhammer, of Allentown, Pa., told his story. He baited his hook, tossed it into a pond and dozed off while awaiting a nibble. A jerk on the line awakened him. A wild duck had swallowed his bait, and all Shelhammer had to do was to haul it in.

Correct technique and proper choice of fishing grounds, hooks, lines, rods and bait have a lot to do with fishermen's success. But don't forget Lady Luck.—St. Louis Post-Despatch.

SHORT SKIRT ERA

During the last short-skirt era, which began at about the end of the war, the prevalence of legs was such a novelty that it was years before I discovered that not all of them were beautiful and that the style which gave the graceful girl her opportunity to shine was singularly unkind to the majority of her less fortunate sisters.

Now that short skirts for street wear have come back again, I discover that I am immediately conscious of the shortcomings of the female form, I find, moreover, that grace and beauty suggested or half revealed, as in a well-draped skirt which touches or nearly touches the ground, please me infinitely more than grace and beauty blatantly displayed. Perhaps this is a sign of advancing age. But whatever it denotes, it is a fact.—Baltimore Sun.

A HEAVY JOB

News must be given to free people fully, honestly, accurately and fairly. The meaning of events is, however, not always apparent from the plain recital and it is the further duty of both news agencies and newspapers to provide the background of the news and to make clear its significance. Moreover, it must be printed so that the ordinary man is drawn to read and survey the explanations offered. That this is a stupendous undertaking needs no pointing out.—St. John Telegraph Journal.

GIBRALTAR'S GUNS

Someone said the other day that probably the guns supposed to have been placed on the Spanish and African coast, opposite Gibraltar have been registered on all British positions. It also is probable, however, that the exact positions of all such hostile guns has been registered by the big guns on the rock as well as the warships in the harbor.—Niagara Falls Review.

Mr. Picobac had been invited to referee a junior baseball game Saturday afternoon between the Young Essex Centres and the Young Sunny Ontarios.

"Don't you stir out of this house," commanded Mrs. Picobac, "until you have split me enough wood to do my Sunday baking."

"Whew!" whistled Mr. Picobac in dismay.

"Save your whistle," laughed Mrs. Picobac. "Whistle while you work."

"I've got a better idea than that," retorted Mr. Picobac. "There's no better comfort for a man condemned to the axe than tobacco, Burley tobacco! What I need is a mild . . . cool . . . sweet smoke. Where's my Picobac seal-tight pouch?"

"There on the window sill under your nose," replied Mrs. Picobac.

"It DOES taste good in a pipe!"

Advice to the Lovelorn

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

Famous Authority on Problems of Love and Marriage.

Writing to People You Don't Know

Dear Miss Fairfax:—

I've never seen him or met him. He lives in another city, but we've been corresponding for some time, and now I want to stop writing and don't know how to drop him gracefully. You see I don't want to tell any fibs or hurt his feelings, but for reasons of my own I want to stop.

I have his picture and he has mine. I hate to return his snapshot and ask for mine, because it has been such a short while since we exchanged pictures. Still, I want mine back. Now this boy is planning to come to see me in about two weeks, and I want to prevent that. We started writing last summer through my cousin's boy friend.

R. H.

With a picked-up correspondence such as you describe, no heavy barrage of etiquette is necessary. Just write a polite note and say it's not convenient for you to have him visit you at the present time, asking for your photograph at the same time. You don't tell me why you want to drop him, but I suppose your reason may be identical with that of other girls who write me along the same lines.

You've met a boy you're taking seriously, and you don't want him to know you've been indulging in a haphazard correspondence and exchanging photographs with a boy you don't know.

Single Man a Free Lance

Dear Miss Fairfax

Before I tell you my story, please let me say that I'm not engaged to anyone. However, I did have a certain lady in mind. She's the right age, about 40, knows how to keep house, and my kids like her. But we had no understanding, though I often took her to the movies and drove her out in my car.

The other night I came down in the elevator of the office building where I work, with one of the telephone operators. I have just a business acquaintance with this girl. I invited her into the drugstore to have a glass of soda. The older lady saw us, and if I'd been married to her, she couldn't have raised more dust. She wrote me a scorching letter, and told me she had no use for skirt-chasers.

Do you see any reason for her getting so mad over this?

Puzzled

To my way of thinking you're very fortunate to have experienced one of the older lady's tantrums before your friendship with her went any farther. Think of the war dances you'd have to witness if you married anyone as jealous as that. And please let me say here and now, that any widower, bachelor or other unattached male is at liberty to drink soda water with anyone he pleases. If he's married, it's up to his wife.

Beware of Jealousy

Dear Miss Fairfax:

My fiance told me he was very tired and thought he'd go home and go to bed early. I discovered, however, that he went to a game with one of his men friends, so I discussed this with a third party and doubted his fidelity. He heard about it and naturally was angry. There were no girls at the game, and really nothing to be jealous about.

Some months before this we had a row and broke up through jealousy on my part, but we came together again and have been very happy until I have one of my jealous fits. I want to overcome this fault drive out the green-eyed monster, but it's terribly hard, when you love someone, as much as I love my fiance, to endure even momentary doubt about him.

Green-Eyes

Several letters along the same line have come in this morning's mail. And each girl, a victim of the green-eyed monster, knows how wrong and silly she is to entertain doubts which are likely to wreck her happiness. Still they persist in scenes, accusations, and general trouble-making.

There's an old copybook maxim to the effect that the knowledge of a fault is the first step toward curing it. Lots of wisdom in that old saw. The girls.

GOOD MANNERS

MRS. CORNELIUS BEECKMAN

Good Times Without Smoking or Drinking

I have just opened a letter which makes me reach for my strongest, most vehement words. It asks a question that seems to be a matter of concern to a great many people. And when we analyze the point of view behind the question we realize that all that remains is a completely unnecessary self-consciousness.

Here is the question:

"Is it necessary to drink a cocktail or highball just to be sociable? I do not like liquor, and I never go to dances or to any place where I think it is necessary to drink and smoke. Don't you think I'm right about this?"

Now I think you're completery wrong about this. Let's look at this question together, directly and sensibly. Let's look at it from today's point of view about drinking and smoking and from the point of view of regulating our own, not other lives about these questions.

No one need drink or smoke at any time or in any place unless he or she wants to. There are the ones who do and the ones who don't, and under ordinary circumstances there is no reason why they shouldn't have a good time together at parties. I say under 'ordinary circumsances' because the people who drink heavily are, of course, social menaces to decent society. You are not talking about these pests, I observe for you say "drink a cocktail or a highball."

I am no Carrie Nation, but I do know from observation, that any number of men and women have stopped drinking altogether. But that doesn't keep them from going to any kind of party, and we see them drinking tomato-juice, orange juice, grape-juice, ginger ale, plain or charged water. They enjoy themselves thoroughly, because they are doing what they choose to do. If they don't want to smoke, they are just as casual about not smoking. They are not wet blankets at a party nor do they assume a self-righteous pose. If they are offered a drink or a cigarette they are casual and pleasant with their "no thank you". This usually suffices. If no other polite excuse works, we can always depend on that ever-popular 'My diet doesn't permit it.' But no pious 'I never touch it!"

However, if it is your sincere conviction that no one should drink or smoke, and it is makes you unhappy to go to parties where you are reasonbaly sure that the guests will do so choose between not going or going and resolving while there to feature good manners rather than convictions. In any case one should not have the slightest self-consciousness about the matter.

"That is the point . . don't be self conscious for invariably self-consciousness means self-absorption. Usually you will find that you are the only one who cares much what you "do" or "don't."

It will make you or your friends happier, if you cultivate tolerance . . . it's a pleasing quality. Cling to your own convictions, but don't parade them when it is not appropriate. Learn to say a pleasant "no thank you", rather than a self-righteous refusal.

Don't deprive yourself of parties, if you like to go to parties. Sitting in judgment isn't fun . . . . "sitting pretty" in popularity is fun!

Courtesy Tip

Under most circumstances, a woman precedes a man. But a man precedes a woman when, in his judgment, he can by so doing protect her or save her trouble.

Logan Pearsall Smith has written one of the most enchanting of the year's books of reminiscence in "Unforgotten Years". Born in New Jersey of a wealthy Quaker family the author was taken to England as a child and fell under the spell of the land and its people. After college, he went to Oxford for further study, later establishing a home in the south of England where he had resided for over thirty years. A would-be recluse, he yet reveals himself a being of delightful social gifts with an outlook on life at once fastidious and mellow. Pervading the pages are anecdotes of his friends among whom were William and Henry James, Edith Wharton, Santayana, Walt Whitman, Matthew Arnold and others. He admittedly prefers the company of people who look on life rather than take an active part in its business and affairs; who have plenty of leisure and no axe to grind, which is pleasant; who don't preach at him, which is more pleasant; and who, if they read at all, read mostly old-fashioned books of the kind he likes. All of which, he concludes, makes him an old fogey, after all—an erroneous conclusion as the reader will realize before he has fairly begun this book.

In "The Rise of Anglo-American Friendship", Lionel M. Gelber, a Canadian writer, expresses the opinion that the achievement of an Anglo-American understanding takes first rank among the decisive events of modern history. In this book, he traces the development of the rapprochement during its formative years, 1898-1906, dealing with such subjects as the Spanish-American conflict, the second Anglo-Japanese Alliance, and the part played by both countries during the first Moroccan crisis and the Algeciras Conference. The material is derived from state documents and diplomatic memoirs and is presented in lucid literary style.

F. R. Scott's "Canada Today" is undoubtedly the most important study of this country's problems and relations to the Commonwealth and the world to be issued in the last two years. Originally delivered as a paper before the British Commonwealth Relations Conference last year it has now been published under the auspices of the Canadian Institute of International Affairs, which should be recommendation enough. For a brief but incisive analysis of Canadian affairs this book is unsurpassed. Readers interested in getting a detached perspective upon their own country will find "Canada Today" most stimulating.

Wickham Steed, former editor of the London Times, in a recent Penguin Special "The Press" makes a none too flattering survey of British newspapers. He sketches the history of the press, the mechanics of newspaper production, makes an impassioned plea for the freedom of the press as the bedrock of all political liberties and is sharply critical of those tendencies which deviate from that ideal. This is a book that should be read by every newspaper reader, for while it deals principally with the press of England, what Mr. Steed has to say is in large part applicable to the publications of other countries. Anyone acquainted with the author's writings need not be told that he writes exceptionally well; this particular column is studded with some of the most quotable paragraphs to appear in any book in some time.—Contributed.

St. Paul's Y. P. U. Closes for Summer

Stirling — Departing somewhat from the regular weekly program, St. Paul's Y. P. U. held their final meeting before the summer recess in the Church parlors on Monday evening. The first part of the evening was set aside for an interesting recreation period under the direction of Miss Dorothy Eggleton and a solemn devotional period climaxed the final meeting of the season.

Games and Contests Enjoyed

Contests and games held under the guidance of the recreation committee included contests with various groups competing for highest honours, Group songs, a short hand puzzle, a Telegraph puzzle, and the main feature of this part of the meeting was a debate that was both interesting and humorous Resolved That the Calendar should have Thirteen Months Instead of Twelve. Miss Jean Munro and George Duffin ably defended the question while Don Scott and Miss Margaret Atkinson supported the negative side. Rev. W. J. Scott, Don Williams and Miss Lillian Clarke acted as judges and had a difficult task selecting the winners in view of the large number of worthy points advanced by both teams. The final game of the evening was a "Story Telling Contest". The young ladies of the organization then served lunch which consisted of hot dogs, cake and coffee.

Devotional Closing Exercises

After luncheon the meeting was called to order by President Don Williams and continued with the soft music of the theme song, hymn 385 and prayer by the President. Mr. George Duffin read the scripture lesson from the 1st Psalm. The secretary's report was presented by Miss Murray.

At this time each of the group leaders and officers of the Union briefly expressed their appreciation of the splendid co-operation they had received during the first half of the year. It was disclosed that Belleville Presbytery Young People's Unions had contributed some $3,000.00 to the Church funds and St. Pauls Y. P. U. was among the most active in the Presbytery. Miss M. Atkinson sang the Consecration hymn as a solo and the topic for the evening was given by the President based on the subject "Christ and our Holidays" taken from the "Pathfinder". As a fitting climax to the season's work the group then gathered in a large circle and were addressed by Rev. W. J. Scott who urged them to keep alive the interest displayed throughout the season as they enjoyed the summer months of leisure. Softly to piano accompaniment all joined in the rendition of a spiritual and the meeting closed with the Benediction.

St. Paul's W. M. S.

The regular meeting of St. Paul's Women's Missionary Society was held on Tuesday afternoon in the Church parlours, Mrs. R. A. Patterson, President, conducted the opening exercises and business part of the meeting which began with the use of hymn 500 and the Lord's Prayer in unison. During the business part of the meeting the minutes of the last meeting were read and the roll call responded to. This was followed by detailed reports of the various department secretaries. The remaining portion of the service was directed by Mrs. J. B. Thompson, convener of the program committee. After the singing of hymn No. 374 Mrs. D. Heath led in prayer and the scripture lesson was read by Mrs. H. Donnan. Helpful comments on the scripture lesson were presented in a brief address by Mrs. J. B. Thompson. In keeping with the Mother's Day celebration to be held next Sunday Mrs. Will Drewry offered an appropriate reading "Mother's Day". Miss Jennie Clements gave the topic of the day based on a chapter from the Study Book, "The World in Canada". Miss Mae Currie sang a solo the words of which had been composed by Mr. George Allan Kingston, especially for the forthcoming visit of the King and Queen. This interesting meeting closed with the singing of the National Anthem and prayer by Mrs. J. B. Thompson.

MOTHER'S DAY

Seventeenth Annual Letter On Mother's Day By W. H. Mabee

"I love old mothers—mothers with white hair and kindly eyes, and lips grown soft and sweet with murmured blessings over sleeping babes. There is something in their quiet grace that speaks the calm of Sabbath afternoons; a knowledge in their deep, unfaltering eyes that far outreaches all philosophy.

"Time with caressing touch about them weaves the silver threaded fairy-shawl of age, while all the echoes of forgotten songs seem joined to lend sweetness to their speech.

"Old mothers as they pass with slow-timed step, their trembling hands cling gently to youth's strength. Sweet mothers! as they pass, one sees again old garden-walks, old roses, and old loves."

—CHARLES S. ROSS.

What is woman's dominating impulse, her supreme motive, her consuming passion And I say without fear of contradiction, that she bears children of her own, or mothers another's, or mothers a community or a state, or a reform, or the world, the dominating impulse of womanhood is the mother impulse, her motive is the mother motive, her passion is the mother passion. Always it is the impulse, the passion of motherhood — that her sons and daughters, the sons and daughters of the race, shall be clean, well-bodied, of unspoiled soul and worthy.

Women compose music, but they are not musicians, they paint pictures, but they are not artists; they find new stars, but they are not astronomers; they chart the rocks, but they are not geologists; they heal the sick, but they are not physicians; they superintend the schools of great cities, but they are not educators; they enter with success well-nigh every department of human endeavor, but they are not administrators; they glorify the pulpit, but they are not preachers; they exert a healthy influence on politics, but they are not politicians; they contribute toward the solution of problems among nations, but they are not statesmen; they enter constructively every field of reform, but they are not reformers. Always they are the mothers of men.

Only One Mother.

I like the words of that well-known writer, Kate Douglas Wiggin, as she speaks of mother, "most of all the other beautiful things in life came by twos and threes, by dozens and hundreds, plenty of roses, stars, sunsets, rainbows, brothers and sisters, aunts and uncles, but only one mother in the whole world."

Who is my mother? Today the mother thought prevails in almost every heart. Everywhere someone is remembering a mother, somewhere here, or beyond. Loving letters are written, maybe the first in months, even years; memories creep round the heart and insist upon recognition.

How many broken-hearted mothers have we today caused by the neglect of her own children, her own flesh and blood. Neglected, unsaved for after a life of toil and hardship was given to them.

To you who have mothers living, good mothers, godly mothers, oh I would beg of you to follow their example in life in noble living that you might be worthy of the dearest friend—your mother.

No one can fully estimate the worth of a godly mother's prayer. They serve as an anchor that holds firm in the storms of life.

We have a beautiful picture of the power there is in a mother's influence guided by her vision of God's best.

Result of a Mother's Prayers.

An obscure but a pious woman was living in the south of England. Very little was known of her personal history, except that she had one son. She made it her business to see that he, in his infancy, was made to see the value of living for God. Mother died. The boy went to sea, and finally was so steeped in vice as to be the deepest in sin of his fellows. He tried to shake it off but the influence of a dead mother's prayers and convictions finally led the boy to surrender to God, and yield his life for the ministry. The life of John Newton, that boy, became a great man, his name is well known throughout the civilised world. He was known for his hymns and his writings have done a great deal to life humanity to a higher and a more spiritual plane, but that mother's influence did not stop there.

Through the ministry of John Newton, Clandius Buchanan, who became a minister of the gospel and a missionary to the East Indies, was converted. His work "The Star in the West" was the first thing that influenced Dr. Jackson in his missionary work in Burma.

One little woman had a vision of things eternal, as a result countless souls at home and abroad have been made to see the light and rejoice.

There are thousands of unknown mothers whose names are worthy to be enshrined in the golden book of memory. They taught the children the ideals and the worthwhile things of life until they grew up and took a prominent place in the world of science, arts, and politics, and to become noble examples of a wise mother's care and training. Herein is a tribute to mother which I found in a journal and which I think is worthy of a place in this letter.

"I love you not for what you are, but for what I am when I am with you. I love you not only for what you have made of yourself but for what you are making of me. I love you for that part of me that you bring out. I love you for putting your hand into my heaped-up heart, and passing over all the foolish and frivolous, and weak things which you cannot help seeing there, and drawing forth out in the light all the beautiful radiant longings that no one else had looked quite far enough to find.

"I love you for ignoring the possibilities of the fool and weakling in me, and for laying firm hold on the possibilities of good in me. I love you for closing your ears to the discords in me, and for adding to the music in me by worshipful listening.

"I love you because you are helping me to make out of the lumber of my life, not a tavern, but a temple, and of the words of my everyday life, not a reproach but a song. I love you because you have done what no one else did to make me happy. You have done it by just being yourself. Perhaps that is what being a mother means after all."

No statue can be raised to mother as enduring and as inspiring as the child each mother rears herself. No writer can enclose between the backs of any book, all the wisdom of a mother's teaching. No poet can capture all the joys and sorrows of a mother's heart. No painter has the power to transmit to canvas the beauty of a mother's face that glows in the memory of her dear ones. Even the sculptor's hand cannot endure his cold marble with the warmth of a mother's love. No; only a special day set apart for us, sons and daughters of mothers living and mothers dead, is a fitting memorial to mother.

Love must be deserved if a mother would be sure that her motherhood will not some day turn to sorrow in her heart. There is a bright side and a dark side to this great subject of motherhood. May the day soon come when all mothers will be God-fearing noblewomen, honored by their children and by everybody.

God gives every mother the opportunity to shape a human soul, God give them power to lift up manhood and womanhood to a higher plane of life and may all good mothers endeavor to leave an imprint of their lives on the hearts of the oncoming generations.

The King's Grandfather Royally Welcomed—1860

On a rainy morning, in July, 1860, H.R.H. Albert Edward, first Prince of Wales to visit Canada, landed at Halifax from H.M.S. "Hero". After an address of welcome he rode on horseback to Government House where Lord Mulgrave tendered a great reception. The three days following were filled with fêtes, reviews, inspections and "rustic sports". Newspapers even suspended publication so that business would not interfere with public rejoicing. At a grand ball, attended by 3,000 guests, the young Prince was voted "a capital waltzer".

The tremendous enthusiasm which greeted him at Halifax set the keynote of a tour which was a triumph of loyalty and devotion on the part of British North America.

Fourteen years before this memorable occasion the Canada Life had already issued its first policy. Through the ups and downs, the wars and depressions of ninety-two years the Canada Life has met its obligations promptly and in full. One of the greatest of co-operative organizations, its policyholders now have well over $800,000,000 of insurance with this Company.

MISS NAPOLEON

By Violet M. Methley

"I meant it, every single word—only a thousand, a million times more!"

"Chrissie....Chrissie," he whispered her name again. "You really love me still like that.....in spite of all—everything?"

"I love you....like that; as I shall always love you—as I've always wanted to tell you that I love you—only somehow I couldn't."

"And I've wanted to tell you, too ....only I didn't feel fit, I was ashamed, after what had happened," after what might have happened," Struan corrected himself, went on low and gently: "Because ....it's always been—you've always been there, really, though perhaps you'll find it hard to believe—you've always been at the very bottom of my heart. The other.... it was a kind of obsession, a fascination too strong for me. I seemed to forget everything."

"It's over now," Chrissie whispered.

"Yes. It is over now.... But I've got to be honest, Chrissie; I don't deserve any credit for that."

"Ranny...." The words seemed to have come as a reminder to Chrissie. "There's something that I deserve no credit for....all that I said just now—about loving you.."

"Chrissie, you don't withdraw what you said? You mean it....?"

"Yes, yes—oh, darling—darling, don't mistake me! It's only ...... they weren't my words, Ranny. I could never have said anything so ....so beautiful myself. They were ....just given to me, when I needed them, by.... by the woman who wrote them — Elizabeth Barrett Browning.... I only made the music—because they were all — everything that I've always wanted to tell you."

"I see.... Struan stood up; he sat down beside Chrissie on the music-stool, drew her closely into his arms, kissed her hair, gently, lingeringly.

For some time they sat in silence, whilst the velvet darkness of night closed in on them from without, invading the shadowed room.

CHAPTER XVIII

Wilson Hall Returns

"Do you mean to say that it is only nine weeks since I left Pathapore?" Wilson Hall raised incredulous eyebrows. I feel exactly as Rip van Winkle must, en revenant—back in a changed world."

"And yourself unchanged?" Chrissie glanced up from her low chair beside him.

"Myself unchanged, I'm sorry to say."

"By why? Do you want to be different, then? Because I'm sure that all of us would much rather you stayed the same old self," Chrissie spoke with half-laughing earnestness.

"That is very charming of you. But can you wonder that I'd like to be transformed with the rest, when the changes are all so obviously for the better? Are you, for instance, going to deny that you are much happier than you were? Of course not—and if you did, your face would give you away."

"I feel so," Chrissie answered him honestly, the dancing golden light in her eyes like sun-flecked water. I'm happier than I've ever been in my life before."

"That is what I mean. And so is Struan; one can see that at once."

"Yes, I believe he is, and that's what makes mine. I mean, I couldn't be happy if he wasn't. But he does look quite different, doesn't he?" Chrissie's eyes turned towards the tall figure, superintending the operations of some natives in the compound.

"A new man, as I said before," Hall answered emphatically, and added with a carefully controlled evenness of tone: "And how is Miss Valence?"

There was a pause before Chrissie answered quietly.

"We've seen very little of her."

"But we've heard enough!" Young Jones, from his long chair ejaculated. "Seems to me, she's one of those people who make trouble wherever they go. Anyway, it is said that she's helping his Highness to stir it up. If he was a thorn in the Government's side before, he's a whole nest of scorpions now."

"Your metaphors are nearly as mixed as your grammar, Tim, and that's saying a lot," Struan's voice joined in rather unexpectedly. He had approached the group on the veranda unheard in his rubber-soled shoes, and now leaned on back of Chrissie's chair, his manner so unruffled that Hall wondered whether he had realized who was the topic of their conversation.

His whole look was serene as he smiled a welcome at Hall and nodded towards Jones.

"Have you heard the news about Tim? He's engaged to a niece of Mrs. Merryn's, who arrived out here at Christmastime. But he still comes here quite a lot—to tell us about her."

"Congratulations!"

Tim Jones grinned and coloured boyishly, glancing shyly at Chrissie.

"Thanks. Yes, I've been jolly lucky," he said. "Mrs. Struan thinks so too."

"I do indeed. I daresay Jean will be able to make something of you."

"Anyhow, she's willing to try," young Jones grinned back. "Being a bold young person, I'll bring her along this evening to be introduced, Mr. Hall."

Scenting the danger of setting Jones talking about his beloved, Struan skilfully and quickly switched the conversation back to the maharajah.

"Personally, I don't think Zindia requires much incitement to remain a firebrand," he said. "He's the super-civilized type of ruler. They always spell possible trouble; see themselves as potential great Moguls."

"Well, anyhow, it's only during the last six months that he's set about definitely increasing his Army," young Jones persisted doggedly. "I hear a good deal about affairs at Khotalghar from my pal, Bob Vyner, you know; he acts as sort of military expert to the Maharajah; or did—"

"What do you mean by that?" Struan looked up rather sharply.

"Why, he tells me they want to get rid of him at Khotalghar, they've applied to the Government for his removal—and he's convinced that Her Ladyship, the governess, is at the back of it. He questioned one or two things, you see, especially these aeroplanes the Maharajah is ordering."

"What's that?" This time there was no doubt regarding Struan's frown, and quick, anxious glance.

"Why, he's placed an order with a big French firm for six aeroplanes of the latest design," Tim Jones told them. "There isn't the slightest question about it. Vyner saw the order, and noticed that the whole correspondence showed a pretty thorough acquaintance with aeroplane construction, too. And, as I said, he entered a mild protest, let 'em know he couldn't quite understand why Khotalghar should need an Air Force. Hence this desire for his removal."

"Yes, he was quite right to object," Struan frowned, biting his lips. "It's wholly unnecessary although probably more a matter of swank than anything—trying to make a bigger show than the Nizam or the Gaekwar."

"P'raps—but I still think it's Mademoiselle who's at the bottom of it," young Jones maintained, and this time Struan did not dispute the point, only shook his head and shrugged his shoulders doubtfully.

End of the Old Life

"I suppose it's because she's an American, a Republican," Chrissie said rather perplexedly, and added hastily: "But so are you, Mr. Hall, and no one could be less inclined to stir up trouble."

"Well, I hope so," Hall laughed. "But then I'm a peace-loving sort of individual—perhaps too cosmopolitan to have very definite political views. If one lives half one's time extremely comfortably and profitably under a constitutional monarchy, it is apt to blunt the fine edge of one's Republicanism, I'm afraid. Still—if you think a warning from a compatriot, in a manner of speaking would do any good where Miss Valence is concerned, I'm willing to try—though I'm honestly rather doubtful of its value, or even of its wisdom."

"So am I," Struan shook his head. But haven't we booked a court for a game with you and your girl at five o'clock, Tim? If so, we shall have to be making a move."

"Yes; I'll change at once," Chrissie said. "What about you, Mr. Hall—are you coming down to the Club?"

"Too lazy," Hall smiled up at her. "I think I'll stay here if you don't mind. I was travelling all last night."

"Of course. Do exactly what you like; I hope you feel at home enough for that," Chrissie returned his smile.

Struan and young Jones strolled off; Hall was left alone to lie back in his chair, hands behind his head, and gaze away beyond the apricot tree which shaded the well, beyond the compound paling and across the plain, with its scanty tamarisk fringes towards the horizon above which the sun hung suspended in mid air like a great reddish-orange air balloon.

A plaintive droning little tune came from a distance, the song of some native herd-boy, driving his flock of sheep or goats homeward. Against the back-ground of the crooning of doves it seemed only to add to the sense of peace, of almost monotonous sameness.

This was India, as India had been for centuries, under her succession of conquerors, as she might surely be for centuries more; closing his eyes, Hall could almost see the land personified, a voluptuous-limbed, dusky-skinned woman, stretched out, languid, in the blaze which beat down from the white-heated sky in this last week of July, hottest days of the hottest season of the year.

Tired British soldiers sitting on their iron bedsteads in stove-like bungalows, gasped and perspired and cursed the metallic unceasing reiteration of the brain-fever bird.

No escape except along the bare dusty roads which led to another cantonment. Lahore — Umballa—Julhundur—Meerut —Bareilly —Dehra Dun.... every Indian military station in the plains was alike, except, perhaps, for an added degree of heat.

Anyway in the mountain ranges, which form the foothills of Himalaya, more British troops followed the yearly routine of centuries.

Hall could visualize it all from experience, the balls, the picnics, the theatricals, club-gossip, coteries and castes.

The unchanging East — surely there was age-old reason for the phrase? There might be unrest on the Frontier, trouble among officials in high places. There might be rumours, scares—external or internal—that Agadir business, for instance. But nothing to interfere with plans for leave in Kashmir or at home, or with scheduled sailings from Tilbury or Bombay.

And yet, just a month before that day when Wilson Hall dreamed his dream of an unchanging India, on a certain sultry 28th of June, two shots rang out in that insignificant Balkan town and changed a world.

Not once only, to a watching prophet, had the appearance of a cloud no bigger than a man's hand foretold a mighty tempest.

To Chrissie Struan that cloud will always take the shape of a fluffy violet scent of bath-salts.

She had been dressing for dinner in the luxuriously leisurely fashion appropriate to a new frock just out from England. She had decided that it was becoming, with a comfortable certainty that Ranny would find it so, and was just collecting books, writing-pad and fountain-pen, preparatory to waiting for her men-folk on the veranda, when sudden loud voices outside made her pause, listening.

Chrissie opened the door to find Struan and behind him young Jones, both their faces oddly flushed, oddly excited.

"Whatever is the matter? What's happened?" she asked, and Struan answered with one word:

"War!"

Britain Protests Over Bombing

Protest on Humanitarian Grounds and on Danger to Lives of Britishers

Tokyo, May 13 (CP)—Sir Robert Craigie, the British Ambassador, delivered a protest to Foreign Minister Hachiro Arita against last week's bombings of Chungking, declaring the air raids were so conducted as to endanger the lives of British residents.

He protested also on what were termed humanitarian grounds (Chinese have said about 1,500 persons were killed in the raids.)

Sir Robert is understood to have told Arita that four bombs hit the consulate-general's compound where the envoy to China, Sir Archibald Kerr, was staying.

The attacks endangered the lives of the entire British diplomatic mission and the consulate's staff, Sir Robert was reported to have said.

"My Back is Killing Me"
It is said that more people suffer from backache than from any other pains or aches. When the back aches the cause is usually traced to poisons in the blood as the result of defective kidney action. Relief can be obtained by the use of Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills because they help to arouse the activity of the kidneys in their work of filtering poisons from the blood.
The combined action of Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills on the liver, kidneys and bowels is a feature which makes this medicine so unique and entirely different to other kidney medicines. It is well to keep this in mind when selecting treatment, for naturally this feature accounts for the long success of this medicine.

KI-Y LEAGUE

Runs were most productive in the three Ki-Y softball games played last evening when a total of 133 runs were scored during the three games.

In the lone juvenile game played the East End club chalked up their second consecutive win to out-slug the Orioles and win by a 29 to 25 score at the Queen Alexandra School grounds. Max Vechter was the umpire.

At the Queen Mary School grounds, however, the scoring was not as prolific although the Flying Arrows won handily over the Score Getters by a 12 to 1 count with Bill Wright doing the umpiring.

A total of 66 runs were scored at Queen Victoria school grounds when the St. Mikes "Irish" trounced the East End nine 40 to 26, Jerry Bonisteel being the umpire. The latter two games were in the midget series.

Secretary George Mills is still seeking qualified umpires for the Ki-Y softball games, applications will be accepted at the "Y".

Babe Ruth, once baseball's king of swat, glances behind a pair of whiskers and who should he find there but Gene Tunney, ex-king of swat in another realm of sport. The horse-play all took place at New York's Madison Square Garden, where a team known as the "Believe it or Nots", managed by Bob Ripley, played a team known as the "Nine Old Men", managed by Lowell Thomas, all for sweet charity. The Bam played for the first team and Gene the other, and the game was mercifully called in the third inning with one of the teams leading, 7-3.

Wrestling Fans Quite Happy As Two Mat Villains, Dunlop And Conkle Soundly Beaten

George Richards Gave the Badman Good Going Over in Final Fall

BRIGGAR CLEVER

Slavick and Kimisky Put on Scientific Match in First Carded Bout

Belleville wrestling fans chortled with glee at Hume arena last evening when they saw two of their hated mat villains soundly trounced when Al Dunlop, the Cleveland badman, and Joe Conkle, the former Red Devil were both defeated on the same card.

Dunlop left victim to a fistic beating at the hands of George Richards the Jewish titleholder, in the main bout, much to the delight of the patrons, while Conkle was recipient of a much worse going over at the hands of Norm Briggar, a newcomer to Belleville wrestling circles and hailing from Buffalo. In the opening bout of the card Eddie Kimiski, of Windsor and Frank Slavick, the Detroit Polish lad wrestled to a 30 minute draw in one of the best exhibitions of speed, agility and wrestling seen locally in years. In all the three bouts, were of an exceptionally fine calibre despite the smallness of a 300 attendance crowd.

The fans howled with glee, when Referee Cliff Faux slapped Richards on the back as winner over Dunlop in the main bout, Richards winning the first fall as he out-roughed Dunlop and floored him with a series of elbow smashes to win in a little less than 15 minutes. Dunlop returned to the ring with adhesive tape wound around his wrist and applying this foreign substance to Richards' eyes partially blinded the Jewish lad to win the second fall in seven minutes, despite the futile efforts of Referee Faux to remove the tape.

Victim of Own Tape

When both Richards and Faux ganged Dunlop in the last round and forcefully removed the tape, however, Richards then gave the Cleveland badman a dose of his own medicine, plus a fistic attack that heard the crowd howl with glee and Dunlop trying in vain to figure out ways and means to keep from being pinned to the mat, which is the object of the game. It was no use, however, as Richards softened his opponent aplenty and then picked him up to slam Dunlop to the mat with a vengeance and win with a press, as the patrons of the grappling business clammered about the ringside congratulating the Jewish lad in accomplishing what the fans have been asking for years—the defeat of the ferocious Dunlop, who was willing to say 'uncle' when Richards doubled his fists and went to work in that Louis manner of swinging punches.

From a ringside viewpoint the opening bout, that saw Slavick and Kimiski wrestle to a 30 minute draw, actually stole the show, these lads giving a splendid exhibition of speed, science, agility intermingled with many punishing holds, that brought rounds of applause. This bout well bears repeating and would attract a future following.

Normally a rough and none-to-careful gent in the ring, Joe Conkle, formerly known as the Red Devil, met more than his match in Norm Briggar of Buffalo a fast lithe grappler, who was more than a match for the formerly hooded gent. Briggar proved to be a pocket edition of Joe Louis and literally punched Conkle into submission for the final and winning fall in a best in three.

Briggar Won Final Fall

Briggar won the initial fall with the appliance of a neatly placed drop kick and press, while Conkle made more faces and grunted louder to eventually win the second fall with a back-breaker and press. Once Briggar moved into action it did not take him long to destroy Conkle's faith in human nature, as the former self-styled villian (Conkle) finished reeling about the ring, as did Dunlop in the main bout, both being well beaten and sending the patrons of the grunt and groan business home for a peaceful night's slumber, knowing full well they would not be disturbed in their sleep by the ghosts of the villains of past ring battles—Dunlop and Conkle. Everybody seemed happy about the whole thing except the aforetomentioned two villains.

The bouts were capably handled by Referee Cliff Faux of this city.

SYRACUSE CHIEFS HAVE A CHANCE TO WIN PENNANT

(By The Associated Press)

You know the old saying, "a long threatening comes at last." Well, if it holds true in baseball, this might be the year for Syracuse Chiefs to win the International League pennant.

Not since 1897 has the championship flag floated over the Syracuse Stadium, and if that doesn't make the Chiefs about due, there isn't any B in baseball.

The Chiefs have been edging closer for the past two years, taking third in 1937 and second last year. With Newark Bears' super-team whittled down to ordinary size by the graduation of its stars, Syracuse has its best chance in years this season.

Today Syracuse is in third, 3 1-2 games behind the league-leading Jersey City Giants. The Chiefs are there mainly because of Johnny Gee, the oversize pitcher who worked his way up to a $200,000 price tag last year. Johnny pitched eight-hit ball and weathered a ninth-inning rally yesterday to beat Rochester Red Wings 10-5 for his third victory of the season.

Baltimore Orioles earned a first-division spot by beating Buffalo Bisons for the second straight time, 17-3, as five Bison moundsmen failed to stem the attack. Dick West and Eddie Moore each cracked out four Baltimore hits while Johnny Tising pitched the full game and fanned seven.

Toronto Maple Leafs won their first home game of the season, downing Newark 10-4 behind the four-hit flinging of Mike Meola. Thirteen passes by the Newark pitchers helped snap the Bear's winning streak at seven games and Bobby Porter drove in five runs for Toronto.

LEAPS AS TRAIN SPEEDS 40 M.P.H.

Barrie, Ont., May 13 (CP)—William Uhrym, 39, leaped from a train going 40 miles an hour north of here yesterday to escape from Detective John Houston who was taking him to Toronto to face fraud charges.

Provincial Police were notified of the escape when the train pulled into Alliston, bordering Barrie, at five o'clock this morning. Farmers and dogs were enlisted to aid in a search of thick bush and swamp areas where Uhrym jumped through a vestibule door of a coach.

He apparently was not injured and a few seconds later was seen running swiftly.

New Managers in Major Loops, Blades, Haney and Prothro Are Doing Excellent Work

Cards Are in First Place and Are Likely to Stay There for Some Time

PHILLIES SIXTH

Browns Have Leading Hitter and a Rookie Pitcher With Three Wins

(By Judson Bailey Associated Press Sports Writer).

There should be room in the baseball record after nearly a month of Major League competition for an appraisal of the managers plucked out of the minors last winter to guide the two St. Louis clubs and Philadelphia Phillies.

Managers have been brought into the big tent from the side shows before, but none were as little heralded as Ray Blades, who graduated from the Rochester farm in the International League to the St. Louis Cardinals; Fred Haney, who moved from Toledo in the American Association to the Browns; and Dr. J. Thompson Prothro, who stepped from Little Rock in the Southern Association to the Phillies.

Taking over clubs which finished seventh or last in 1938, this trio has made their charges something to be reckoned with. Today the Cardinals are in first place in the National League and the Phillies in sixth. The Browns are parked in sixth in the American League.

Cards Stop Reds

The Cardinals stopped Cincinnati Reds 8-7 yesterday for their fourth consecutive victory. Johnny Mize hit two home runs and old Pepper Martin one to acount for seven of the winners' runs.

Prothro has the Phillies punchy all right. Three of them are among the senior circuit's 10 leading hitters and Morrie Arnovich is tied for the lead in runs batted in with 20. Without the pitching and balance of other teams they have been playing an alert brand of baseball.

They toppled the New York Giants 10-6 yesterday, scoring their first run on a double steal, and getting the clinching runs in the eighth inning on Arnovich's third homer of the year with two on base.

Kramer a Real Find

Haney has the Browns doing the same sort of tricks. The American League's leading batter is El Mazzera with a .475 mark. The team is second only to New York Yankees in team batting and the pitching has been shaping up to expectations. Right now the ace of the mound staff is rookie Jack Kramer, who won his third victory without a setback by shutting out the Detroit Tigers 1-0 on two hits yesterday.

In the abbreviated schedule caused by teams travelling there were but two other games, Boston Bees taking a loose jointed contest from Brooklyn Dodgers 7-5 and Chicago White Sox nudging Cleveland Indians 4-3.

Sports Roundup

New York, May 13 (AP)—There were 118 books operating full-blast at the Belmont opener....The Pirates know how it feels to be at home on the road—Polo Grounds customers rooted for 'em hard during both games with the Giants....If the Browns trade catcher Joe Glenn up the river to the Red Sox, one and all will say "well, it couldn't have happened to a nicer guy" .... On his way here to see Conn and Krieger fight, Joe Louis stopped off in Cleveland to see his old pal Jesse Owens.

Seen as he emerged from a New York court is Paul Derringer, ace pitcher with Cincinnati Reds in the National League, who was set back $8,000 by the supreme court jury, which awarded that much in damages to Robert E. Condon, industrial engineer, who sought $25,000 worth of balm for an assault made on him by Derringer in a Philadelphia hotel three years ago.

Many are the baseball flowers that bloom in the Spring only to wither and die in the summer heat. One of the game's best Spring hitters is Morrie Arnovich, ABOVE, who patrols an outfield post with Philadelphia Phillies. Morrie doesn't exactly wither and die later in the year, but he's at his best in the Spring and at present is near the top in batting, home runs and batting in runs in the National League.

CORNWALL BISONS AGAIN DEFEATED

Ottawa Senators Also Lose Second Straight to Amsterdam Rugmakers

(By The Canadian Press)

"In the good old summer time" seemed today as good a suggestion as any in the matter of a theme song for Cornwall Bisons of the Canadian - American Baseball League—so far as they're concerned hockeyists or football players are quite welcome to the cold weather.

Rapped for 11 costly hits in a brisk, chilling breeze that numbed fingers and played havoc with control from the hill, Bisons bowed 10-7 yesterday in their second loss in two days to Gloversville. A parade of five twirlers—one called in from the left pasture—failed to stem the tide of a home-town triumph.

Cornwall's defeat contributed only half the fuel to the United States bonfire bidding fair to consume the hopes of Canadian fans; Ottawa Senators, only other Canadian team in the eight-squad circuit which operates in Ontario and New York State, also dropped their second game of the new campaign.

Capitalizing on timely trumping and Ottawa's weakness on the mound, Amsterdam Rugmakers set back the Senators 6-2 to sweep their two-game series.

At Rome, N.Y., where Oswego Netherlands handed the Colonels their second lacing in two days, frigid weather cut down attendance to a sparse 461, Nets rode to an 8-5 victory on nine safeties, including Frank Skaff's second homer of the two-day old season.

Cold forced postponement of the day's other scheduled fixture, a clash between Utica and Ogdensburg.

SOLLY KRIEGER GIVEN BEATING BY BILLY CONN

New York, May 13 (AP)—They are going to have to supply bigger game for Billy Conn, the Pittsburgh kid, after the terrific beating he dealt out to Solly Krieger, the National Association middleweight king, in their 12-round bout in Madison Square Garden.

He must have proved to nearly everybody's satisfaction by this time that he can knock the daylights out of all the 160-pounders they throw into the ring with him. In his last four important fights, Billy has whipped Krieger twice and Fred Apostoli, champion in New York State, the same number of times.

Krieger didn't belong in the same ring with Conn last night, even though Billy plainly wasn't at his best. He has been troubled with infected tonsils lately. He weighed 170 1-4 to Krieger's 166, but thinks he might sprout up to a solid 180 without the bad tonsils.

Solly tried hard. He lunged at his nimble rival round after round, but all he got was a painful beating, a confused look on his face and a load of sarcasm from 10,000 witnesses.

There wasn't a knockdown, though it was strange that Solly kept his feet under the barrage of left-rights that poured onto his granite jaw in the late rounds. By a conservative estimate, Conn captured nine chapters, Krieger gained one and a couple could have been called even, either was cut, but Solly's faec was swollen and battered.

Frances Armstrong, who plays first base in a Toronto girls' softball league, takes a mighty cut at the ball—and misses—during a game her team played against the New York Roverettes in Madison Square Garden. Toronto teams are frequently invited to New York for games with the Roverettes and in this month's series they broke even at one win apiece. Oh yes, Miss Armstrong socked the next pitch for a single.

Heading for the American turf's "triple crown", the Kentucky Derby the Preakness and the Belmont Stakes, is the Belair stud's Johnstown (ABOVE), easy winner in the Derby last Saturday and favored to gain the second rung in this Saturday's running of the Preakness. Chief opposition is expected to be furnished by Gilded Knight, with whom Johnstown will run as an entry, and Clencia, winner of the $50,000 Santa Anita Derby.

CALLING 'EM

Between the Lines

with
Ken J. Colling

Although we do not know who the author of the following excerpt on golf may be, the article was passed along to us by Homer "Red" Townsend, well known city sports store proprietor. No doubt this article will prove most amusing, especially to those who are addicted to chasing the little white ball around the links. There's the inside story of the game of golf.

"Golf is a bit of work made expensive enough for a rich man to enjoy. It is a physical and mental exertion made attractive by the fact that you have to dress for it in a $200,000.00 club house. Golf is what letter-carrying, ditch digging and carpet beating would be if these three tasks had to be performed on the same hot afternoon, in short pants and colored sox by goutly-looking gentlemen, who require a different implement for each move.

"Golf is the simplest looking game in the world, when you decided to take it up, and the toughest looking after you have been at it ten or twelve years. It is probably the only known game a man can play as long as a quarter of a century and then discover that it was too deep for him in the first place. The game is played on carefully selected grass, with little white balls and as many clubs as the player can afford. These balls cost from 25c to $1.25 each, and it is possible to support a family of ten people (all adults), for five months, on the money represented by the balls lost by some golfers in a single afternoon.

"A golf course has eighteen holes, seventeen of which are unnecessary and only put in to make the game harder. A "hole" is a tin cup in the centre of the "green". A "green" is a small bit of grass (costing $1.98 a blade) and usually located between a brook and a couple of trees. The ball must not be thrown, pushed or carried but must be propelled with about $200.00 worth of curious looking implements, especially designed to provoke the owner.

"Even the 'language of golf' presents difficulty. Implements and plays have foreign names which deny the beginner any confidence. Scoring is involved with technical names, like 'birdie' and 'eagle'—though these are seldom used except by liars. The most commonly heard expressions can hardly be dignified as parts of a language. They are savage, Zulu-sounding noises, denoting base passions, usually exploding after furious but futile physical exertion and to the accompaniment of breaking sticks.

"When each hole has been completed a golfer counts his strokes, then he subtracts six and says—'I made that in five' or 'that's one about par'. After the final eghteenth hole, the golfer adds up his score and stops when he has reached about 78 to 80. Then he has a bath, a pint of gin, sings 'Sweet Adeline' along with six or eight other liars, and calls it the end of a perfect day."

(And that, dear readers is the biography of a golfer, Sandy Burrows, Joe Cather and Joe Legault please note.)

Local wrestling fans were treated to a double dipper of satisfaction at the Hume Arena last night when Al Dunlop and Joe Conkle, formerly the Red Devil, were both given sound trouncings on the same wrestling card. Incidentally this wrestling business really has us down. For instance last week, with the best patronage in years at hand, the show did not appeal, but last night with a fifty percent less attendance the patrons present saw the best wrestling show presented locally in years. The Kimiski-Slavick opener resuted in a draw, but saw more scientific wrestling than the entire three bouts last week and these boys should prove features for a return bout. It was with glee, however, that the fans saw Joe Conkle given a sound physical beating by Norm Briggar, a newcomer to our grappling clientele. Frankly speaking this boy Briggar, who hails from Buffalo, knows more than the ropes of the ring. However, the climax came when Al Dunlop held up his hands in recognized defeat after he had applied his complete bag of illegal tactics, but it seems George Richards' sojourn in the U.S.A. has proven most prolific, because in the art of orthodox wrestling he gave Dunlop a sweet lesson, to the satisfaction of all present.

If the diamond at the Fair Grounds was in as good condition as the prospects for a baseball team there'd be little worry confronting Coach Bud Wilkins these cool nights. The Belleville nine enjoyed a lengthy batting practice last night and looked most impressive, but it is worth life and limb to hold a fielding practice, so hard and rough is the infield. (Parks Board please note.) Incidentally a call for junior baseball practice was issued today, the intermediate club contemplating on the sponsorship of junior ball, but it depends upon the turn out for practice on Monday night. Aspiring players up to 20 years of age are urged to meet at the Fair Grounds for practice Monday. Getting back to the intermediate picture we saw five real good looking moundsmen working out in the bull pen last night, including Sammy Ellis of Trenton, Keith Weeks and Bert Noakes, all left handers, as well as Joe Kelleher and a lad named Fisher. Every one towers near the six foot mark and tips the weight beam well. Practices will be held nightly until the opening of the Bay of Quinte League season here on the 22nd.

Coach "Chuck" Barnett and his Corbys A.C. "mushballers" must have thought a bombshell exploded in their midst last evening when Frank Sedore's 'Oilers' handed them a 22 to 5 shellacking in an exhibition game. Corbys used all their available moundsmen and added "Badman" Cole for good measure, but without results—the "oilers" were swinging too prolific bats. Pre-season softball dope had the Corby's literally waltzing into a league title but last night's result painted a much different picture on the local softball horizon. Incidentally we heard this a.m. that Skipper Frank Sedore went to bed last night with a smile on his face, the first since the softball question has been approached this year.

AT THE McCARTHY

"Almost a Gentleman"
"The Shadow"

For the last times the McCarthy Theatre double feature program of "Almost a Gentleman" which is a splendid dog story with Ace the Wonder Dog and James Ellison, Helen Wood and Robert Kent in the principal roles and the screen's thrill-packed circus story "The Shadow" is being presented and for an ideal evening's entertainment we urge you to see this program.

"Super-Sleuth"

Jack Oakie in the role of a detective, comes next to the McCarthy Theatre and for laughs the title alone will tell you that "Super-Sleuth" is going to be the funniest comedy of the season. Ann Sothern, one of Hollywood's best feminine comediennes, Edward Kennedy, Alan Bruce and Eduardo Ciannelli head the supporting cast, but to tell you more would be to spoil your treat in hilarity, so in fairness to Hawkshaw Jack—we'll let 7000 feet of motion picture film show you how to laugh and learn the art of detection from Hollywood's crack (pot) sleuth. On the same program Sally Eilers, Preston Foster and Arthur Lake in the thrilling adventure production "Everybody's Doing It" will also be presented.

AT THE BELLE

"Let Freedom Ring"

The rapidly growing ranks of the screen's Western stars are joined for the first time by Nelson Eddy in "Let Freedom Ring", romantic and pulse-stirring drama of American pioneer days at the turn of the '60's which is now on the Belle screen.

Based on an original story by Ben Hecht, who wrote such outstanding successes as "The Front Page" and "Scarface" and directed by Jack Conway who filmed "Too Hot To Handle" and "A Yank At Oxford", the new picture tells the story of the power of the press in a small frontier town and of the fight between farmers of the 1880's and ruthless railroad interests.

Nelson Eddy appears as a young Harvard law school graduate, and a cast of epic proportions was chosen to fill the prominent supporting roles, headed by Vrginia Bruce as the proprietress of a Western cafe. Victor McLaglen, recently seen in "Gunga Din" has another powerful role as the Irish railroad foreman whose fist fight with Eddy in a mountain cave provides one of the thrill highlights of the story. Lionel Barrymore is seen as Eddy's father, leader of the farm faction. Edward Arnold, fresh from his superb portrayal in "Idiot's Delight" is cast as the Wall Street railroad tycoon. Guy Kibbee portrays a crooked judge, Charles Butterworth a saloon pianist, H. B. Warner a gambling house proprietor and Raymond Walburton the town's newspaper publisher.

Eight songs are heard in "Let Freedom Ring", with the baritone star singing "Dusty Road", "When Irish Eyes Are Smiling", "Pat, Sez He", "Where Else But Here", "Home Sweet Home", "My Country 'Tis of Thee" and "Love's Serenade." Miss Bruce joins Eddy in two of the songs and a male chorus sings "I've Been Working on the Railroad."

Laid against eye-filling and picturesque vistas of the Far West, the story of "Let Freedom Ring" centres about Steve Logan, young Harvard law school graduate, who returns home to a small Western farm community of the 1860's to find his father, Tom Logan, and other pioneers expecting him to lead them in their fight against the encroachment of the railroad, a fight led by Wall Street Tycoon Jim Knox and his Irish foreman, Mulligan.

Believing trickery the only way to beat Knox's unscrupulous methods, Steve pretends to see the justice of the railroad's stand and is promptly considered a Judas by his friends including his childhood sweetheart, Maggie Adams. Aided by "The Mackerel", a saloon pianist, Steve kidnaps Underwood, the town's newspaper publisher, and starts printing and distributing broadsides which stir up the railroad "hunkies" against their bosses.

Infuriated, Knox and Mulligan lead a posse into the hills to seek Steve's hideout. The latter lures Mulligan into a cavern where his press is set up, and challenges him to a bare knuckle fight which shall determine whether Mulligan forswears allegiance to Knox and bring his workers over onto the side of Steve and the farmers. Licked in fair battle, Mulligan keeps his word, Knox is driven out of town and Steve reveals the role he has been playing in secret to insure the return of the law and order which now prevails.

Summer Styles in Color

New Spring and Summer styles in Technicolor modeled by twenty-three of America's famous beauties are revealed in Vyvan Donner's Fashion Forecasts, the third and most thrilling of this beautiful series to be presented on the same program, with the popular Belle newsreel, and "Little Gold Fish", a clever comicolor cartoon.

COMMUNION SET RECALLS ROMANCE

Presented by Florence Nightingale to Cousin She Could Not Marry Because Family Objected

Elora, Ont., May 13 (CP)—Parishioners at the Little Church of St. John the Evangelist here still partake of Holy Communion from the silver set presented by Florence Nightingale to Rev. John Smithurst, the cousin whom her family refused to let her marry.

Inscribed upon the paten are these words in Latin: "Acting for someone else, Ebenezer Hall gives this set of Communion to Rev. John Smithurst, a very dear friend, in grateful recognition of many kindnesses, A.D. 1852." The "someone else" is Florence Nightingale, the lady with the lamp whose ministrations in the Crimean War created the nursing profession.

Served Among Indians

For six years, after spending twice that time among the Indians in the Red River Settlement, Mr. Smithurst was rector of St. John's. He died here in 1869 at the age of 57 and was buried in St. John's cemetery, where a free-stone cross marks his grave.

Born in England, he and Florence Nightingale made known their love to a startled family at Lea Hurst, Devon, when young Smithurst was 29. Their engagement was forbidden and Florence was taken to the continent in an effort to rid her of her infatuation. Smithurst plunged into commercial pursuits.

Give Up One Another

On her return to England, Florence Nightingale and John Smithurst decided they must give up one another. Florence turned to caring for the sick and, at her request, John enrolled in a missionary school at Islington to prepare for work in America. In 1839, after ordination by the Bishop of London, the young clergyman sailed for Canada and the Red River district.

For 20 years he was head of the mission at Fort Garry, now Winnipeg. His writings show little reference to the past, but in his daily Journal there is the beginning of a letter to Florence Nightingale confessing that "while I thought on days long since past, I could not repress the tear that such recollections called forth."

Second Disappointment

Close friends of Mr. Smithurst's later years affirm that when he returned to England after 12 years' missionary service, he hoped to marry Florence. But the family still was opposed to the union of the cousins and a year later the disappointed young minister returned to Canada, this time to stay.

After a short time in a parish near St. Catharines, he came to Elora at the beginning of the year 1853. With him he brought the Communion set presented to him by his cousin. Two years later Florence Nightingale went to Crimea and gained world fame.

Mr. Smithurst retired to a farm near Elora after six years as rector of St. John's. He served on School and Library Boards and was active as a horticulturist until his death.

Another Barrymore Affair

Yes, that's the old heart-throb and profile man, John Barrymore, and the subject of his chin-chukking is Doris Dudley, appearing in the same stage show as the "great lover". They are seen having breakfast together in a Chicago hotel, and with Barrymore one of the principals, the inevitable questions were asked. No, they weren't saying yes and they weren't saying no. In fact they weren't saying maybe. Ho hum.

Romance

By MARCIA DINSMORE

Upon her arrival in Caesar, Wyoming, Lorraine would become a librarian, with a neat little round of daily duties to perform. Back home she had been a librarian. But here on the train, for the glorious space of four days, she was a poet.

The young man who snared her section had been very solemn about it, and had read some of her verses with appreciation. But because of a twinkle in his eye, she was not quite sure that he meant all he said.

Life was a very serious matter to Lorraine at twenty. And she had learned, to her sorrow, that she was very credulous. Ever since she could remember, people had told her strange tales of one kind or another. And she had always believed them. She never could understand that words spoken with a serious and intent face might not be true. But when she believed them everybody laughed at her. And above all things in the world, Lorraine hated to be laughed at.

Lorraine flushed, a faint, becoming pink. But, inwardly, she was pleased. Perhaps she was becoming less gullible, beginning to recognize tall stories from the truth.

"I've never been West before," she smiled. "But I do know better than that. There aren't any more cowboys, or anything. There's nothing romantic about the West now."

"Don't you believe it!" He leaned forward, in earnest, now. "There's romance everywhere, particularly in the West. Oh some of the good old institutions are gone of course, but there are others to take their places. You only have to look at the front page of a newspaper to know that we more than equal the roaring forties now and then."

The next evening Lorraine was bending over her table, completely absorbed in her work. Along her veins was running a thrill of excitement. Just on the edge of her mind, she felt, was her poem, the great poem which was to make her famous.

"Hands up!"

With a start Lorraine opened her eyes and looked straight into the unfamiliar muzzle of a revolver. Behind it was a man, his face masked by a red bandann. Only his slits of eyes were visible.

She wrenched her eyes from the threatening weapon to glance at the young man opposite her. He had his hands high in the air. But as she looked, he met her eyes and grinned. Noiselessly his lips formed the word "camera!"

Color flamed in Lorraine's cheeks. She had been fooled again. It was just a movie stunt and they were all acting.

"Kindly let me alone!" she snapped. "Can't you see that I'm busy?" And once more she bent over her paper.

The young man opposite her sprang suddenly forward toward her own particular bandit. At the same moment a shot sang above her head, and a shower of glass fell about her. There were shouts all through the car. A wild scramble, then hoof beats receding in the distance.

Lorraine sank back in her seat, white faced. A real hold up, not a movie fake! If her friend had not saved her, she would have been shot to death. She had risked a real bullet because she feared ridicule.

"My dear young lady, you are the bravest person I have ever seen." A white haired man was bending toward her. "We were all paralyzed with surprise. Of course the bandits counted on that."

"Yes, and you spoke just at the right moment," chimed in another. "You made us ashamed of our cowardice. As it is, we got two of them."

Across their shoulders, Lorraine met the eyes of the strange young man. He looked deeply disturbed, and she knew why. The word he had spoken to hearten her had almost meant her death.

But Lorraine smiled at him, whitely, in reassurance. "romance" she told him ruefully, "is not dead."

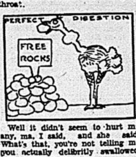
Little Benny's Note Book

Ma was sewing on her sewing machine and I was watching her, saying, Hay ma, I bet I've got the best digestion in the world.

Well I dont know about the best, but it's surely the bigegst for its size, or at least the size of its proud passessor, ma said.

Meaning me, and I said, Only G roozlem, ma, I dont mean just how much I can eat, I mean the actual things I can eat, and ma said, Well, it's true I never saw you flinch at anything resembling food unless it was something you've taken an unreasoning and irritating aversion to, such as fish or turnups, but I suppose it's all part of being a growing boy.

And not only that, ma, I mean I must have some ostritch blood in me because I can swallow things whole, I said. Do you think it would be dangerous to swallow a peachstone ma? I said, and she said, Dangerous, you crazy thing, it would be taking your life in your throat.



Well it didn't seem to hurt me any, ma, I said, and she said, What's that, you're not telling me you actually delibritly swallowed a peachstone?

No mam, ma, it slipped down axsidently, and it didn't hurt going down and nothing even happened afterwars, how's that for perfect digestion? I said, and ma said, O my goodness, you'll have to see the doctor, you'll have to be X-rayed or something.

Aw G, ma, it happened a long while ago, I said, and she said, It doesn't matter, those things are libel to lodge where they're least expected how awful, how gassly, and I said, But good night, ma, it was only a 3 for a cent candy peach stone and it must be all melted now because I swallowed it pretty near a year ago.

The answer being a medium size slap, partly from relief.

Ship 250 Pounds Tomatoes for State Dinner

Leamington, Ont., May 13 (CP)—A shipment of 250 pounds of tomatoes from the greenhouses of Dr. A. M. Wehenkel, Mersea Township, will leave by rail today for Ottawa to be eaten at a state dinner tendered the King and Queen next Wednesday.

Picking of the 250-pound crop began at the greenhouse under the supervision of Dr. Wehenkel, a Detroit physician. His plant is the only one in southern Essex County where production has started. Other tomato producers expect to begin production Monday.

The government is paying 30 cents a pound for the product, well above the market price for home-grown hothouse tomatoes on either Toronto or Montreal markets.

WALL STREET CLOSE

New York, May 13 (AP)—Recovery signs appeared in today's brief stock market proceedings but, in most cases, they were so faint as to be barely discernible.

It was a crawling session thruout. Transfers were about 175,000 shares. While fractional gains were plentiful at the close numerous issues were unchanged and an assortment of minor declines was in evidence.

Small advances at one time or another were posted for U.S. Steel, Bethlehem, Chrysler, General Motors, Montgomery Ward, Standard Oil of N.J., Consolidated Edison, Southern Railway, Westinghouse, Union Carbide, International Harvester, Deere, Allied Chemical, Eastman Kodak and Glenn Martin. Some of these eventually slipped.

Douglas Aircraft marked up a modest gain following the concern's report for the fiscal quarter ended February 28, revealing the highest net for any single quarter in its history.

Fractional advances were scored in the curb market by American Cyanamid "B" and Niagara Hudson Power. Creole Petroleum and Northern States Power "A" shaded lower.

TORONTO STOCKS CLOSE

Toronto, May 13 (CP)—Prices showed little change in one direction or another in today's short session and trading was slow with aggregate turnover of about 150,000 shares.

Macassa was in demand at an advance of 10 cents to 5.05, Lamaque sold up 10 cents and Powell Rouyn, Kirkland Lake, East Malartic and Siscoe added minor gains. Dome was firm and Lake Shore slightly lower.

Consolidated Smelters held better than in the two previous sessions, closing about ¼ down at 41⅜.

English Electric A declined two points or more and the Canadian Car stocks eased off ⅛ to ⅜. On the up side appeared Goodyear Tire pfd., Toronto Elevators pfd., Imperial Tobacco, Shawinigan and United Fuel pfd. Anglo-Canadian traded in fair volume at a loss of a cent or two.

Colony Houses for Pigs Prove Success

They have enjoyed much success in raising pigs in colony houses at the Experimental Farm at Ridgetown.

It is not practical to expect favourable results with winter litters in colony houses in this district, but there is a large part of the year that they can be used to advantage.

Colony houses are so constructed that they meet all the requirements of practical swine husbandry.

Building instructions will be mailed on written request.

Easier Undertone For Toronto Butter

Toronto, May 13.—Prices were scaled down in butter to the wholesale trade on the Toronto open produce market Friday, but eggs remained steady, according to the Dominion Department of Agriculture.

An easier undertone appeared on the butter market as receipts continued to move slowly under cautious buying. The bulk of business in Ontario solids was reported at 20 1-2 cent for first grades, but sales were recorded at 20 5-8c and 20 3-4c in the course of the day's trading. While the closing sales were made at 20 1-2c and 20 5-8c, it was probable that 20 3-4c was obtained for desirable lots near the close of the market.

Generally quiet trading depressed prices on the wholesale cheese market. New, large paraffined eased to 10 1-4c, twins to 10 1-2c and triplets to 10 3-4c. The average price paid to shippers f.o.b. country points declined to 9 3-4c for new, large paraffined. No change occurred in the retail section.

The egg market maintained a steady tone, with fresh receipts clearing at unchanged prices. Graded shipments sold for 20c for grade A-large, 18c for medium and 17c for B and C grades.

Montreal Produce Quiet

Montreal, May 13 (CP)—Steady to narrowly firmer prices ruled in quiet trading on open produce markets here today, the Dominion Department of Agriculture reported.

Quebec No. 1 pasteurized fresh in wholesale jobbing lots made 20 3-4c. Receipts, 702 boxes.

Ontario colored cheese brought 10 1-4c to 10 3-8c a pound. Receipts nil.

Graded egg shipments in used free cases were offered at 21 1-2c a dozen for A-large; 19 1-2c for A-medium; 18 1-2c-19c for B-large and 17c-17 1-2c for C. Receipts, 2,060 cases, export 500.

GOOD SALES OF CANDY AND FLOWERS REPORTED

Lithographed boxes of candy and flowers and cards bearing words of tender sentiment were among the chief purchases by local residents today for the observance of Mother's Day, nationally respected tomorrow. Business was admittedly good, it was reported by storekeepers.

"This is one day that is never forgotten", remarked one merchant in the midst of his busy duties this morning. "Sales this year appear slightly heavier in chocolates and perfumes and other nick-nacks than last year".

GEORGE P. PUTNAM

Then he described the events of last night.

"About five o'clock," he recalled, "my secretary (Miss Josephine Berger) received a telephone call supposed to have come from Rex Cole (Hollywood actor's agent and close friend of Putnam).

"The caller said Cole had an important matter to discuss and wanted me to come to his house. Shortly before 7.30, I walked into the garage. There two men jumped on me and pushed me into the car.

Conversed in German

"They blindfolded me and tied my hands. We drove for about an hour. They conversed between themselves in German, but both spoke English, one fluently and in an educated way. I asked them what they wanted and reminded them that kidnapping was a serious offence.

"They said they wanted to know the man who had contributed to the Hitler book from the German end. I told them I didn't know and stuck to that story.

"Finally they stopped the car. They walked me, blind-folded, for a short distance and then made me lie down on a board. They taped my legs and hands and mouth tightly and left, telling me I would be found in the morning.

"I managed to work loose the bandage on my mouth after an hour or so. I'm not sure how long. I called for help and some people came. Then they called the officers. I discovered when they freed me that, because I was in an unfinished house, I would have been found as soon as it was daylight. Obviously they did not intend to hurt me."

GERMAN DECLARES

Link of Kingship Strong

"The King is the last visible link connecting Canada to the Empire," he added, "but the link is strong."

Declaring that French-Canadians form the chief obstacle to any change in the Canadian Constitution, Dr. Ullman said:—

"Any stone removed from the edifice of the Constitution would make complete reconstruction necessary, or would lead to a collapse. For the moment unity is best safeguarded by solidarity with the Empire."

This solidarity, the German writer said, "is for French-Canadians the best protection against absorption in the Anglo-Saxonism

Union in Faith Toward Empire

"However diverse may be the nuances and motives of fidelity to the Empire in Canada," he went on, "whatever may be the desire of English Ontario to separate from French Canada and the desire of French Canada to separate from the more American western provinces and British Columbia, all shades of political conscience come together in a profession of faith toward the Empire.' "

Dr. Ullman complained that English-language newspapers in Canada were strongly anti-German.

He said the present feeling in Canada was such that it was not even necessary to organize a great demonstration of absolute faithfulness to the Empire such as the visit of the British sovereigns was expected to be.

The Boersen-Zeitung correspondent pointed to recent statements of Prime Minister Mackenzie King and Justice Minister Ernest Lapointe as leaving no doubt what the position of Canada would be in case Britain decided to go to war.

"Germany is Canada's best customer," the Voelkischer Beobachter said last night in commenting on economic relations between Germany and the Dominion.

The Nazi organ said that Germany had contributed largely to the economic consolidation of Canada and expressed the hope that Canada would consider this in making purchases in Germany. The paper urged German exporters to interest themselves more in the Canadian market.

NEED OF CANADA

equipment, our fortifications and other defence works on an efficent basis without delay. The sooner we attain that position, the sooner we can stop worrying about the situation," he said.

At the same time he hoped Parliament and the Canadian people would not lose the vision of world peace through some system of collective security, possibly through a revitalized League of Nations.

Far Below Strength

The naval force on the Pacific was far below the strength defence department officers said was essential, Mr. Green said. It should be strengthened, particularly as there were some 1,200 Japanese fishing vessels on that coast, some of them manned by ex-naval officers.

"We may as well face the fact that the only danger of attack on the Pacific comes from that nation," said Mr. Green.

Besides obtaining more small craft on the Pacific, the government should get help from Great Britain to establish a North Pacific squadron. Small craft, minesweepers and sloops could be built at Vancouver.

Make Militia Attractive

More recruits should be obtained for the militia. On the Pacific coast there were not enough men to man the forts. The militia should be made more attractive. The men should be paid and equipped with proper clothing. Many of the rifles issued were old and defective.

Canada should have at least one first-class military highway from Alberta to the Pacific coast, said Mr. Green. Connecting roads should be built to Prince Rupert and perhaps to Stewart.

The Dominion Arsenal should be developed so that it could produce at least a portion of all Canada's defence supplies, munitions and arms. Rifles brought back from France in 1919 were not good enough to equip the Canadian Militia.

"My opinion is there is not enough equipment in Canada to equip the Vancouver brigade alone, let alone the Militia of Canada," he said.

Favors Embargo

Canada should impose an embargo on the export of war materials to Japan and other aggressor nations, said Mr. Green. Japan had been declared an aggressor by the League of Nations and recently the people of Vancouver witnessed a Canadian destroyer, the "Vancouver" being broken up and the iron and steel being shipped to Japan while Canada was preparing defences against a possible attack from Japan.

Conservative Leader Manion proposed a joint committee of the Senate and House of Commons be set up to discuss defence matters behind closed doors, if necessary, with officials of the National Defence Department. This met with the approval of Defence Minister Mackenzie.

Manion Leads Debate

Leading off in the debate on defence estimates which was opened by Mr. Mackenzie several weeks ago, Dr. Manion repeated the suggestion he made in earlier speeches and complained the government was dilatory in bringing Canada's defences up to a proper standard of efficiency.

"I am quite in favor of my honorable friend's suggestion," said Mr. Mackenzie.

"I am glad to hear that," said Dr. Manion, "but I hope to hear about the Minister carrying it out. Merely agreeing with me is not much good."

Only on the eve of an election was the government taking necessary precaution in regard to national defence, Dr. Manion said.

"It seems to me to be the general opinion among military men and those who are well posted that we are not in a position to defend ourselves should we be attacked or should an international war break out," said Dr. Manion.

Lacks Plan or Method

In the past four years $90,000,000 had been spent for defence. The proposed expenditure for this year was more than $60,000,000 and only now was the government getting prepared after it had been four years in office.

"It seems that in everything the government does it lacks any distinct plan or method," he said. It had changed the wheat legislation several times and only Friday had to change the decorations on the Parliament Buildings for the Royal visit.

"Even in putting up a few flags the government seems to muddle," he said.

There were only four anti-aircraft guns in Canada, said Dr. Manion. Defence Minister Mackenzie interrupted to say there were 18.

In any case, said Dr. Manion, anti-aircraft guns were a most important item. Canada should have at least 100. Mr. Mackenzie said 124 were needed.

Weak in Naval Strength

There was a deficiency in modern service aircraft which should have been made up before this. Canada was weak in naval strength as one good cruiser could drive four Canadian destroyers off the seas and the government had been dilatory in strengthening the naval arm.

No one was more sincerely against war than he, Dr. Manion declared, but he realized Canada could not stand idly by while the rest of the world rearmed. That would be like trying to maintain free trade principles, while the whole world was building up tariffs. The situation provided a great opportunity for Canada, for business, to relieve unemployment. New Zealand and Australia were much farther than Canada towards being able to supply themselves with instruments of defence. England, meanwhile, was fast catching up with the results of its neglect in the early 30's. He contended Canada should be ready to mobilize industry in case of war.

POLICE DISCOVER

H. Thompson, of the Provincial Police declined to reveal the names of the parties, in accordance to the regulations recently set down by the Attorney General's Department.

Car is Confiscated

It was on the footsteps of the quarrel that police confiscated St. Pierre's automobile and took it to Bloomfield where two garagemen, Sam Naiman and Percy Rabbie removed the gas tank upon instructions of Crown Attorney Gordon Walmsley and Sergt. Harry Thompson of the Provincial Police. Inside the gas tank was found $1.30 in American silver coin.

Investigating police today stated it was believed St. Pierre had placed some $200. of the U.S.A. coinage, which was in the loot at the time of the bank robbery at the Wellington branch of the Bank of Nova Scotia, into a bicycle tube and secluded the tube inside the gas tank of his automobile, later going to the United States, where he disposed of the American silver. During the process of getting the rubber tube of silver out of the tank, however, some of the coins fell out and were the coins found in the gasoline tank of St. Pierre's car yesterday. Four quarters and three dimes are reported to have been found in the tank.

At the time of the bank robbery in 1935 the robber removed the bricks from a 20-inch thick wall from the outside to gain entrance.

On April 9, 1935, Gillis Ingram, then constable in Wellington found a quantity of tools in a cellar beneath the former Bank of Commerce, and on a beam, hidden by a cardboard container, were packages of silver amounting to $740. This was the only clue to the robbery, there being no evidence to point to any person.

HITLER TO VISIT WESTERN FORTS

German News Agency Ridicules Speeches of Chamberlain and Daladier

Berlin, May 13—(CP-Havas) — Chancellor Hitler shortly will inspect the lines of fortifications facing France, in company with the leading Nazi chieftains, it was reported by a generally reliable source.

The Chancellor first will visit Godesburg, according to this source before proceeding to the frontier fortifications, accompanied by the Nazi organization heads and party district chieftains.

Hitler today was at Munich where he arrived yesterday afternoon from Berchtesgaden for a stay of several days. Foreign Minister Joachim von Ribbentrop also was at the Bavarian capital.

Criticism by DNB

Speeches yesterday by Premier Daladier of France and Prime Minister Chamberlain of Great Britain warning Germany to demobilise and to keep her troops away from Danzig were ridiculed by the official German news ageny, DNB, and the semi-official editorial service, Deutscher Dienst.

The former said that Daladier's speech "once more sinned by the absence of political realism."

The agency suggested Daladier's reference to mobilization in Europe could only refer to extraordinary military steps taken by Poland.

It also said it was "defamatory and almost pure sarcasm" that Daladier declared "France does not need to ask the world to testify to prove that it has no aggressive intentions."

D. N. B. said of Mr. Chamberlain's speech that it was "a plea for the policy of encirclement," and said it was "unheard of" that the Prime Minister should have interpreted the annexation of Bohemia and Moravia by the Reich as indicating a policy looking toward world hegemony.

Deutscher Dienst said the British and French Premiers "intentionally place war in the forefront" and that they mentioned the necessity of maintaining peace only incidentaly, in transparent generalities."

Runaway Youth Stopped at Napanee

Fred Hancock, aged 15, of 288 Davenport Road, Toronto, was pedalling his bicycle steadily eastward with the purpose of seeing the King and Queen when he encountered Chief Watts of Napanee.

The boy whose absence from home had been reported to Toronto police on Wednesday had left the dwelling on Tueday at noon. He had travelled 140 miles on his bike when the trip ended at Napanee.

He told Napanee police that he had slept in a field near Oshawa on Tuesday night and had found shelter in a barn near Colborne on Wednesday night. He had met a good Samaritan in the person of a gas station attendant who had helped him repair a punctured tire and had supplied him with sandwiches and pop without questioning.

Young Hancock admitted to the Napanee police he had enjoyed the adventure, but was quite willing to await his father in Napanee from which place he was taken home yesterday.

Chief Constable Watt had telephoned Detective Sergeant Herbert W. Gadd of the Toronto force that the boy had been found.

Delay in the Empress of Australia's passage by ice and fog off Newfoundland made it appear to those on the destroyers the rendezvous, first set for this morning, would not come about until some time Sunday night. The meeting is scheduled to take place off the Gaspe Peninsula.

BRIDE-TO-BE FETED BY FRIENDS

Miss Muriel Glenn Presented With Gift and Address

The office of the Great West Life Assurance Co. at 219 Front Street was the scene Friday evening of one of the most interesting events in which the various office staffs in the East Robertson Block ever took part.

It was a cosmopolitan gathring. There were insurance executives, lawyers, spiritual advisors, visions of loveliness from the feminine field, newly weds, and seasoned veterans of the marriage brigade, who bore their scars of battle with becoming dignity.

Of bachelors there were none. They wouldn't have had a ghost of a chance in such a gathering of feminine charm and ingenuity.

The occasion was one which brought a degree of happiness as well as a sense of sadness, for no matter how near and dear our friends may be, the call to life's service sometimes brings us to the parting of the ways and temporary goodbyes must be said.

The object of the gathering was to bid bon voyage to Miss Muriel Glenn who for many years has been associated with the North American Life Insurance Co. and who is a bride-to-be.

The following address was read by Miss Marion Daniels of the Great West Life Co.

Belleville, May 12, 1939.

Dear Muriel:

Having learned of your approaching marriage and your intention to discontinue the work you have so efficiently followed for the past number of years, we your friends and associates from the various professions on this floor, have assembled to offer our congratulations and wish you the truest and best things during your married life.

We have all known you sufficiently long to recognize and fully appreciate your sterling qualities of character, your capacity for making and keeping friends and your smile that has brought sunshine and good cheer to all those about you. In sowing the seeds of kindness as you have unconsciously done from day to day, you have consistently followed the example of Him who went about doing good and pointing the way to higher and better things.

Our associations with you have been both pleasant and profitable. We will sincerely miss your coming and going, the wholeheartedness of your morning greeting and all the charms of character that are so essential in the makeup of a worthwhile friend.

In appreciation of your work and worth, we ask you to accept this gift and when you are engaged with your work in your new home, may it remind you that all your friends at 219 Front Street, Belleville are continually thinking of you and trusting that all the best things of life may be yours to enjoy in the days ahead.

Signed on behalf of your office friends: Marion Daniels, Jean Matthews, Geo. A. Reid, R. B. Cooper.

Miss Glenn was presented with a handsome silver entree dish, the presentation being made by Miss Jean Matthews of the Bay of Quinte Ins. Co. office. Interesting games were participated in and at the conclusion of which a dainty lunch was served. The evening was one of enjoyment for all. (Contributed).

POLAND PROTESTS SENATE'S ORDER AGAINST SERVICE

Not Allowed to Hold a Memorial Service for Polish Hero, Joseph Pilsudski at Danzig

ANSWER RECEIVED

Danzig, May 13 (AP)—Poland protested to the Nazi-controlled Danzig Senate today against the Senate's order forbidding a memorial service here last night for the Polish hero, Joseph Pilsudski.

The Senate had stopped Poles in Danzig from assembling to honor the late marshal on the grounds the meeting might cause trouble.

Poland's protest was delivered this morning by the Polish Commissioner Marion Chodacki to the President of the Senate, Arthur Greiser, and was based on the assertion that the Danzig Government could not "guarantee the peace."

The text was not made public, but it was said to have been "very energetic."

Draw Own Conclusion

Some Polish newspapers, drawing their own conclusions from Warsaw's step, said that if the Senate feels it cannot be responsible for order, then the Polish army ought to be sent to assure order there.

Meanwhile, a passing laborer added another brick to the collection in the show window of the Ruch Book Store, a Polish concern whose windows, decorated with pictures of Pilsudski, were smashed yesterday.

Several Polish residents reported windows in their homes were broken during the night.

The Danzig Senate replied to the protest that no written request had been made for a memorial service and that it seemed unwise to hold an open air meeting in view of the strained situation. It said that meetings in rooms or halls were not forbidden.

TWO MORE BODIES ORDERED EXHUMED

Role 13 Prisoners Played in Slay - for - Pay Racket Etched in Sharper Outline

Philadelphia, May 13 (AP)—Two more bodies of suspected victims of an eastern States insurance-murder ring were ordered exhumed yesterday following swift court moves which investigators said had etched in sharper outline the roles thirteen prisoners played in a slay-for-pay racket.

The bodies were those of Abraham Sherman and Antonio Giacobbe. Their widows are among twenty-four persons held as members, customers and "dupes" of the ring which police say may have plotted more than 100 deaths by poison, drowning and faked accidents in the last ten years.

Giacobbe's widow, Mrs. Millie Giacobbe, was one of thirteen of the prisoners herded before police judges yesterday and held for trial, the grand jury, further hearing or extradition. Many had been arraigned previously, but were called up again on additional charges. Mrs. Giacobbe was charged with murder.

The government is "prepared to offer the fullest facilities for any settlement upon which refugee organizations may decide," Mr. Chamberlain said.

He said an experimental settlement would be financed by private sources but the government would co-operate and would appoint the necessary administrative officers.

SAYS GERMANS MOVE INTO DANZIG CITY

Warsaw, May 13 (AP)—The Nationalist newspaper Wieczor Warszawski reported large numbers of Germans in civilian clothes but "obviously organized" were moving from Germany into Danzig, the Baltic free city which Chancellor Hitler wants returned to the Reich.

The city's population has been increased already by approximately 30,000 Germans, mostly storm troopers and members of black-shirted units, the newspaper said, terming this "an invasion of armed squads".

Many Danzig residents have been so intimidated that they do not leave their homes, Wieczor Warszawski said.

EVASION BY WEALTHY TO BE MET BY DECREE

Paris, May 13 (CP-Havas)—Finance Minister Paul Reynaud promised the Chamber of Deputies that recently-issued financial decrees will prevent wealthy persons from evading their fair share of taxation.

"Some rich persons make scandalous tax reports," Reynaud said. "Fiscal control will reach them."

The finance minister was answering Socialist and Communist complaints that the sacrifices called for by the decrees did not fall equitably on rich and poor. The Leftist deputies demanded mobilization of capital. In reply Reynaud stressed that the new system increases taxes on all profits.

Collegiate News

On Wednesday afternoon at approximately ten minutes after four in the girls' gymnasium, the battle royal began between 9E and 10E to decide the Lower School Basketball Champions. At the end of the first quarter 10E was leading 2-0, but at the end of the half the grade niners had tied the score. In the last quarter after fairly even play up to this point, 10E sprang into action making the decisive score of 14-4.

The ninth graders, however, put up a gallant fight and are to be complimented on their fine showing. As for the champions, we extend to them our hearty congratulations on finishing "on top."

Faithful Bicycle Carries Owner Over 32,000 Miles

A long distance record in cycling is gradually being set in this city by H. L. (Paddy) Collins, 209 Dundas Street east, on a bicycle that has recently come of voting age.

For twenty-one years the bicycle, purchased from a local hardware store, has carried its owner, a well known Canadian National Railways employee of five miles each day on the average with but a few dollars during that time needed for repairs. During that time the owner estimated he has covered a distance of well over 32,000 miles, a marathon record for day-to-day bicycling.

An ardent cyclist, Paddy, as he is known to hundreds of friends of Belleville and district passes up the occasional rides in automobiles offered by friends in favor of his trusty wheel which during the twenty-one years of rain and shine has given faithful and unfailing service. Young beyond his years the secret of good health, he declares, lies in the daily pleasant exercise his bicycle gives.

"If more people used bicycles, and fewer depended upon cars, this would be a healthier and better world" he declares.

To residents of Belleville, the familiar sight of Mr. Collins and his bicycle has long been an integral part of the local scene, and one that has been made more noticeable by his ardent championing of the "perfect way to ride".

Why the Weather!

By Major A. H. Thiessen
Science Service Meteorologist

Lightning and aircraft! Lightning is simply a visible electric current—a huge electric spark. The conductor that carries the lightning is the air, and if an airship happens to be in the way, it will form a part of the electric path. The amount of damage an electric current does when it passes through any object depends upon how much heat it generates, and the heat is proportional to the resistance. Therefore, if an airplane or airship is composed of metal (a good conductor) no serious damage will result; but if of wood and fabric (poor conductors) the destruction is apt to be complete.

KINGSTON VISIT MAY BE SHORTER

There is Possibility That King and Queen May Drive About City

Ottawa, May 15 (CP)—Possibility that the Royal visit to Kingston would be shortened appeared today as Prime Minister Mackenzie King rearranged details for the itinerary changes made necessary by the late arrival of the King and Queen on the liner Empress of Australia.

It was suggested that unveiling of the National War Memorial at Ottawa might take place Sunday morning, May 21, instead of Thursday morning. In that event, their Majesties would be unable to take part in Divine service at Kingston's historic Fort Henry as scheduled for Sunday morning.

The Kingston visit might be shortened to two or three hours during which their Majesties would be driven about the city, leaving as scheduled at 8 p.m., E.D.T.

Brief stops at Cornwall and Brockville, on the route between Ottawa and Kingston, were cancelled last week.

Co-operation of People Sought At Time of Royal Processions

Ottawa, May 15 (CP)—Co-operation of the people of Canada to make sure no untoward incident mars the tour of their Majesties across the Dominion was asked Saturday night in an address over the National network of the Canadian Broadcasting Corporation by Commissioner S. T. Wood of the Royal Canadian Mounted Police.

"Each person is asked to assist in making sure that the visit of their Majesties shall be devoid of any untoward incident," he said. "Their visit, of necessity, can only be of a short duration. The functions they will perform and the public appearances they will be called upon to make are many.

"Therefore the general public can help the authorities by giving their wholehearted co-operation in assisting in the smooth working of the organization which has been considered necessary.

"There will be certain individuals of criminal propensities among the crowds, whose presence will be altogether undesirable. If the activities of any of these persons cause annoyance, it will only be necessary to call the attention of the nearest police officer, when he, or she, will be suitably dealt with.

"On the other hand, there may be citizens who, in the exuberance of their enthusiasm, may give cause of hostility among their immediate neighbors, and in such cases, it is hoped that due allowance may be made for them, and that a spirit of forebearance may prevail."

The first essential duty of police and other forces would be the protection of their Majesties and their entourage. They must not be expected to deal with trivialities.

The following advice was given by Commissioner Wood to those who have no special places allotted them to see the royal processions:

First, decide where you would like to go; secondly, ascertain the regulations and directions concerning this spot; thirdly, find the best means of transportation there; fourthly, be in your spot early.

Householders were warned to make sure doors and windows were fastened while they were absent to see the processions.

EUROPE PROBLEMS NOT BIG ENOUGH TO JUSTIFY WAR

CRY FOR TUNISIA

Diplomatic Circles in Rome Regard the Address Generally as Moderate

Turin Italy, May 15 (AP)—Premier Mussolini told employees of the Fiat Works today that the international situation had caused Italy to "slow down" development of her civilian automobile industry.

He said Italy some time ago had inaugurated "a definite motor policy" but explained:—

"We would have continued on this rhythm if the international situation had not counselled us to slow down."

Mussolini reaffirmed his statement of yesterday as he began his tour of the Piedmont region that Italy wanted peace but that European problems "which constitute danger for all" must be solved.

NO CURTAILMENT OF ROYAL VISIT IN OLD QUEBEC

Long - Planned Royal Reception Will be Carried Out in Every Detail

WELCOMED BY PREMIER

Quebec, May 15 (CP) — After a week-end of uncertainty, this 300-year-old capital of French-Canada joyously went back to work today in its preparations for the reception of King George and Queen Elizabeth.

The uncertainty and speculation caused by hours of delay in the progress of the liner Empress of Australia bringing their Majesties to Canadian shores ended late last night with news from Quebec province's under-secretary, Jean Bruchesi.

His announcement reassured Quebecers they would have the opportunity to carry out the long-planned royal reception in its full measure, despite their Majesties' delay.

A 48-hour postponement of the arrival of the King and Queen would bring no other change in Quebec in the schedule of the royal visit, the under-secretary said.

He announced that his official information was that their Majesties would follow original plans for their visit in Quebec City, Three Rivers and the only alteration would be the postponement in the royal visit's start.

The Parking Question

Proposal to change the parking regulations on Front Street is slated to come before the City Council this (Monday) evening.

The proposal includes a return to parallel parking and reduction of parking time to fifteen minutes.

Fifteen minutes parking time is absurd, and the suggestion made that this is only a feeler, that the change is to be made to half an hour seems camouflage rather unworthy of our City Fathers. One hour is little enough time for out-of-town folks to get their shopping done and if they are to be chased by policemen and restricted to fifteen minutes or half an hour, they will in all probability, stay away from Belleville in future.

The parking regulations now in effect may not be perfect, but they are the best that have been tried thus far, and any change would likely be for the worse.

One cause of congestion is double parking and huge trucks jutting out from the line of parked cars for long periods. Any commercial truck could discharge and take on cargo on Front Street in fifteen minutes, and much of this loading and unloading could be done from the rear from Pinnacle Street.

The considered opinion of many citizens contacted is that the present parking regulations are the best tried thus far. No perfect parking system has yet been discovered anywhere, and it seems that with everyone concerned accustomed to the present regulations it would be the part of wisdom to let well enough alone.

Every time a change is made in the system of parking, it costs from one hundred to two hundred dollars extra for new marking lines. This is only another reason why there should be some permanency to the parking policy in this city.

Another thing that rankles and should be amended, that $2.00 fine for infraction of the parking by-law. The general opinion is that one dollar would be quite sufficient, it being taken for granted that the only object of the charge is to impress on the minds of the public that these are regulations to be observed, so that there will be no repetition of the infraction of the by-law.

Members of Belleville City Council have achieved wonders in providing supervised parking places and thus relieving traffic congestion, especially on Saturdays. Let us hope that they do not mar their splendid record by hasty and ill-considered legislation which may interfere with the movement of building up Belleville business and making this city attractive for shoppers from all parts of the district—let's welcome our neighbors who wish to spend their money here and not plague them with constantly changing parking regulations and two dollar fines which are not conducive to implanting any love for Belleville in the minds of those so fined.

For these and other reasons we think that it would be the part of wisdom for the City Council not to interfere with present parking regulations—and we are convinced that the weight of public opinion will support them in not risking a very much worse state of affairs.

DEFENCE PROGRAM SUPPORTED BY MISS MACPHAIL

Estimates for This Department Passed After Debate Which Lacked Bitterness

ARSENALS OPENED

Ottawa, May 15 (CP)—An appeal for a self-defence policy for Canada, especially in the light of new responsibilities resting on the United Kingdom, was before the Government today as the House of Commons turned from considering the year's increased defence estimates to the more routine subject of public financing.

The main debate on defence policy, expected to provide long and warm discussion, wound up Saturday after a series of mild, restrained speeches. The views ranged from determined opposition by several Quebec spokesmen to others who advocated largely increased defence appropriations, but the bitterness and fever of some former defence debates was lacking.

Typical was the attitude of Miss Agnes Macphail (U.F.O.-Labor Grey-Bruce) who announced her intention of supporting the Government's $63,000,000 defence program, for the first time since she entered the House of Commons in 1921.

FOUR KILLED IN HIGHWAY MISHAPS DURING WEEKEND

Accidents in Ontario Claimed Nine Lives, Two Persons Being Victims of Drowning

DENTIST ELECTROCUTED

(By The Canadian Press)

Week-end accidents in Ontario claimed nine lives. Highway mishaps accounted for four of the deaths, two persons were drowned, one man run over by a train, another electrocuted and one suffered fatal injuries in a fall.

The only double fatality of the week-end occurred at the western limits of Georgetown on Number Seven Highway, Sunday, when an automobile driven by William McKee, about 28, of Acton, crashed into a tree. McKee was killed and Robert Myers, 35, of Hamilton, died several hours later in a Guelph hospital.

Traffic accidents in Toronto accounted for two deaths. Adam Biennosz, 33, was killed Saturday when the bicycle he was riding collided with a truck. Six-year-old Joan Place was killed Sunday when struck by an auto as she crossed a suburban Scarboro street with her brother, John, two, who suffered a

GUNS' PROTECTION OFFERED MINERS WHO GO TO WORK

Two Hundred Soldiers Move Into Harlan County Mine Area

GOVERNOR'S ACTION

Lewis Condemns Threat of Governor to Send Troops to Work Mines

Harlan, Ky., May 15 (AP)—Muzzles of machine guns offered protection today to miners wishing to return to the pits of Harlan County's soft coal mines.

Even before the test between operators and union miners as to strength in this field torn for years by labor strife, the county again lived up to "Bloody Harlan".

While National Guard troops, ordered here by Governor A. B. Chandler, 557 strong, strolled in on trucks from many towns in the southern end of the state, one non-union miner was killed in Yancey and his brother-in-law jailed for the fatality.

A deputy sheriff told of having shot a young man on a main street of the city when he refused to submit for arrest for drunkenness.

Both civil and military authorities quickly gave out statements that neither incident had "any connection with labor troubles" But it shortly was announced that Brig.-General Ellerbee Carter, commanding the troops, had signed an order for an additional 200 soldiers to be moved into the county immediately.

Refusal of the Harlan, Hazard and Big Sandy operators, along with representatives of certain fields of West Virginia, Virginia and Tennessee to sign a "union shop" contract with the United Mine Workers when 15 other operators' units did in New York Saturday, developed quick action by Governor Chandler, who previously had announced he would send troops to operate the mines if there was no agreement by this date.

This brought the condemnation of John L. Lewis, head of the U.M.W. and the Congress of Industrial Organizations, who warned against operating the mines without a union contract as against "public policy" and informed Chandler "soldiers will not operate these mines."

Chandler retorted: "No one can tell our people to work or not to work and no one can come in this state and cause trouble. This is not a political mission but a peaceful mission.

Moral Rearmament is Necessity To Win War Against Chaos-Buchman

New York, May 15 (AP)—Frank Buchman, leader of the Oxford Group, says "moral rearmament is a national necessity if we are to win the war against chaos."

"It is a race with time to remake men and nations," he told a Madison Square Garden rally last night. "It must move with lightning speed. M.R.A. is the people's mandate for a change of heart in every land."

The meeting, attended by representatives from thirty states and fifteen foreign countries, including 500 Canadians, closed Moral Rearmament Week observance in the U.S.

Supporters of "M.R.A." teach that peace and true brotherhood of man can best be attained through personal and international practice of the Oxford Group's four major tenets—honesty, unselfishness, love and purity.

Speaks From London.

Those at the Garden rally heard Sir Cooper Rawson, member of parliament, declare in a transatlantic telephone address from England that "moral rearmament is strengthening the sinews of democracy."

"Moral rearmament provides the self-imposed discipline that makes democracy dynamic," Sir Cooper continued. "It is democracy's defence against the enemy within.

"It shows every citizen how to be a vital force in the betterment of the world. It is trying to rebuild nations which will have the character to live up to ideals."

The Canadian group was accompanied by a pipe band of the 91st Highlanders of Hamilton, and carried greetings of nearly 100 Canadian mayors.

Eric Bentley of Toronto spoke for the group, finding the visit of the Canadians to "participate in this world demonstration of moral rearmament" especially fitting on the eve of the visit of King George and Queen Elizabeth to Canada.

Liner Speeding Towards Quebec At 20-Knot Rate

Land First Seen This Morning as Empress of Australia Nears Newfoundland After 10 Days' Travel

PLANE ON LOOKOUT

Vessel May Arrive Below Quebec Around Midnight Tuesday and Move Into Wolfe's Cove

Montreal, May 15 (CP)—The liner Empress of Australia, bearing King George and Queen Elizabeth to Canada, was off Plate Port, St. Pierre and Miquelon, at 10 a.m. E.D.T. today, Canadian Pacific Steamships headquarters reported.

The company said this placed the Empress, which was forging ahead at a speed varying from 18 to 20 knots, at roughly 668 miles from Quebec.

By R. K. CARNEGIE

Aboard R.M.S. Empress of Australia, May 15 (CP)—Humming along at 19 knots as she approached the Gulf of St. Lawrence and her first official welcome from two Canadian destroyers, the Empress of Australia seemed certain to reach Quebec with the King and Queen Wednesday morning.

Land was sighted at 7:30 a.m. E. D. T. when the southern tip of Newfoundland came into view. A few minutes later the French islands of St. Pierre and Miquelon could be seen to the northwest.

Snow on the hills of the French islands glistened in the sunlight when the liner passed 18 miles to the south of them later in the morning. Vision was so good they look-

KING MAY VISIT CANADA YEARLY SAYS NEWSPAPER

Authorities Lax in Not Choosing More Southerly Route to Prevent Delay is Opinion

NOT PERILOUS ROUTE

By GUY RHOADES
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

London, May 15 (CP Cable)—Two London newspapers today suggested authorities would have been wiser had they chosen a more southerly route for the voyage of the King and Queen to Canada, thus avoiding the areas of fog and ice which have delayed liner Empress of Australia.

Lord Beaverbrook's Daily Express contended officials were warned in advance of the presence of icebergs and the probability of fog and noted that the Cunard-White Star Line had warned on May 5 that liners should change their courses southward.

The newspaper said in an editor-

Ottawa Visit is Alone to be Curtailed Says Prime Minister King of the Royal Program

SOME MINOR CHANGES

One of Changes May Have Regard to Time of Arriving in Kingston Says Ottawa Report

Ottawa, May 15 (CP)—Prime Minister MacKenzie King told the House of Commons today the King and Queen would land at Quebec on 10.30 Wednesday morning. Apart from a curtailment of the royal stay in Ottawa no material change will be made in the program of the royal tour throughout Canada.

The Quebec City reception and program originally set for Monday and later for Tuesday will now be carried out on Wednesday. The stop at Three Rivers and the visit to Montreal will be advanced to Thursday and the King and Queen will arrive in Ottawa Friday. The King would visit Parliament to give royal assent to bills on Friday as originally planned but it was probable the state dinner would be advanced to Friday and the parliamentary dinner to Saturday.

"Every effort is being made to re-arrange the program so as not to disappoint those who, in the different parts of the country, have made careful preparations for the reception of their Majesties," said Mr. Mackenzie King.

A statement giving the detailed plans to meet the changed situation will be made public later today. It is necessary to get approval from their Majesties.

These changes were believed to involve a later departure from Ottawa. Under present plans their Majesties would leave early Saturday evening and spend Sunday in Kingston.

It is now believed the royal party will remain in Ottawa Saturday evening for the parliamentary dinner and possibly spend Sunday morning in this city, curtailing the Kingston visit to a half day or less.

Comment is Cut Short

J. P. Pouliot (Lib. Temiscouata) was cut short by the Speaker when he said the Empress of Australia was chartered by the Admiralty and the Merchant Marine knew more about Canadian waters than did the Admiralty.

Mr. Pouliot's words were drowned out by cries of "order" from Mr. Speaker and others as he attempted to express his view on the navigating abilities and judgment of the Admiralty as compared with the Merchant Marine.

Work of Bible Society In Outposts Described By Rev. A. E. Allnut

A Bequest of $200 by the Late Miss Mary Moore is Presented the Society by Alex Moore

The work of the British and Foreign Bible Society in its far-flung outposts in different countries of the world was described by the Rev. A. E. Allnut, B.D., in the Sunday School Auditorium of Bridge Street United Church following the regular evening service last night.

Illustrated with almost life-like pictures, Mr. Allnut's running comment brought difficulties faced by representatives of the society in "Darkest Africa" out to the full. The address was highly informative and educational and was enjoyed by a large gathering that attended.

Highlighting the meeting was the presentation to the society of a cheque for $200.00, by Mr. Alex Moore executor of the estate of the late Miss Mary Moore who bequeathed that amount to the society. Mr. Moore read the clause of the late Miss Moore's will whereby she left it the bequest, following which the money was officially presented and accepted by the Society through its treasurer Mr. Norman Edwards. Mr. Edwards in a brief address expressed the appreciation of the society.

Another feature of the meeting was the presentation, the fourteenth of its kind, of a life membership given to Mr. Gordon Ford, a student at Albert College, and resident in Toronto, by the Rev. A. L. Geen. The presentation was made following a short address by Mr. Geen, relative of the recipient.

In the subsequent election of officers, the Rev. A. L. Geen was re-elected an honorary member while the President, Mr. Vernon Weir was also re-elected for another term. The guest speaker was introduced by the Rev. Dr. Semple

Plenty of Space Provided For Car Parking in Kingston May 21 States Insp. Gardner

Route Given for Cars to Take to Parking Spaces—Kingston Buses to Run.

MANY RUMORS

Rumors to the effect that automobiles will not be permitted to enter the City of Kingston on May 21st, the day of the visit of Their Majesties, were dispelled today by an official communication to The Ontario Intelligencer by Provincial Police Inspector Frank Gardner of the Belleville Division. All arrangements have been completed for the handling of cars entering the city on that day, the letter points out. Accompanying the communication is a detailed statement outlining the route of the Royal Party from the time it enters the city until departure. Both communications follow:

"I attach hereto a copy of the route of Their Majesties in the City of Kingston on May 21st and the approximate time of leaving the outer station on Montreal street and proceeding to Fort Henry, then leaving Port Henry and returning to the station and the complete route through the city.

"It has been brought to my attention that many persons seem to be under the impression that cars leaving Belleville for Kingston on May 21st will not be able to enter the City of Kingston when as a matter of fact arrangements have been made for parking for all cars entering Kingston that day.

"Cars entering the city on No. 2 Highway will follow through the entrance of the city and continue on Princess street to Albert street at which point traffic will be directed to the Fair Grounds or other parking areas. All cars entering from the east will be directed to parking areas laid out near Fort Henry. Parking areas have been laid out to accommodate from ten to twenty thousand cars."

"I wish to dispel any doubt as to anyone's ability to enter Kingston on May 21st from either the east or the west. Through traffic to Montreal will be detoured in Kingston Mills and no through vehicular traffic will be permitted in Kingston on that date but this does not apply to sightseers. As a matter of fact it is the wish of Their Majesties to see and be seen by as many persons in Canada as possible."

"If any further information is needed on this matter same may be obtained by calling this office.

"Kingston city busses will be allowed to run until a few minutes before the parade starts so that those parking in the different areas can be transported to the centre of the city."

P. GARDNER, District Inspector.

DONATIONS OF CLOTHING HAVE BEEN LIGHT

Spring cleaning of homes so far has not been felt to any extent by the local relief office, and donations of clothing which in past years have been fairly heavy at this time of year have been light, it is stated by Miss H. White Coal Produces Many Modern Miracles

City and Country Benefit from Use of Electricity Now Made Available for Farms as Well as for City Homes and Business Places.

If a man were offered a three-cent stamp for eight hours' manual labour, his reply might not be exactly parliamentary. However, a single kilowatt-hour of electrical power, which can be bought in this country for an average price of three cents, will easily do as much mechanical work as an ordinary man can do in an eight hour working day.

In emphasizing this fact, electrical engineers point out that three cents will buy enough energy to churn 100 pounds of butter, iron clothes for a whole week, sheer sixty sheep, or run a sewing machine for a month. City homes, farm homes—it makes little difference. Costs do vary to some extent, but the variation isn't large. In some localities a kilowatt-hour may cost more than three cents; in others less than two; but as stated above, the average cost in Canada is three cents.

No other household or industrial employee since the beginning of time has been able to produce the amount of work that electrical servants can produce or do it nearly so cheaply. Even slave labour would be more expensive than electricity, because slaves have to eat. Upkeep of appliances is absurdly cheap, and it has been proven time and time again that good electric motors and other well-made apparatus will last long periods of time, accomplish immense quantities of work, and rarely need to be replaced.

Save Money Electrically

It is a simple matter to compute the financial savings that electrical appliances can effect in a household. Electric ranges, irons, lights, heaters, and other appliances will stand the closest comparison that can be applied, when costs are being surveyed. But their economy doesn't end there. Besides an immediate saving of money, every bit of electrical apparatus effects a saving of labour, energy, youth, beauty, time and health. Those economies are too important to be disregarded. Everyone in the modern world realises and admits the advantages that accrue from a budgeting of those six factors.

Always, in a discussion of savings, there is the red herring of false economy that manages to make its appearance. Experience of many years has convinced modern authorities that it is not economy to have insufficient lighting when good lighting costs so little. It is not economy to have some of your work done cheaply and pay high prices, in money and time, to have the rest of it done—when that can be done cheaply and efficiently, too. It is not economy to have a little electrical wiring installed when it is more than likely that more will be required soon. It should be obvious that if a little foresight provides some saving, more foresight will bring about a greater saving.

Electricity on the Farm

Farmers can benefit tremendously from the application of electrical devices to their work, according to men who have actually put the principle to a test. Water may be pumped, cows milked, and machinery operated by electricity with a fraction of the effort that manual labour requires. Scientific tests have proven that a constant supply of fresh water increases the milk yield of cows by 10 to 20 per cent in quantity and by 6 to 12 per cent in butter-fat content. It is known, too, that hens produce from 8 to 10 per cent more eggs if properly supplied with water at all times.

An electrical water system, it is pointed out, can provide that water and produce those benefits. At the same time the user has the assurance and testimony of hundreds of men who already use that system, that it is highly efficient and surprisingly inexpensive.

Protection Against Marauders

Electricity on any property provides other economies, too. Good light is a protection against marauders, both four-footed and two-footed. Safe lighting is a protection against fire hazards. Those factors may be regarded as an extra insurance accompanying the other, primary savings. Highly trained, experienced electrical research engineers agree that it is insurance that will last long, serve well, and cost little.

DEFENCE PROGRAM

Wanted Frank Statement

Canada could not expect help from Great Britain if this country were invaded, Miss Macphail said as she pleaded for a frank statement from the Government on the aims of Canadian defence policy.

If Canada were invaded, she believed the defence would rest with Canadians themelves and with the United States. Great Britain would not consider coming to Canada's assistance and could not be expected to defend a dominion so far from her shores.

For this reason, Miss Macphail agreed with Grant MacNeil (C.C.F.-Vancouver North) who believed Canada's defence should be based on more intimate co-operation with the United States.

"If we are to address ourselves to the defence of Canada, it is ridiculous not to do so in co-operation with the United States," Miss Macphail said. "I think if trouble ever comes in the way of invasion, we will have to rely on ourselves and the United States."

Against Propaganda

She submitted that the Dominion Government had become a mere shadow of the British Government as far as foreign policy was concerned. While she was not questioning the amount of the estimates, she insisted Canadians had a right to know what the Government intended to do with the equipment which that money would buy, whether the Government would respond to everything the Chamberlain Government did.

"There is one point on which I think our defence has been neglected," said Miss Macphail. "I think we ought to crack down on Nazi propaganda in Canada."

Such propaganda, a new weapon of conquest in Europe, was being carried on in every part of Canada, often by "so-called Canadians."

A. G. Slaght (Lib. Parry Sound), after paying hearty tribute to Defence Minister MacKenzie, urged increased estimates for land forces which would protect against attack from without and against sabotage from within. He urged doubling the $29,000,000 proposed for the Air Force.

Warned Against Hitler

To Quebec members who questioned the amount and purpose of the estimates, he warned against any false notion as to the character of the prospective enemy—an avowed and implacable enemy of religion, according to the philosophy recorded in his book, Mein Kampf.

British Columbia and Quebec and the Maritimes, he contended, would be in greater peril than Ontario in the event of war. He reminded Quebec of Hitler's "persecution" of the Roman Catholic Church, disbanding orders; silencing leaders, strangling the church's youth program.

In the event of Britain entering war against Germany, Canada would be flooded with German agents, Mr. Slaght said. He urged the Canadian people to be watchful of suspicious events and characters. Canada had a magnificent Secret Service but it was all too small.

Hon. C. H. Cahan (Con. St. Lawrence-St. George) did not think people should be unduly alarmed by Mr. Slaght's speech. From intimate official contact in the war years with the United States Intelligence Service and from 1917, as director of Public Safety in Canada, he found Canada's Federal Police "thoroughly alive and adequate to meet all conspiracies," and they were doubtless as efficient today.

Thanked For Opening Arsenal

Bruce McNevin (Lib. Victoria, Ont.), said the people of Great Britain bore a crushing burden of taxation for defence purposes, much higher than the taxes imposed in Canada.

He thanked Mr. Mackenzie for re-opening the rolling mill and foundry divisions of the Lindsay Arsenal. He hoped to see a substantial increase in the use of the Arsenal.

For a time the Lindsay Arsenal had been treated as a reserve for production of small arms and ammunition during actual war. That was unfair. If a reserve was necessary both arsenals should be treated like and part of the Valcartier as well as part of the Lindsay Arsenal hould be kept in reserve.

Twelve Break On Issue

There was no change in the attitude of dissenting Quebec Liberals. Seven of the twelve who in earlier sessions broke with the King Government on the defence issue have now indicated they adhered to their former position.

On Friday Maxime Raymond (Beauharnois-Laprairie) and Ligauri Lacombe (Laval-Two Mountains) dissented. Saturday they were joined by W. Gariepy (Three Rivers), J. A. Crete (St. Maurice-Lafleche), Wilfrid Lacrois (Quebec-Montmorency), Lucien Dubois (Nicolet-Yamaska), and Dr. Pierre Gauthier (Portneuf).

"We are not dealing with Canada. We are going beyond Canada and that is what I object to," said Mr. Gariepy. "I want to confine my duties to my own country."

The defence program was out of portion to the need of Canadian defence and of what the people could afford. It was very well to say there would be no conscription and no expeditionary force but that aspect of the situation would change overnight under pressure and agitation. Sir Robert Borden was one of Canada's great Prime Ministers and a man of high character but he had promised there would be no conscription in the middle of the Great War and then introduced conscription.

Against European Diplomacy

The people did not forget that the conscripts were treated like slaves, that there was bloodshed in Quebec City and that men were shot down by the soldiers.

"We are eating up the treasury of this country and still not going to the root of the troubles in our own land and on top of that you ask us to spend more for guns," said Mr. Gariepy as he complained many people were without food and shelter in Canadian cities and the Dominion allowed Quebec Province only $400,000 a month for unemployment relief

J. F. Pouliot (Lib. Temiscouata) held similar views. "I do not believe in the European diplomacy of the present time," he said. "I do not believe in the Chamberlain Government. I do not believe in the intrigues which are now occurring in England I do not believe that French Canadians or English-speaking Canadians should go to Europe to fight over Danzig."

A MEMORABLE VOYAGE

Their Majesties the King and Queen will never forget their experiences of their momentous voyage to Canada in May 1939. The Atlantic was boisterous for a whole day in the early stages of the journey and the rulers saw the ocean in a wild mood with waves dashing over the Empress of Australia's decks. This probably was not so impressive as the days spent in the fog-cloud 300 miles off the banks of Newfoundland when so dense was the shroud that the companion cruisers could not be seen, and whistles and sirens were kept blowing. This area of the Atlantic has a reputation for fogs at this season as the warmer air meets the cold air off the icebergs as they float away to disappear in the Gulf Stream. The royal ship was in the area of icebergs which could be seen as the density of the fog would lessen from time to time.

Ottawa alone will have the time of the royal visit shortened by reason of the late arrival at Quebec, due to fog late last week, according to announcement of Prime Minister King over the weekend.

DAYS OF ROYAL CROWDS

Regulation of traffic is one of the great jobs of this age with means of transportation advanced to the highest point. Normal traffic is heavy enough, then come special occasions which still are not unusual.

But the greatest occasion which will tax the accommodations of city streets and the efforts of those in authority over the use of roads and highways will come when Britain's King and Queen visit Canadian cities for the next few weeks. The numbers of people in the cities on the days of the royal visit will he in many cases perhaps five or even ten times the total population of these centres.

This means the strictest control for the sake of safety of all. Carefully laid plans with restrictions will make it possible for the vast numbers of persons who wish to pay theeir homage to the crowned heads of the Empire to find their way easily to the places of these congresses of men, women and children in streets and parks.

All will be orderly, far more orderly than even in the case of a small local normal celebration. An ordinary parade which might cause traffic confusion if a thousand persons turned out to look at it, is nothing to the royal parades and yet with regulation and order one hundred or two hundred times that number can see a royal procession.

Any natural impulse to break lines such as might be expected when the King's cortege appears, would upset plans. There will be no need to break lines and citizens will do their best to assist the authorities to preserve that ordered control of their movements which will bring satisfaction to everyone.

Canadians have not been used to such crowds as they will see from this week onward. Every citizen can help the authorities by obedience to every regulation at this time. A tremendous responsibility rests upon those who have to handle, these crowds.

Every city on the royal itinerary will be swamped with visitors from other Canadian cities, hamlets and the countryside and from the United States. All should attend with the intention of carefully obeying all regulations and orders, not only for their own sake but for the sake of the tens of thousands who will be in the crowds paying their tribute to Their Majesties The King and Queen of Canada.

NAZIS AND CONFERENCES

When Chancellor Hitler recently said that no German representative would go to any conference to which he was not accompanied by the might of Germany, he said something that has stiffened the determination of the democracies to resist any and all aggression that may come from the Nazis. Lord Astor put it this way that when Nazi pistols are pointed at one's head at the conference table, events can lead to no good end. He said that no concessions can be made to Germany unless there are concessions all around including German disarmament. That is the world's view today. No conference could succeed with such an attitude.

Nations as well as men should be governed by the philosophy of these lines:.

"It is excellent to have a giant's strength, but it is tyrannous to use it like a giant."

LINDBERGH'S JOB

The American people have a habit of turning against their heroes, and one of its victims has been Colonel Charles A. Lindbergh.

Once we overwhelmed him with hysterical adulation, which he did not want. Lately, some among us have made him the target for bitter criticism, which he did not deserve. Those who have questioned his patriotism have reason today, in our opinion, to feel ashamed of themselves . . .

It would be kind, and it would be wise, if for once we would treat Colonel Lindbergh, not as an object of public curiosity, but as a young man doing an important job for us.—N. Y. World-Telegram.

PARKING FIFTEEN MINUTES ON FRONT STREET. Gosh, all hemlock! it will take a couple of extra policemen to check on the cars and keep them moving.

FARMERS IN TOWN SATURDAY WERE INDIGNANT when told that the City Council was considering messing up the parking regulations again, and when they heard that fifteen minute parking might be considered they just exploded. "Silliest thing I ever heard of," said one farmer. "What are they trying to do, make us farmers cut Belleville off our trading list?"

ANOTHER RURAL VISITOR when told of the possible changing of parking regulations said: "Gee Whizz, we have just nicely got used to the present regulations, and now they propose to change them. What's the matter with the Belleville Town Council, are they jitterbugs, can't they stay put for one year, at least?"

THE CRY OF THE WOMEN. Looks like the City Hall will be stormed by an army of women motorists if any change is made in the present parking regulations. The women certainly do not like parallel parking and have vivid memories of smashed fenders and unsightly dinges from the last period of parallel parking.

EDITORS WHO KEPT FAST HORSES used to be fairly common, but here's an editor who keeps hens, hoping, no doubt, that some day the hens will keep him. Editor of Kingston Whig confesses he keeps hens, and says that he knows that when a farmer, through force of circumstances is forced to sell his eggs on the market for eighteen cents and twenty cents per dozen he is losing about 10 cents a dozen on them. And, says the editor, "In a well ordered world, just why should a farmer have to sell eggs at 10 cents a dozen less than they cost him? Why? Brother, you tell us. We don't keep hens but the agricultural editor informs us that Extras are quoted today at 23 cents, while Grade A command 22c, and if the producer is losing anything on the deal surely he can dip back in the crock and take a bit of the big money obtained when egg prices were high.

MUDDLED

It was 1 a. m. when Jones returned from a seasonable celebration with some of his friends. He had had a great time. In his hand he grimly held a turkey he had bought earlier in the day.

Mrs. Jones met her spouse with anger in her eyes, but before she could speak Jones exclaimed: "My dear—hic—I've brought you five beautiful—hic—turkeys for Christmas."

"Five?" she exclaimed, cuttingly "Where are they, then?"

"Well," said her hubby, 'I—s'cuse me, hic—know I fell down five times coming home—slippery path, m'dear,—an' I picked up a turkey every time I got up."

Royal Road to Oblivion

The Royal Road to Romance appears to have come to an end somewhere in the Pacific and the Glorious Adventure would seem now to have brought Richard Halliburton to the common adventure of death.

It was at end of March that the Chinese junk, Sea Dragon, en route from Hong Kong to Midway Island, lost touch with its radio contacts in San Francisco. Severe typhoons were known to have swept the area.

Halliburton and fourteen companions and crew were sailing the junk to San Francisco to exhibit it at the fair there. No trace has been heard or seen of them since.

The parents of the young adventurer remain hopeful, though they must sit quietly in their Memphis, Tenn., home waiting for word which does not come.

"We just don't know what to do or think," says Wesley Halliburton, a Memphis real estate dealer. "Since the last message of March 24 we have heard nothing. Richard has been through dangers before when we had about given him up for lost, and all we can do now is to wait and hope. But it is a terrible suspense just waiting, and not knowing what the next word may be."

When Richard was on a 50,000-mile journey around the world in his plane, The Flying Carpet, in 1932, Mrs. Halliburton was fearful for his safety. "He's always come back before," she says, "but I hate to think of his crossing those wide oceans."

Exactly ten years ago Halliburton wrote a story in which he told how he became a professional romantic adventurer. He said: "I must have at least ten years more of travelling." That was in 1929. Death would appear to have been unwilling to grant more than his minimum request.

Halliburton, graduating from Princeton in 1921, soon found that he had the itchiest pair of feet of his generation.

Instead of going into the bond business as Princeton men of his generation prevailingly did, Halliburton went to sea, and a vagabond itinerary took him slowly to Switzerland, Andorra, Gibraltar, Egypt, India, the Himalayas, Tibet, Siam, Angkor, Bali, China, Siberia, Japan. After two years he returned home. He had with him the manuscript of a book which he called The Royal Road to Romance.

It proved to be just that to 100,000 readers, who revelled in the way this slim young Princetonian did just the things they had always wanted to do.

"Adventure is merely making dreams come true," he wrote, and thousands of women sighed and murmured "How true!"

"I went," he said, "with little money, but with an enthusiasm and excitement that magnified every happening and gilded it. . . . Greece was no run-down-at-the-heel country to me, but the land of Pericles and Plato. It was everything I expected because I knew exactly what I wanted it to be."

The far countries and the adventures which Halliburton described in his books were exactly what everybody else wanted them to be, and he rapidly became the most widely-read travel writer of the time.

He secreted himself and remained over night in the gardens of the Taj Mahal. He climbed Mount Olympus and swam the Hellespont. He followed the Odyssey of Ulysses and jumped into the sacred well at Chichen Itza, walked the battlements of Christophe's Citadel in Haiti, lived like Robinson Crusoe on Tobago. He visited the Foreign Legion in Algiers and the French prisoners on Devil's Island. He tried to fly over Mount Everest in his plane, the Flying Carpet. He crossed the Alps, like Hannibal, on an elephant. He swam through the Panama canal. Always the cameraman was present to record the event, certify the exploit.

He did the things other people only dreamed of doing and he described them, starry-eyed. His adventures lost nothing in the telling. A million copies of his books were sold.

Halliburton always deplored some of the stories which had contributed to his reputation. Once on a visit to Memphis, he laughed and said: "Two things people will remember me by, and neither of them is true. One is that I am a tea-party lecturer, which I'm not, and the other is that I took a high dive into the pool of the Taj Mahal. Since it's only three inches deep in most places, you can see how true that was. I did take a swim in it, in the middle, where the water is some five feet deep. It was a good swim, too."

The present expedition on the junk Sea Dragon had precedents. Junks have several times crossed the Pacific from China. The Amoy did it in 1922. The Hummel-Hummel did it a few years later.

With five other young college men such as Halliburton himself had been seventeen years earlier, and a crew of nine, Halliburton set forth from Hong Kong on yet another adventure. The war in China, the wintry season, did not deter him.

The liner President Coolidge picked up on March 23 what may have been the last message from the Sea Dragon. It was then 1,200 miles west of Midway Island, where it was due April 5. That message said the junk's lee rail was awash. As Junks, highly seaworthy vessels, ride high in the water, this was taken to mean that the craft was in grave danger. Search of the area by the Coolidge offered no clue.

Nothing has come since from the Sea Dragon. It is still possible that the stout junk, blown far off her course perhaps by typhoons or gales, may come limping into some port or cross the course of some other ship in the far Pacific. The thousands who found vicarious romance in Halliburton's adventures still hope.

But each day makes it more nearly certain that Richard Halliburton found at last The Royal Road—to Death.—Willis Thornton in Hamilton Spectator.

PRINCESS PATS

No unit of the Canadian army bears a prouder name than Princess Patricia's Canadian Light Infantry.

The regiment was marked out for attention from the first, by the very manner of its raising. Twenty-five years ago Princess Patricia was the toast of Canada for her beauty and charm. For the new regiment to bear her name set their standard high and recalled legends of chivalry and romance.

How well the regiment maintained its standard is a matter of history. The terrible April of Second Ypres was Canada's baptism of fire—as much for families and friends receiving the casualty lists at home as for the men in the line overseas. The one consolation was the proud record of the Canadians. To those who knew those days, the Princess Pats became a unit apart.

Today a new generation fills the ranks of the regiment. But before them on the parade ground is a faded crimson color that twenty-four years ago was the railying point for all that was left of a battalion that had saved an army. The badges on their shoulders mark them as men privileged to carry on a proud name.—Winnipeg Tribune.

THAT BODY OF YOURS

By James W. Barton, M.D.

The Treatment of the Anxiety Patient

A few years ago when a patient consulted a physician about his nerves—sleeplessness, lack of appetite, anxiety —and the physician could find no organic trouble, he referred him to a 'nerve specialist' because there might be something wrong with the patient's nerves which the general practitioner did not understand. Today, when the physician, after making a thorough examination, can find no organic trouble responsible for the symptoms, he does not refer him to the nerve specialist or psychiatrist but gives the necessary treatment himself.

In speaking of some of these nervous states—anxiety and depression—Dr. Franklin G. Ebaugh, Denver, in Southwestern Medicine, says that in the anxiety state the patient often complains of being cold and unable to keep warm. He is tense, restless, uneasy, apprehensive, with cold, clammy hands and feet and dry mouth. There is a rapid pulse and high blood pressure which are down to normal when the patient is asleep.

"In treating a patient with the anxiety complex it is important to avoid the pitfalls of telling him that he should stop worrying or that nothing is wrong with him, since he is unable to stop thinking about his trouble and knows quite definitely that something is wrong." The physician must spend an hour or more letting the patient tell his story about his family, business and social life. As there is no organic trouble present and the patient now has confidence in the physician is often able to give the needed help or advice. This means that the physician, while not exactly acting in the capacity of a priest, minister or lawyer, nevertheless, with the whole background of the patient now known to him, can advise a holiday for the patient or a member of his family, a change of scene, perhaps a change of occupation, perhaps more rest and a gentle laxative.

The big point is that the physician now recognizes that the nervous or anxious patient needs to be given time to tell his story, if he is to obtain any real help.

Freed by Nazis

After more than a year's imprisonment by Nazi secret police in Vienna, Baron Louis Rothschild, ABOVE, was recently freed and journeyed to the home of his brother, Baron Eugene, in Paris. Reports said Baron Louis was visibly aged by his incarceration, and that he has instructed his attorneys to sue the Reich in an attempt to recover at least part of the fortune said to have been confiscated when the Nazis annexed Austria.

AMATEUR PREACHER

John R. MacNicol, M. P., who came to Prince Township over 40 years ago to teach school found himself laden with the task of pinch-hitting in the pulpit when the clergyman could not be on hand.

As Mr. MacNicol tells the story, it was the late Lorenzo Londry, then chairman of the school board in the township, who broke the news to him. He had been teaching the Bible Class, but this was something else again but Mr. Londry merely told him that it was up to him.

So the momentous day arrived "I don't remember getting into the pulpit and I don't remember getting out of it and I don't remember what I said", said Mr. MacNicol once in telling the story. But as he left the church he heard two of the officials talking. Said one: "You forgot to take up the collection." Said the other: "I didn't think it was worthwhile after that sermon."

"And," chuckled Mr. MacNicol, "I sort of agreed with him."—Sault Ste. Marie Star.

STEADY JOB

The work and talents of many men and women go into the production of a daily newspaper. Each with his special skill contributes—drama critics and book reviewers, cartoonists and comic strip artists, photographers and copy readers; the various editors who direct the gathering and assembling of the day's grist of news, the columnists and editorial writers who compose all the answers to the squeak of the swivel chair.

Compositors, photo engravers, stereotypers, pressmen — and we're not forgetting the circulators and advertising solicitors who bring in the revenue to meet the pay roll.

But the bone and sinew of any newspaper organization is its staff of reporters.

The reporter furnishes raw material from which the newspaper is fashioned. He is the one whose job it is to be on the scene when things happen, to see what happens, to understand what happens, to write what happens—the why, the where, the when, the how. The glamor of his life is often portrayed—in fiction and on stage and screen. But the workaday realities of his job are a different story — with every 10 percent of glamor and adventure goes 90 percent of toil. For reporting is a ceaseless quest of facts.

All that is by way of leading up to the remark that we feel a special pride in the Pulitzer prize award to Thomas L. Stokes, of the World-Telegram's Washington Bureau. We think Tom had it coming to him—and the $1,000 cash that goes with it.—N.Y. World Telegram.

Belleville Cheese Board Meets Each Thursday Night At 8.00 p. m. Standard Time

Members of the Belleville Cheese Board after a morning of full discussion on Saturday, and faced with a motion, an amendment to the motion, and an amendment to the amendment fixing various times for the next meeting, passed a resolution, that the Belleville Cheese Board for the coming year fix the time of regular weekly cheese boardings at the city hall for each Thursday night at eight o'clock Standard Time.

Previously two other hours had been suggested in a motion and an amendment passed that the Board hold its regular weekly sale at eleven o'clock in the morning of Thursday, or at one-thirty o'clock in the afternoon.

This mid-week date is to conform with the request of the Montreal Trades and Provisions Association, that the regular Saturday boarding which has been carried on in Belleville on this day for the past sixty years, be changed over to the middle of the week in order to give exporters more time and opportunity to clear each week's shipment of cheese from the Port of Montreal.

Representing the Montreal Association, Mr. Hodgson, a well-known visitor to the local Board explained this matter on Saturday morning at the special meeting to the buyers and salesmen.

It was to have been understood that the date had been changed to Thursday, he pointed out, adding that the last meeting of last year's Board had fixed the Thursday evening time. Reminded that Saturday's was a special meeting, Mr. Hodgson referred to other eastern boards, which had changed their selling date to Thursday in the belief that the Belleville Board, one of the most important of the Province had already decided on this date.

Important Change

The change from the Saturday date to Thursday was an important one for Belleville, pointed out Secretary Fred Mallory. For the past sixty years and more Belleville buyers and salesmen had attended the regular Saturday board without a break, and this change was not being made without some hesitation on the part of both buyers and factory representatives.

Again Mr. Hodgson pointed out the difficulty that was being experienced by the Montreal shippers in clearing shipments of cheese promptly and on time owing to the fact that sailings generally took place at the beginning or the end of the week. With the Thursday date, sufficient time for proper handling of the cheese would be assured, it was stated. "The cheese will be in better condition; there will be savings made on the handling, savings, incidentally, which will be passed on to the producer. There will be the matter of the better rate of exchange on money. All these factors will contribute to the betterment of the industry right in your own locality, Mr. Hodgson told his listeners.

Announcing himself as being opposed to any change in the first place, W. R. McCreary, local buyer, stated that he stood ready to change his opinion if he felt this change was in the best interests of the producers. He promptly moved that the date of meeting be fixed for each Thursday of the week at ten o'clock in the morning, Standard Time.

James Cook, Belleville buyer, countered this with an amendment that would place the time of meeting on Thursday at one-thirty o'clock in the afternoon.

Mr. Geo. Cook, Madoc salesman, immediately entered an amendment to the amendment setting the time of boarding at eight o'clock in the evening. This amendment was carried when put to standing vote.

Campbellford Board representatives who asked if Belleville could not advance this time one-half hour, were told by the president that due to the hour it was not felt that such an advance in time could be made. Announcement was made by James Moore that Madoc Board would meet at nine o'clock on Thursday evening of each week.

Advice to the Lovelorn

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

Famous Authority on Problems of Love and Marriage.

Don't Give up the Ship

Dear Miss Fairfax

My son-in-law who has never done very well in money matters and has constantly borrowed money from me, not all of which he has repaid, is most anxious for me to deed my house to him. In return for this, he offers me a home as long as I live, and as I love my daughter devotedly, I should like to be with her.

But the fact that he has drifted from one job to another makes me hesitate. My house is large and comfortable, my deceased husband having been a physician and using the house not only for our home, but for his office and consultation rooms. By renting out part of it to a doctor, and two floors for apartments, I make a fair living.

My daughter urges me to deed the house to her husband, as she is anxious to have me share their home and has much faith in a new enterprise for which he requires capital.

Widow

As Commodore Perry advised—"Don't give up the ship"—in your case, your home. It is the means of giving you a livelihood and making you independent. What would happen if this latest venture of your son-in-law's turned out like all the rest, and was unsuccessful? Probably you're able to give your daughter more assistance as the owner of this home than if you deeded it to her husband. Stand firm!

How to Become a Trained Nurse

Dear Miss Fairfax

I have no love problems, but I hope you can help me, just the same. Could I learn to be a trained nurse without paying for it? I'd like to take up that course, but haven't the money to pay. Someone told me after the first three months I would be paid a certain amount a month, be given my uniforms, and boarded free. Someone else said you must pay to take this nurses' training. Tell me which is correct, please.

C. A.

Schools of training differ. As time goes on, the requirements for nurses' training become more and more exacting concerning preliminary education.

I suggest you take up the question at once with the hospital nearest you. See the superintendent or head nurse and get all the information you can. You'll probably be given an application blank to fill out.

It is a noble, but not easy, life. I wish you success in this undertaking.

Enjoy Your 'Teens

Dear Miss Fairfax

I'm 19 years old and in love with a girl of 17, and have been taking her places for almost a year. She never refuses me a date, and she says she likes me a great deal. Also, she insists she doesn't go out with other boys, but I know different. I understand she's a great hand at writing letters, and I can't help but believe this.

I know another girl of 18, who makes me think she'd be glad to go out with me if I asked her. Do you think I ought to start going with her and quit the 17-year old?

Wondering

Don't you think it would be a good plan to make dates with both these girls? You're lucky to know girls of these delightful ages and ought to know plenty of young people of both sexes and have a good time before you think of having what is known as a "closed corporation".

Gifts to the Wedding Party

The bride and groom give gifts—

Although it is not necessary, the bride and groom usually wish to give each other a gift, to commemorate the great day. The gift need not be expensive, but it should be personal, with a thoughtful touch of sentiment. The groom's gift to his bride is something for her own adornment, usually an ornament that she wears on her wedding day . . . anything from a string of pearls to a brooch or bracelet. At the moment a very popular gift is a guard ring set with white or colored jewels. The groom too, sends his bride her wedding bouquet often pays for (but does not choose) the bouquets for the bridesmaids; and, on the wedding day, sends a corsage to the bride's mother and to his own mother.

The bride's gift might be a gold or silver key to their new home, inscribed with the wedding date, or a message; cuff links; a dress set; a pocket or wrist watch, engraved with initials and the wedding date; a cigarette case, similarly engraved.

Gifts to attendants—

The bride's gift to her attendants may be impressive or it may be a modestly-priced but thoughtfully-planned remembrance. Very often she gives her bridal photograph, in a silver, gold, crystal, or mirror frame. Or, she may choose a compact or vanity-case, a wrist watch, a gold or silver key-case containing a key to be cut to the desired lock, a bracelet charm, brooch, necklace, gold bill clip, bracelet, traveling or dresser clock, fountain pen and pencil set, enamel, silver or gold pencil, evening bag, plain or fitted over-night bag, jeweled hat or hair ornament, jewel box, costume jewelry, dressing-table accessory, short gold key-chain with gold tag for monogram, or an article of jewelry set with the individual birth stone of each attendant. The gifts are presented at the bridesmaid's luncheon, or at the bridal dinner, at at any other convenient time before the wedding.

To his best man and ushers (the best man's gift need not be the same as that given to the ushers), the groom may give a cigarette case, cuff links, wallet, a slim evening pocket watch or wrist watch, gold or silver pencil, fountain pen and pencil set stamped with facsimile of signature, combination knife and pencil, watch chain, short gold key-chain with gold tag for monogram gold key-case and key, gold or silver key ring, dress set, evening set (black moire with gold corners) consisting of cigarette case, match case and wallet, or leather traveling-case. Very often now the best man and ushers give the groom a personal present (this does not take the place of a wedding present); the one often chosen is a cigarette box or humidor, engraved with the facsimiles of the signatures of the groom's attendants.

Wedding Presents

The gift that we send as our bow to the happy couple should be something for the new home, rather than personal. Wedding presents are always addressed to the bride-to-be, even when the sender is a relative or friend of the groom and has not met the bride-elect.

The wise bride-elect provides herself with a gift book and as each gift arrives, records the name and address of the donor, date received, and, if possible, the place where the gift was purchased. As soon as possible—the day the gift is received, if she can—she writes a note of thanks. She should never send an engraved or printed card of thanks.

With a wedding present we enclose a visiting-card. It is not necessary but entirely proper to add "with best wishes" or "with love and all wishes for your happiness". If you write a message on the card, cross off the title before your name. A married woman encloses a Mr. and Mrs. card, or her own card and her husband or her own card with Mr. and written before her name.

If it isn't convenient to enclose a visiting card, it is permissible to write your name, with a message signed with your informal name, on a plain white card.

Courtesy Tip

Watch how you carry your umbrella! Give a thought to passersby. Don't, by your inconsiderateness, endanger their eyes or their limbs.

HOUSE WORKERS MUST PREVENT 'Domestic' Hands

ANN RUTHERFORD

WOMEN who do heavy work about the house must watch out for rough hand surfaces and thickened knuckles. Engineering the domestic works takes a heavy toll sometimes.

A little yellow cornmeal added to the soap suds when washing the hands will remove dark lines that come after the use of furniture or silver polish. A cut lemon in the kitchen will remove stains caused by preparing vegetables.

At least once a week the hands should have a vigorous massage. Cocoabutter and lanoline are both good agents for this beauty session. Begin at the wrist, work toward the finger-tips, sending the thumb about in small circles, pressing in deeply to stir up the blood streams. Sprinkle borated talcum atop the oily substance, forming a beauty pack.

Electricity plays a part in professional beautifying. It makes the permanent wave click, and what would we do without the hard-boiled undulation? It is a life saver for the girl with jackstraw hair.

There are lightning-run contrivances for giving manicures; the current buzzes the wheels that do the filing, fluffing away of cuticle and stimulating of blood streams beneath the nails. Instead of plucking eyebrow hairs with the tweezers, the operator yanks them out with a mechanical gadget.

Electrolysis is the means of annihilating superfluous hair. The needle is pressed gently into the pore beside the shaft until it is in contact with the papilla from which the shaft emerges. The current is turned on, Mr. Papilla is as dead as a doornail.

AT THE McCARTHY

"SUPER-SLEUTH"

A thrilling and humorous mystery story in the colorful cinema capitol is "Super-Sleuth" which co-stars fun-maker Jack Oakie and fiery-tempered Ann Sothern, recently featured in "Trade Winds" with Joan Bennett and Fredric March, is now one of the two current feature attractions playing at the McCarthy Theatre.

"Super-Sleuth" is super entertainment, a merry mad-cap of hilarious comedy, highlighted by romance, melodrama and hair-breadth adventure and in addition to Jack Oakie and Ann Sothern, the supporting cast includes some of Hollywood's most popular featured players, including Eduardo Ciannelli, recognized as the number one menace of filmdom, Joan Woodbury, an eighteen-year-old actress who is certain to be one of the screen's most alluring and beautiful star within the present year, Alan Bruce, who is also a newcomer but will be seen in many more big productions shortly and the one and only Edgar Kennedy, who can provoke more laughs than a cage full of monkeys. "Super-Sleuth" is the comedy hit of the season and by all means put it on your "must" for this week. The second feature offering at the McCarthy now is another splendid hit entitled "Everybody's Doing It" a fast moving story in which Sally Eilers, Preston Foster and Arthur Lake have the starring roles. A sport subject which will interest everybody, entitled "Bird Dogs" completes the very excellent program of the screen, but another feature of the show is the presenting of $175.00 worth of silverware which will be given away by the Belleville Kinsmen Club from the stage of the McCarthy Theatre at 9.15 p.m. Coupons will be given each patron at tonight's first performance, doors opening at 6.30 p.m., and then promptly at 9.15 p.m. those already admitted or any that are holding tickets and are waiting in the spacious Foyer or lobby, will be eligible to participate in the drawings which will take place on the stage. We urge those who possibly can do so to be seated in the theatre early, which will allow each holder of winning coupons to receive their silverware almost immediately. The major article is a silver tea service valued at $45.00, which may become yours. AT THE BELLE ETC.

Virginia Bruce and Charles Butterfield featured with Nelson Eddy in "Let Freedom Ring," at the Belle Theatre.

AT THE BELLE

"SERGEANT MADDEN" "WOMEN OF THE WIND"

Son of a Kansas City policeman Wallace Beery plays his first police characterization in the title role of "Sergeant Madden" story of the New York police which is next at the Belle Theatre.

With Beery typifying one of "New York's Finest", Alan Curtis appears as his son, a rookie cop who attempts to win promotion by "smart" short cuts and thus runs afoul of the law he is sworn to represent. Then it becomes the father's duty to put a halt to the criminal career of his own son.

Tom Brown is seen as Beery's adopted son who idolizes his foster-brother but is true to the ideals of his foster-father. And Laraine Johnson is the Irish waif whom Beery makes his adopted daughter. After she marries Curtis she finds herself unwittingly sharing the life of a criminal.

In the supporting cast are a host of outstanding featured names, among them Fay Holden as Beery's wife, Marc Lawrence as racketeer "Piggy" Ceders, David Gorcey of the "Dead End Kids" as a young petty thief, Marion Martin as Gorcey's sister, Donald Haines, Ben Welden and Etta McDaniel.

Adapted from an original story, "A Gun in his Hand," by William A. Ulman, Jr., "Sergeant Madden" was given authentic backgrounds of New York's lower west side and pictures in detail the work of the New York police department, taking audiences behind the scenes to show the training given. Val O'Toole, for sixteen years a member of the department, served as technical adviser.

"Women in the Wind"

The thrills, romances, sorrows and joys of those intrepid girls who have made aviation their career are graphically related in "Women in the Wind", the Warner Bros. picture featuring Kay Francis and William Gargan which is the companion feature hit.

Aside from its direct interest in the lives of women fliers, the new Warner picture takes advantage of the popular interest in the most sensational actual happenings in the recent annals of aviation by incorporating somewhat similar incidents in the screen story written by Lee Katz and Albert DeMond. Injected into a plot which was based on a novel by Francis Walton, these incidents give a fresh and contemporaneous flavor to the production.

Others in the large and expert cast include Victor Jory, Maxie Rosenbloom, Sheila Bromley, Eve Arden, Rosella Towne, Ila Rhodes, Frankie Burke. The Belle news of the day will be presented on the same program.

Nelson Eddy Leaving

Surrounding Nelson Eddy with an all-star cast comprising Virginia Bruce, Victor McLeaglen, Lionel Barrymore, Edward Arnold, Guy Kibbee and Charles Butterworth, "Let Freedom Ring," romantic drama of pioneer days is now being presented at the Belle.

A story of the fight between farmers of the 1860's and an unscrupulous railroad construction gang pressing westward, the two-fisted story, authored by Ben Hecht, presents Eddy as a young Harvard law school graduate, Barrymore as his father and leader of the farmers, Miss Bruce as Eddy's sweetheart, proprietress of a Western Cafe, Arnold as the Wall Street railroad tycoon and McLaglen as his Irish foreman. foreman.

Eddy sings seven numbers, including "Dusty Road," "When Irish Eyes Are Smiling", "Home Sweet Home", "Where Else But Here," "Pat, Sez He," "Drigo's Love Serenade," and the national hymn, "My Country 'Tis of Thee." Miss Bruce leads the singing of the last number, with Eddy and a massed chorus taking up the verse. Also heard is "I've Been Working on the Railroad", sung by a male chorus.

Jack Oakie who is now playing at the McCarthy Theatre with Ann Sothern in "Super-Sleuth", on the same program with Sally Eilers in "Everybody's Doing It."

CHAPTER XIX

"Mobilization"

"Worse luck!" broke out young Jones again irrepressibly.

"Ranny—" Chrissie slipped one hand through Struan's arm, hugged it close against her breast defensively. "I simply can't realise it —surely no one thought it would happen? That assassination — I don't mean to be horrid, but the 'Times of India' and the 'Pioneer' didn't seem to think it of any great importance—"

"Nobody did apparently, till the explosion came—of course, it's been pretty well known that Germany was spoiling for a row, and I suppose she thinks this is her chance. I say, don't look so bothered, my child. It isn't going to affect us out here, you know."

"Worse luck!" once again the younger man chimed in pessimistically, and it was in those two expressions of opinion that the attitude of almost the whole of India was formulated. To the bulk of the native population the news of the declaration of war by England meant practically nothing at all, and to the Army in India, generally, very little more-except a vague regret at being out of the European row, on the part of most.

Simla scarcely stirred in the lethargy of its summer hibernation if such a contradiction in terms can be permitted. It was something to talk about in the clubs at every Indian station, the European War, but something remote, far away.

Until one single word brought it near, made it fill the whole horizon, one word leaping like a galvanic spark from point to point throughout India.

"Let's see—it's August the 8th, isn't it?" Chrissie had just asked Wilson Hall, when Struan striding through the room behind them, broke in with that word of many implications as one drops a stone into a calm pool.

"Mobilization!"

"Ranny, what do you mean?" Chrissie's writing pad slid to the ground, her pen followed, whilst Hall sat forward, grave and intent.

"We've instructions to mobilize—all units of the Lahore and Meerut Divisions. It looks as though we might be in it after all! The order's just come through from Simla."

"But surely it will be only for home defence, so to speak, as a precautionary measure; they'd scarcely send the Indian Army against Germany with the most perfect fighting machine in the world?"

"No, you're probably right, I'm afraid," Struan acknowledged Hall's douche of cold water with a rueful nod. "The idea seems rather to be Frontier, althought nothing's known yet, except the bare fact that we're to mobilize, at once. But that gives us plenty to do for the moment."

He was gone with a clattering, purposeful stride, and Chrissie and Hall were alone again, but with the warm peace of the afternoon lying shattered between them by that rough blow.

"I suppose I'm silly, but I can't grasp it yet," Chrissie said at last, rather piteously. "And I don't want to bother Ranny; he'll be so fearfully busy. But.... Mr. Hall, what will it mean—what shall we do, where shall we go?"

"Why, stay here for the present, I imagine, until at any rate the destination of the troops is settled, Hall said comfortingly. "And if it is the Frontier, well, I expect you'd still stay here."

"It feels so strange, to think of being at war; I hadn't realized it before—I suppose one doesn't realize things until they actually touch us."

"No, that's a pretty general rule. But I think you've got to remember one thing," Hall said. "You married Struan knowing that he was a soldier and subject to a soldier's discipline. You accepted all that, even if you didn't think of it, when you said: 'I will.' And so, as a soldier's wife...."

"Yes, I see, and thank you for reminding me," Chrissie answered quietly. "I'll try not to disgrace Ranny."

It was a resolution hard enough for any woman to keep during the distracting days which followed, days of orders and counter-orders and disorders.

At first, the North-West Frontier rumour persisted, then buzzed on the wires of innumerable telephone and telegraph messages came another, that the troops were intended for Egypt. But during those rumorous days the routine work of mobilization continued. The equipment was there and was duly and punctually issued directly the sealed and secret orders were received.

One morning Struan came home to the bungalow with news.

"Well it's settled," he told Chrissie. "We start from Bombay and Karachi, the whole force, on August 27th."

"In five days....!"

"In five days."

"Well...." Chrissie gave a little shaken laugh. "It's better to.... to know....for certain, isn't it?"

"I think so, darling—yes, I'm thankful myself. One wants to be up and at it before the whole job's been done by someone else."

"And do you know where you're going?" Chrissie asked, her hands on Struan's shoulders, her eyes searching his face, anxiously.

"The destination is unknown," he told her. "Most still think it's Egypt."

"Oh!" She gave a little sigh of relief. "Well, there isn't any fighting there yet; that's one comfort."

"No."

Leonie Reappears

Something in his tone made her look up at him again.

"Ranny...." Her hands tightened on his tunic. "You don't think it's Egypt—you believe it's somewhere else you're going."

"Yes...." He spoke reluctantly, answering the pleading in her eyes more than the actual words. "Yes, I do.... but I mustn't say any more, dearest."

"Somewhere —somewhere where there's fighting?" Her voice was almost inaudible.

"Well—yes. But you mustn't tell anyone my thoughts, Chrissie, they're tremendously secret," he tried to laugh naturally. "Promise me—not a word."

"Of course I won't. But—what—where shall I go, Ranny, while you're away?"

"Nowhere at present. If it should turn out that we're really bound for Egypt, very likely you'll be able to join me there. If otherwise—"

"Yes?"

"Possibly in that case it would be best for you to go to England eventually. They'll certainly be sending home the wives and families, but it will need a little patience, dear. Of course, I shall make all the arrangements possible before I go but—"

"You'll have to trust me to show a little commonsense about what you can't do. That's all right, dear man; I won't let you down," she was smiling now. "And I daresay Mr. Hall will be staying on here a bit longer, and look after us."

"I hope he will; he's a dependable chap, not the sort to lose his head in an emergency. Neither are you; I'm not in the least afraid to leave you, sweetheart, only—well —just a tiny bit sorry, you know!"

"You'll miss me?"

"Miss you? Ah! Chrissie— my own darling, if I began trying to tell you how I'll miss you, it would only upset both of us. So you'll have to take it for granted, as well as a lot of other things which won't bear talking about—now. They'll have to wait until this is all over and we've time for another honeymoon, a real one. Because our first was a very scamped affair, wasn't it, my child? I feel that something better is really owing to you—Kashmir, for instance!"

King and Queen Take Part in Ceremony at Portsmouth

Saying goodby near the dock at Portsmouth, King George and Queen Elizabeth took part in their last official duties on English soil for almost two months, as the Empress of Australia waited nearby to convey them across the turbulent Atlantic to their greatest dominion beyond the seas. A military officer talks with the King here, while surrounding the royal family are other military and naval officials and bewigged dignitaries of the great naval town.

"Lovely!" Chrissie's attention was distracted from the affairs of the moment, as Struan had hoped. She smiled up at him again. "I've always felt a trifle defrauded where honeymoons are concerned. Well, we shall have to be very busy with your packing now that we know, and—why, Ranny, I do believe—yes—look. It's Leonie."

With thudding of hoofs in the thick dust of the road, a rider had drawn up at the gate, sat there, clean cut against the intense greenness of a low-growing acacia tree.

About horse and horsewoman alike there was something theatrical, for the beast was a snow-white Arab stallion, whose arched neck, distended nostrils and flowing mane and tail were picturesque in the most exact sense of the word.

And the rider, too, was in white from head to foot, from the crown of her topi to the buckskin shoes, under snowy jodhpur breeches to match the long riding coat. Even her gauntlet gloves were white, and her face pale as ivory in its strained and eager lines.

The reined-in horse fidgeted and turned its head impatiently, and Chrissie went quickly down the path, followed by Struan at a reluctant distance.

"I didn't mean to stop, until I saw you there," Leonie said. "I was going down to the Club for news —one hears so many rumours. And then, seeing you....It's said that troops from this country are ordered to the Front. Is that true? Are Indian troops really leaving India....at once?"

"We —we don't ...." Chrissie broke off, glancing at Struan, and he answered in a casual tone.

"Well, it all depends what you mean by the Front. It may be merely the Frontier, you know."

"I heard there were embarkation orders....

"One hears so many things, in wartime, it is better not to believe half of them."

"And that the Divisions are intended for France."

"Bazaar gup. You should know even better than I what it's worth."

Leonie flushed, perhaps at the little sting of contempt in Struan's last words. But she recovered herself and laughed.

"The long and the short of it is that I'm not to be told anything", she said. "Not even what every servant knows."

"You already know, apparently, more than we do ourselves," Struan told her lightly. "You've given us a lot of most thrilling information —even if it should happen to be erroneous."

"How Machiavellian you've become! Well, I feel duly snubbed. But there's something I want to say, seriously, even with the chance of being told again to mind my own business. If it's a case of the Front—or the Frontier—and if there's anything I can do for Chrissie—let me know. After all, I may be in a position to help — money and a big house are useful sometimes."

"It's really very good of you, Leonie," Chrissie murmured, after a short pause during which Struan said nothing. "If .... if.... there should be anything....I shan't forget...."

"Well, I'll be off," said Leonie. "Is Wilson Hall still with you? Give him my love. And....remember what I've said."

She was gone without another word, the Arab's delicate hoofs seeming scarcely to touch the ground as they galloped away between the acacias, down the road into Pathapore.

"She reminds me of that bit in the Bible—'Revelations,' isn't it?" Struan stared after the reparting figure. "That one of the Four Riders—Death on the Pale Horse...."

"Ranny, what a horrible idea!" Chrissie shivered. "And, after all, Leonie spoke very kindly. It was nice of her to think that I might need help."

"She didn't come to say that," Struan said, and added, slowly: "I rather wish I knew what she did come for."

CHAPTER XX

The Eve of Opportunity

A dusky coolness in contrast to the blaze of heat outside filled Leonie's bed-chamber. Pencils of golden light pierced here and there through the split-cane blinds which covered the windows and scrawled patterns upon the inlaid marbles of the floor and the velvet-soft rugs of many colours which lay there.

Leonie's quick light step came along the corridor; she entered, and the ayah, who had been squatting in a shadowy corner of the room, came forward, soft-footed, soft-eyed.

Leonie's face was flushed, her eyes bright and not only with the speed of her riding. There was a look of controlled joy, of hardly-concealed triumph, as she pulled off her riding-coat and flung it down on the divan.

"Quick, my bath!" she said, and the native woman glided into the marble-tiled room adjoining, where the bath was sunk two steps down and lined with palest green marble. A huge fish of translucent jade lay at one end, seeming almost alive under the movements of the water when the bath was filled.

The ayah set the silver tap running, and hurried back to kneel before her mistress and pull off her shoes. Her thin deft hands made undressing a quick business.

Extended full length in her bath, her limbs more ivory-white than ever through the greenish tinge of the water, her thoughts ran on, her imagination wove a gorgeous fabric unchecked. Imagination directed by will power—that was her surest and strongest weapon, which had brought her so far and would carry her further still..

For why should she set any limitations to herself and her progress.

If a sickly little artillery officer could take the command of the Army of Italy in his stride and become within half a dozen years, Consul, First Consul—Emperor, why need she, with the same blood, think of obstacles?

Leonie sprang out of the bath quickly, calling to the ayah, who came to dry and massage her limbs. But she was too excited today to submit for long to that soothing process; within a few minutes she was dressed in soft clinging silks, an exquisitely embroidered sari, in the changing shades of grey, mauve-purple and metallic green of a dove's neck.

With a huge amethyst clasping her gown at the throat, with purple satin shoes on her feet, she stood for a moment looking at herself appraisingly.

This was one of the moments when her outward appearance concerned her; contemplating the figure in the long mirror, she judged that it could be relied upon to do its work. There was the seductiveness of the East there, joined to the steel force of the West.

Leonie left her room, passed quickly along the corridors, with their lattices of pierced marble, towards the library where the meeting was to be held. It was a long room, one side lined completely with bookcases of steel and glass, containing European printed works and a fine collection of Indian manuscripts and illuminations.

Spy's Harvest

The orange and red fires of the sunset were still flaring, when the first of the conspirators, the Sikh soldier, came in, saluting Leonie with swaggering respect, tinged with admiration. He was closely followed by all those who had attended the meeting on the island, with others as well.

The last to enter was a grave, grey-bearded man, green-turbaned to denote the Hadji who had visited Mecca, and at sight of him a little gleam of triumph came into Leonie's eyes. For Abdul Mohammed was a power amongst the Moslems, and his presence was a tribute to her negotiations and diplomacy.

"We are all here, I think," she said. "Except His Highness, the Maharajah. He has been very busy the last few days; indeed, I have scarcely seen him myself. But in the meantime I have news, like others here, probably."

"The lady first," the soldier twirled his black moustache above his smiling arrogant lips. "Let us hear."

"The most important is—that two Divisions of the Army in India, some of the finest troops, both British and Indian will be on the seas in less than a week," Leonie said quietly; a murmur, part surprise, part satisfaction, ran round the assembled men.

"So?"

"Is it certain?"

"Aye, thus it was rumoured."

"Then we have fewer of the dogs to drive into the sea!"

"Yes; if the garrison leaves a town unprotected, it is easily taken," Leonie leaned forward. "And so with a country....Our chance has come! All is ready!"

On the last words her voice rang out, with the thrilling note of a trumpet-call.

"Aye—the chance for which we have waited nigh a hundred years" the lean fakir's eyes gleamed like red coals. "The chupattis have gone forth—the signal has been sent....the tempest is rising...."

He went on mumbling whilst eager discussion arose amongst the others.

"There can be no failure now if we stand together under one leader," the soldier declared.

"It is as when the Romans of ancient days left Great Britain to meet their enemies in Italy," the Bengali said. "I have read it in history. They went away—and they never came back."

"Aye—but our business is with those who are left," snarled Meta.

"Since the Germans will attend to those who go," grinned the Sikh.

"And you," Leonie questioned the Moslem delegate. "Your coming here means that you stand with us?"

The old man bowed gravely.

"We will stand with you," he said. "To each his own religion—but all against the Feringhi. And if there be a soldier to lead, it will be found that the sons of Mahommed are good fighters."

"That is never questioned," Leonie answered. "And there is a soldier to lead...."

She broke off, listening.

"He has come as we speak," she said. "It is His Highness, the Maharajah."

The door opened at that instant and Zindia stood there, full in the level rays of the setting sun. His tall figure erect, his face pale and immovable, his left hand rested on the hilt of a long cavalry sabre. For the Maharajah was dressed in full uniform, a magnificent picture of a fighting man. His light grey tunic reached almost to the knee, was belted by a broad cummerbund of dark blue and gold. Blue and gold, too, was the puggri which swathed with intricate folds the inner peaked gold cap of the headdress, set with a defiant tilt on one side of the wearer's handsome head. The breeches were of white buckskin almost covered by immensely high, black varnished boots, with gilt spurs.

A row of medals and vivid-coloured ribbons slashed across the breast of the tunic, another order showed at the Maharajah's throat, the badges of Army rank gleamed on his shoulders, those badges which denoted their bearer as Honorary Colonel of an Indian Cavalry Regiment.

The End of a Dream

"What do you mean by this masquerade?" she asked softly, in English.

The Maharajah answered in the same tongue, his dark eyes meeting hers defiantly.

"It is the uniform which I am entitled to wear as Honorary Colonel of the Sudhiana Lancers."

"Entitled? You. And you come here wearing it?" Leonie's voice shook with fury. "You put on the dress of a slave, when you should appear as the leader of the Armies of Liberty. Haven't you realized that the time has come to take action?"

"I have realized that and I mean to do so" Zindia answered her quietly.

"Well?" the monosyllable cut like a sword-slash.

"For you and these others, it will not be well. But I remember certain vows, I remember the faith and honour kept by my father and grandfather. They swore allegiance to the British Raj; so did I, and therefore...." the Maharajah was speaking now in Hindustani; he raised his voice and his hand tightened upon his sabre hilt. "And therefore I have today put all the armed forces of Khotalghar at the disposal of the British Government, to be used where they will."

An angry murmur rose and swelled. The Sikh sprang up darkly flushed with fury.

"So this is our leader.... a coward, who fears to fight the British!" he shouted, whilst Meta snarled.

"Traitor! He has sold us! Is he to escape?"

"Aye, is he to escape?" the Bengali whined. "We must make sure that he cannot betray us!...."

Across the tumult Leonie's voice cut again.

"You have dared to do this?"

"I.... dared." The Maharajah's eyes shone likt black fire. "One does not put that question to men of my race, no, nor use the word coward! And as for traitor, that would have been true if I had broken by oath and failed the King-Emperor in the day of battle!"

"Then all your fine words have meant....nothing!" Leonie sneered.

The Maharajah flushed, but his voice was firm.

"It was as the wind—as chaff blown before the wind—that talk of mine!"

"So you choose to betray us, your countrymen, who trusted you, who counted you as leader?" the Sikh spoke tauntingly. "How many lakhs of rupees have your masters given you to do it?"

For a moment it seemed that the Maharajah would cut down the speaker. He strode forward, his sword half drawn, then paused, letting the blade drop back, spoke with bent head.

"Perhaps there is excuse for such talk, so—let it pass. But this I swear to you all, on the honour of a Rajput, that I have mentioned no name, spoken to none of what was planned. Nor will I."

"If they should question you? The name of your Highness has long been known as a malcontent." Even in anger the Bengali cringed.

"I should know nothing," Zindia answered briefly.

"Then comrades, this is no place for us—now," the Sikh said.

Without moving from her seat, Leonie spoke.

"I will lead you myself if you would follow!"

"Nay, nay!" The soldier laughed. "You are a woman. It cannot be."

Leonie made no further protest; she saw at once that it would be useless. Without another word, she watched the conspirators depart, almost stunned by this utterly unexpected, utterly crushing blow. When they were alone she spoke with bitter scorn.

"Had you not better give me up to the authorities? I am dangerous —as you know."

"Leonie, I could not—whatever you did," the Maharjah's voice was low and wretched. "You are safe with me—safe as my own son."

Little Benny's Note Book

We were eating supper, being lamb stew, without dumplings, and ma said to pop, I just cant get over that picture we saw last night, not the picture itself of course, but the way Pierre Sindrew looked in it, I declare he seems to of aged 10 years since his last picture, really I could hardly get to sleep for thinking of the change in him, why his very walk seems changed, that marvellous springy walk that he was so famous for.

I didn't exactly gallop into the dining room for breakfist this morning, in fact I was feeling pretty low myself, but I suppose you didn't notice it, I suppose your mind was on some celluloid sap, some screen stranger, pop said, and ma said, It's really a shock to see a change like that in anybody like Pierre Sindrew, I called up Gladdis and it seems she had seen the picture and noticed it too, so it wasn't any idle figment of my imagination.

I felt so weak I could barely reach for the sugar, as a matter of fact I did drop a lump, I just couldn't hold it, but no doubt you didn't notice, why should you with your mind full of some fish face Frenchman? pop said, and ma said, I'm sure it's a direct effect of the awful way Rita Balboa treated him in breaking their engagement like a cast off glove.

It was nothing to the way I was treated this morning, pop said, I put in a bashful bid for liver and onions, and what I met with? I was met with a storm of Certainly nots and Why the very ideas, just because of the mere coincidence that we had liver and onions yestidday. Everybody at the office noticed that my remaining hairs had turned snow white, but I don't expect you to notice little unimportnt details like that, he said, and ma said, O well, it's life, I suppose.

Still meaning Pierre Sindrew.

TAX ON HORSEPOWER

It will cost over $150 for annual licence fees for some cars in Great Britain under the new taxation. The rate has been increased from 15 shillings to 25 shillings per horsepower.

For tax purposes a horsepower is calculated on the total cubic capacity of the engine cylinders. It is to keep down the horsepower tax that so many English cars are so small.

Here are the taxes in approximate dollars that will have to be paid on some cars in England under the new rates:

Ford 8, 22 horsepower	$137
Ford 8, 30 horsepower	187
Buick 8, 31 horsepower	194
Oldsmobile 6, 29 horsepower ..	181
Packard 6, 30 horsepower	187
Chevrolet 6, 25 horsepower	169
Hudson 6, 17 horsepower	106

No wonder a lot of people say the new taxes will force them to quit owning a car.—W. L. Clarke, in Windsor Star.

HOME TOWN BOY, RONNIE NASH, TO RIDE IN PLATE

Will be Astride Budsis, When Horses Parade Before King and Queen Next Monday

A REAL THREAT

Sterling Young on Rye Grass Will be Only Jockey Who Has Ridden Plate Winner

(By Foster Barclay Canadian Press Staff Writer).

Toronto, May 15 (CP)—The old story of a "home town boy who made good" in foreign fields will be recounted here May 22 when Ronnie Nash straddles a horse in the 80th running of the King's Plate. The lad will return from the United States with a top-ranking jockey rating.

A year ago, the 20-year-old apprentice was unwanted by Canadian owners and trainers. He had the necessary enthusiasm, nerve and ambition and while other boys were given a fling at big-time riding, Nash hovered about various racing stables pleading for an opportunity to exercise horses.

Last July Art Halliwell, Toronto sportsman, became interested in the 95-pounder, interviewed and signed him to a contract. Then started a successful tour of leading United States tracks. His success spread and owners and trainers clamored for his contract.

Halliwell held firm until he was convinced his protege was ready to step ahead to bigger and better things. He sold the contract last spring to Ben Whitaker, owner of a stable of handicap performers.

To Ride Budsis

Nash's chief ambition is to ride a King's Plate victor. Halliwell remembered this when he relinquished the contract and one of the terms provided for the jockey's return to Toronto to ride Budsis in the mile-and-a-furlong classic.

C. George McCullough's Archworth and Harry Giddings' Sea General rank as top choices, but Budsis has not been overlooked by railbirds and clockers during morning workouts. She is rounding to shape and a triumph would not cause a surprise.

Sterling Young, leading 1938 Canadian jockey, will be the only rider in the event who has ridden a Plate winner. He piloted Hatch's Goldlure to a handy win in 1937. He is scheduled to ride Rye Grass, a colt owned by H. R. Bain, in the battle for the King's 50 guineas and the big slice of a $10,000 added purse.

Led Canadian Jockeys

Young led Canadian jockeys last year with 94 wins and after the close of the season headed for the United States for a winter campaign. He ran into bad luck at Tropical Park and was injured in a spill. He was laid up for some time and is just rounding to riding form again.

The King and Queen will watch the running of the race from the Royal box in the members' enclosure at picturesque Woodbine Park. Later the King will present the guineas to the owner of the winner at a specially constructed stand near the stewards' stand.

The "comeback king" in jockey ranks, Don Meade, is seen (LEFT) after the biggest triumph he has yet scored, as he looks up at Alfred Gwynne Vanderbilt, president of the Maryland Jockey Club, as presentation of the Dixie Cup was made following Meade's win aboard Sir Damion in the $20,000 added Dixie Handicap. Suspended a few years ago in Florida, Meade was reinstated there at the beginning of the year and is gradually winning reinstatement elsewhere, as well as winning enough races to put him among the continent's leading riders.

Fight Dictator Mike Jacobs Has Fingers in English Pie

By Russell P. Anderson

Central Press Canadian Correspondent

London, May 13. — Wily Mike Jacobs, king of American boxing promoters, has put the "pressure" on the British fisticuffs industry and sewed up the next world's championship welter-weight title fight.

By threatening to call off the scheduled championship bout between "Homicide Henry" Armstrong, world champion, and Ernie Roderick, British champion, Jacobs manoeuvred London promoters into accepting his terms for the next title clash.

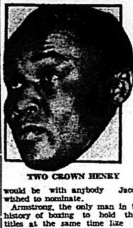
The fight between the 26-year-old American negro and the English champ is scheduled for May 25 in Harringay Stadium, London.

It is understood that if Roderick beats Armstrong, the former will go to the United States to fight any opponent nominated by Jacobs.

If Roderick loses, Mike isn't interested and the Britisher will defend his English championship against any boxer the board of control names.

Ned Tarleton, Roderick's manager, indicated that if his fighter wins, everything is up to wily Mike.

Asked if the Roderick fight in the United States—if it came to pass—would be a return with Armstrong, Tarleton asserted that the bout would be with anybody Jacobs wished to nominate.



TWO CROWN HENRY

Armstrong, the only man in the history of boxing to hold three titles at the same time like his challenger, Roderick, is nursing trouble with his left hand —an injury sustained in a recent American fight.

The hand has been kept in a bandage for about a week according to Eddie Meade, the champ's manager.

Indications are, however, that by the time of the fight both will be in fighting form.

The 'Late' Lou Gehrig Swatted 23 Home Runs With Bases Full During 2,130 Straight Games

By Central Press Canadian

New York, May 13.—Lou Gehrig's consecutive game streak has been snapped and critics in many cases have already counted the Yankee slugger out of further team plans. This is likely to be considerably premature because rarely do hitters of Lou's ability fade out for good as quickly as Lou faded this spring.

Lou Gehrig

Come the warm weather and he may be back in there sending runs over the plate in not quite old-time fashion, but certainly in a manner to make Manager McCarthy happy. At this point it might be interesting to look back on one of the many records the "Iron Horse" holds, that of smacking 23 home runs with the bases full during his major league career.

In performing this feat Lou gathered eleven such four-sackers at home, twelve on the road. He made fourteen off right handers, nine off southpaws. The only pitchers who allowed him to hit two home runs with the bases filled were Lloyd Brown and the late Ed. Morris. The others who permitted one homer with the bags populated are Bob Burke, Bob Grove, Phil Page, Milburn Shoffner, Joe Shaute, Wally Stewart and Earl Whitehill, southpaws; Alvin Crowder, Bill Dietrich, Randall Gumpert, Mel Harder, Oral Hildebrand, Ted Lyons, Fred Marberry, Buck Newsom, Lee Ross, Bill Shores, Lee Stine and Jimmy Walkup.

Six were made off Washington pitchers, five off Cleveland and Philadelphia, and two each off Chicago, Boston and Detroit. Only one was registered by Lou against St. Louis.

Lou made five of his four-run home runs in the first inning, one in the second, four in the third, none in the fourth, four in the fifth, four in the sixth, three in the seventh, one in the eighth and one in the ninth. He hit one such homer in 1925, two in '27, one in '28, two in '29, two in '30, three in '31, two in '32, four in '34, two in '35, two in '36, one in '37 and one in '38.

On Aug 29, 1931, he hit a homer with the bases filled off Bob Grove and came back two days later with a similiar one off Lloyd Brown. The very next day, he hit one off Ed Morris of Boston. He did almost as well in 1934, hitting four-run home runs off Lee Stine on May 10 and off Lloyd Brown on May 13.

An imposing record among a long list of notable marks!

BALTIMORE RUNS WINNING STREAK TO SIX CONTESTS

Orioles Capture Twin Bill from Syracuse Chiefs 5-1 and 9-4

TORONTO BLANKED

Converted Catcher on Mound for Rochester Coasts to 12-0 Victory

(By The Associated Press)

It may be that his versality has kept Dominic (Mike) Ryba from becoming a Major League star, but any minor league manager who has had him on his club will testify Mike is a very useful citizen.

His main job is pitching, but Ryba also is better than a fair hand at catching a ball game. If pressed he can handle any position in the field or outfield adequately.

Mike has been concentrating on his elbowing duties with Rochester Red Wings this spring and he pitched them right into fourth place in the International League standing yesterday with his second victory in three starts. He shut out the last place Toronto Maple Leafs with five hits, fanning seven and walking only two as Rochester won 12-0. He also hit a triple and single and scored twice.

The victory broke a three-way tie, sending Rochester ahead of Montreal Royals, who broke even in a doubleheader with Jersey City's league leaders, and Syracuse Chiefs who dropped two games to the third-place Baltimore Orioles.

Wicker Has First Setback

Tom Hafey hit a homer inside the park with the corners crammed to give Jersey Giants a 5-3 victory over Montreal in the opener and back in four pitching jobs. The Royals won the nightcap, 8-2, because Bobby Porter pitched superbly in the clutches although he eased up when it didn't count and gave 11 hits.

The veteran Sam Leslie returned to first base for the Jerseys in the nightcap and engaged in a mild punching flurry with Porter after a collision at the base.

Baltimore ran its winning streak to six out of seven games by trimming Syracuse, 5-1 and 9-4. Harry Matuzak and Carl Fischer allowed the Chiefs six and seven hits, respectively.

Split Twin Bill

Newark and Buffalo played practically a "no-decision" doubleheader, each winning a game by a close margin. A three run 10th inning gave the Bears the opener 11-8, and Buffalo came back to take the afterpiece 6-5, on Ray Mack's seventh-inning double that sent in two runs. Even the six home runs struck in the two games were evenly divided.

In Saturday's play Montreal won 11-5 from Jersey City and Newark lost 1-0 to Toronto, after winning a 4-3 decision in the first half of a doubleheader. Rochester won 3-2 from Syracuse and Baltimore beat Buffalo 9-5.

Detroit, St. Louis Engineers Biggest Baseball Deal in Years With Tigers Getting Best Deal

Buck Newsome, Sturdy Right-Hand Hurler Traded for Vernon Kennedy

8 FIGURE IN DEAL

Red Ruffing Wins Fifth Victory With No Defeats in Defeating Athletics

(By Judson Bailey Associated Press Sports Writer).

It took the biggest swap baseball has had in years to shake Detroit Tigers out of their sleeping sickness, but they roared like healthy animals, when they finally stirred.

Up until Saturday night when they traded Vernon Kennedy and five other players for Buck Newsom and three others, the Tigers had won only one of 11 games Since May 1.

So the double damper they slapped on St. Louis Browns, 14-4 and 7-4 yesterday in the first bargain bill of the 1939 Major League program may have made some of their future foes tremble.

The deal appeared beneficial to both clubs, but since the Bengals had the most marbles to begin with they seemed to have profited most. For months Detroit fished for a good pitcher and a good outfielder. These were obtained without giving up anyone important in Tiger plans.

A Real Workhorse

Newsom is a workhorse who pitched 330 innings for the Browns last year and won 20 games. With Tommy Bridges and a renovated Schoolboy Rowe he made Detroit three good pitching numbers backed by Archie McKain, Al Benton and Dizzy Trout as added starters.

Roy (Beau) Bell is a good defensive outfielder who batted .344 in 1936 and .340 in 1937. Even last season when he slumped to a .262 percentage he brought home 84 runs. Ralph Kress, 32-year-old shortstop who hit .302 last year, and pitcher Jim Walkup were the other Detroit acquisitions. Both Bell and Kress were pressed right into the Tigers' line-up yesterday and bagged hits in each game.

Kennedy in Trade

To get this quartet the Tigers gave up Kennedy, a pitcher who won his first nine starts last year and then lost nine of his 12 decisions during the remainder of the season as well as his first two this year; Roxie Lawson, George Gill and Bob Harris, who between them have won two and lost three games to date; infielder Mark Christman and outfielder Chet Laabs.

In the other American League games Red Ruffing shut out Philadelphia Athletics, 10-0, on four hits and the slugging of his fellow New York Yankees, for his fifth victory without defeat; Young Bob Feller won his sixth game against one defeat, beating Chicago White Sox, 9-4, on six hits, and Boston Red Sox outrallied Washington Senators 5-4 in the 12th inning, with Lefty Grove getting credit although removed in the 12th.

Hubbell Wins First Start

Carl Hubbell made his 1939 bow as a starting pitcher and beat the Phillies, 2-1, when pinchhitter Ken O'Dea homered in the 10th. Lou Fette, Boston Bees' ace, chalked up his fifth win against one setback by shutting out Brooklyn, 1-0. Pittsburgh Pirates cuffed their Chicago Cubs' jinx 5-2, and the first place Cardinals blasted five Cincinnati pitchers for a 9-5 victory.

Johnny Vander Meer won his first 1939 game Saturday when he pitched Cincinnati to a 2-1 National League win over St. Louis. Brooklyn lost to Boston 5-3 and Chicago won 6-2 from Pittsburgh. In the American League Cleveland set down Chicago 5-2 while St. Louis defeated Detroit 5-3. Rain cancelled the rest of Saturday's schedule.

Boxing Bouts Held In Madoc Armouries

Madoc—There was only a fair attendance at the boxing bouts held in the Armouries under the auspices of the N. C. O's and B. Company, Hastings and Prince Edward regiment on Wednesday evening. In the semi-final four round bout R. McKenna of Belleville and R. Derry of Trenton stole the show when they provided the best fight on the evening's program. The boys had to go an extra round before a decision was given to Derry. In a five-round final A. Bauder of Trenton out-classed B. White also of Trenton. Gordon Yearwood formerly of Madoc and Kid Lister of Trenton put up a good fight in a three-round bout and gave the fans plenty of excitement. These boys also had to go an extra round before the judges awarded a decision to Lister. In the first bout on the program Slaughterhouse Cooney won a decision from Geo. Baker. Owing to the absence of some of the advertised fighters several of the Trenton boys filled out the card in the preliminary bouts.

As usual the battle royal gave the fans plenty of fun. Six local boys the ring. As soon as a participant the ring. As soon as a participant is knocked down or falls he is taken from the ring and the last one to keep his feet is declared the winner.

STRATFORD NATS. O.B.A. CHAMPIONS OPEN WITH WIN

Score 8-0 Victory Over Brantford Without Using Ace Hurler

TERRIERS DEFEATED

Waterloo Tigers Spoil Opening of Ball Season for the Galt Fans

(By The Canadian Press)

Unhindered by some of the stoutest opposition they met last year, Stratford Nationals look a good deal more like potential Ontario Baseball Association senior champions today than they did before the start of their victarious 1938 march.

While the Nats were opening their Intercounty League schedule Saturday with an 8-0 victory over the Alerts at Brantford, London and Strathroy were starting the new Michigan-Ontario League's career. London and Strathroy gave Stratford many anxious moments last summer, but this year they won't bother with O.B.A. competition

The Nats didn't even have to unveil their ace pitcher, schoolmaster Earl Craig, for the Brantford game. They used Buzz Given and Jim Bowman, who restricted the Alerts to four hits while the Stratford team was hitting the offerings of Rocock and Watson for 17.

Shurck Males centrefielder from London, and shortstop McGillivray led the Stratford attack with four singles apiece, while McGillivray also handled seven chances without a miscue. Given worked the first seven innings and Bowman relieved him for the last two.

Downs Panthers Unassisted

Lefty Hammond, Guelph's ace hurler, practically downed the Panthers unassisted in a 10-2 success at Kitchener. Hammond held the home team to four hits and drove in six runs with three hits, one a triple.

The best opener of the Intercounty program was provided Galt fans, who saw Waterloo Tigers defeat their Terriers 2-1. Pomski of Waterloo and Lamb of Galt duelled on the mound until Zalenski, lanky Tiger first baseman, drove in two runs in the seventh.

Preston Riversides spoiled Woodstock's return to senior ball after an absence of 20 years by spilling the Red Sox 14-1 at Woodstock. Two big innings ddi the trick and Pwaleko held the home side to 10 scattered hits.

Miller and Jamieson, combining to do a four-hit pitching job, made the threat of Niagara Falls Brocks more ominous in the Niagara District League when they whipped Port Erie 7-2 at Port Erie. Pearl, the home team's pitcher, whacked a home run but couldn't cope with the four-hit pitching of his opponents.

Piling up six runs in the fourth inning, Port Colborne held on to squeeze out a 9-8 win over the alliance squad at Merritton. It was the Sailors first victory.

Martin, hurling six-hit ball, pitched St. Catharines to a 9-0 decision over the Mounteers at Thorold. Seven Thorold errors played a big part in the scoring.

Sports Roundup

(By Eddie Brietz Associated Press Sports Writer).

New York, May 15 (AP)— The wolves are howling on the doorsteps of Del Baker, manager of Detroit Tigers, and Oscar Vitt, chief of Cleveland Indians....Billy Conn will be brought back here for a July fight against either Melio Bettina or Fred Apostoli....Real feud in the National Baseball League is between Doc Prothro and Charlie Dressen....What those guys are saying about each other can't be printed.

The fellow who umpired a game at Wichita between the Shriners and Knights of Columbus for a trophy offered by a Jewish merchant was named Paul Fair....If Solly Krieger fights Al Hostak like he did Billy Conn, he'll leave his National Boxing Association middleweight title on the coast sure as shooting.

Henry Armstrong hasn't a chance to bring his welterweight crown back from England if he hits low against Ernie Roderick.... Armstrong, the most unorthodox fighter since Harry Greb, throws punches from all angles and often lands in prohibited territory......The English are strict about that..Connie Mack says night baseball will be accepted throughout the Major Leagues within three years .... Helen Wills Moody will call her mystery book "Death Serves an Ace".

What they say: Bill McKechnie: We're pretty good now, but we're going to get a lot better....Barney Ross: I can't get over the thrill of realizing I'm finally out of and done with boxing....Bill Terry: This is a screwball race, so don't be surprised if I say that of all the teams the Phils have looked the best....Fred Perry: I didn't go to England (with Budge) because I wanted to go to Hollywood to see Helen Vinson.

Having his passport examined is J. Donald Budge, dominant in amateur tennis ranks for a few years, and this past year too good for the touring pro game, seen as he set sail for Europe with the rest of the pro racquet performers. As can be seen, he is well-stocked with weapons, which he will probably use to breeze through the opposition as he did over here, where his obvious superiority delivered the knockout blow to an already unsteady pastime.

"The History of the Bicycle," as provided by the Canada Cycle and Motor Company in a pamphlet issued recently, is as interesting reading as cyclists could obtain. With cycling returning to public favor these days it might be interesting to look back upon the evolution of the "bike", or two-wheeled velocipede. A Scotch blacksmith, one Kirkpatrick Macmillan of Dumfrieshire, is given credit for having invented the first bicycle in the year 1839, despite the fact there were rude contraptions of two-wheel conveyances on the market previous to this date. In the early days of 1800 two-wheeled "hobby horses" were used for individual transportation. The practice of riding a "hobby horse" consisted of sitting on a saddle, suspended between two wooden wheels and placing the feet upon the ground. By alternating, in a paddling or running method, the feet upon the ground the machine was propelled, but one became quite fatigued with much of this practice.

Macmillan's invention is believed to have been the first pedal bike, although to a Frenchman named Pierre Lallemant goes the credit of materially improving upon the first bicycle. Lallemant introduced pedals, iron tires, saddles and other more modern accessories. Incidentally Lallemant's first bike was known as the 'Boneshaker' and was introduced about the year 1864. The "Ariel", or tall two-wheeled bike came out about 1879, but proved very dangerous as the rider was perched high-up above a large front wheel. Then came "The Penny-Farthing" type of bike, introduced by R. Turner, an Englishman. This type of bike saw a small front wheel and a larger rear wheel with the rider perched between the wheels on a saddle. Then there were three and four-wheeled contraptions introduced before McCammon's safety bicycle was introduced along about 1884, known as the Rover. This bike had a sprocket, chain drive and all of the ideas now seen on the most modern bike seen on our streets.

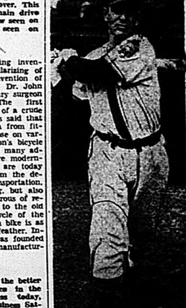
One of the outstanding inventions towards the popularizing of the bicycle was the invention of the pneumatic tire by Dr. John Boyd Dunlop, a veterinary surgeon of Belfast, Ireland. The first pneumatic tire consisted of a crude air tube and cover. It is said that Dr. Dunlop got the idea from fitting pieces of garden hose on various occasions on his son's bicycle wheels. There have been many additional changes to more modern-day bicycles, that are today streamlined, making them the desirous method of transportation, not only for the young, but also the adults, who are desirous of recreation. In comparison to the old high-wheeled metal bicycle of the last century, the modern bike is as light as the proverbial feather. Incidentally the C.C.M. was founded in 1899 and has been manufacturing bicycles ever since.

Bert Hedges, one of the better class of hockey referees in the whistle-tooting business today, was in the city on business Saturday, Hedges is in the livestock business. "The Port Arthur Bearcats were the cleanest hockey club I ever saw. Anytime they were given a penalty during the Allan Cup finals it was through a pure accident on their part," stated Hedges, who was one of the series officials. "Any club to play steady clean hockey is hard to beat and I can truthfully say the Bearcats are a deserving club in that light. However, it was the Goodyears who beat the Royals in the finals, Moose Ecclestone's charges really gave the Royals the works and doubtlessly softened them up for the 'Cats," Hedges remarked.

Norm Barriage, manager of the Hume arena, dropped in this a.m. to inform us he was negotiating with John Katan, the Winnipeg heavy, to come to Belleville and defend his Canadian heavyweight wrestling championship here on Friday night. We suggested Eddie Kimiski and Frank Slavick be re-engaged on the preliminaries as well.

One week from today the Bay of Quinte League is slated to open with the 1938 champion Napanee Gibbards prying off the 1939 lid versus the Belleville nine here in the city. Opening ball games have become an institution in Belleville, especially morning games, that were introduced about a decade ago and have proven popular ever since.

We're Telling You That don't be surprised if Cleveland, Philadelphia and Washington are all in the National Hockey League after 1940....Frank Calder was re-elected president of the N.H.L. for the 23rd term, so why should the Yanks worry if "F.D.R." wants another term in the White House.... Young Bob Feller's mother was struck on the head with a foul ball at Cleveland yesterday, Feller going on to chalk up his sixth win of the season, more than half of the Indians' entire number of games won.... A wholesale trade of players between the Tigers and Browns startled the baseball boys over the week end.... With Detroit getting Buck Newsome it looks as though they caught the ace and won the deal.



Among the current spring blooms in the major league baseball garden is Mel Mazzera, ABOVE, hustling young outfielder with St. Louis Browns, who has been hitting American League pitching to a .400 tune so far and tops the league batters in the percentage column.

How To Overcome Piles And Rectal Soreness

If you are annoyed with itching piles or rectal soreness, do not neglect the same or run the risk of an operation. Any itching, soreness or painful passage of stool, is nature's warning and proper treatment should be secured at once. For this purpose get from J. S. McKeown or any druggist, a package of Hemroid and use as directed. This formula, which is used internally, quickly relieves the itching and soreness and aids in healing the sore, tender spots. Hemroid is a physician's prescription and is highly recommended. It is easy to use and it seems the height of folly for anyone to risk an operation when a simple remedy, which is so pleasant to use may be had at such a reasonable cost.

The Stars Say—

For Tuesday, May 16
By GENEVIEVE KEMBLE

CONFLICTING planetary aspects rule this day. While there may be fair prospects for new ventures and for dealing with those in authority, there is also an indication of obstacle and delay. An aggravating situation may incite reckless, turbulent and impetuous conduct, which may complicate rather than solve the difficulty. Elders may interfere and agitating circumstances may have domestic reactions. Self-restraint and composure may bring profitable change.

If It Is Your birthday

Those whose birthday it is have the power to make or mar the fortunes of the year ahead. Strife and impulsive or rash moves may arouse hostility from elders or from the domestic circle. With restraint, tact and calm deliberation there may be co-operation from superiors. New ventures should thrive. Change of benefit is probable.

A child born on this day may be wayward, headstrong and impulsive, making it difficult to deal with. Its over-strenuous and ardent nature may provoke hostility unless it be given early training and discipline. Its forceful nature and fine resources should be directed into constructive channels.

WILL NOT DIVULGE NAME

Calgary, May 15 (CP)—Earl Forester, 18-year-old Calgary youth who returned $1,536 which he found in a leather pouch in a downtown Calgary street and received 35 cents reward, refuses to give the name of the party who lost the money.

"I guess I'll keep that to myself for the time being," he said Sunday. "It might embarrass somebody."

The youth spied the large wallet lying in the middle of a street Friday.

Johnstown Proves Inability to Win On an "Off" Track

(By Sid Feder Associated Press Sports Writer)

New York, May 15 (AP)—If the "experts" had listened to Sunny Jim Fitzsimmons, who trained the colt, they wouldn't have to be "eating" a lot of glowing words about Johnstown today.

Because while all the raves were going 'round about Jamestown's big boy, Mr. Fritz had been saying right along to hold off on that "great" stuff until his galloper ran in the mud.

So Sunny Jim was probably the least disappointed of all when Challedon, a mud-running son of Challenger II, came home with a victory in the rich Preakness Saturday and Johnstown finished next to last over Pimlico's racing strip. soaked by rain for most of the day.

"It's just like I said," Mr. Fitz said. "I guess he just can't run in the mud. Give us a fast track and big John will pass them again."

Johnstown proved Saturday that he can't go in the heavy footing. He stopped badly after three quarters of a mile of that 1 3-16-mile stake.

Except for the little filly, Cincia, the whole field swept past him on the final turn, with Challedon, Maryland-bred, poking himself out in front as they headed into the stretch and staying there to the wire, finishing 1 1-2 lengths in front of Johnstown's entry-mate, Mrs. Ogden Phipps' Gilded Knight in the good time of 159 4-5.

Financially, the victory was a success both to owner W. L. Brann, who collected $53,710 as Challedon's winner's share of the purse of more than $71,000 and to the bettors, whose confidence was rewarded with $14.40 for each $2 straight ticket.

EUROPE PROBLEMS

He expressed pride in the great new Fiat plant which he dedicated.

Mussolini also spoke at the Superior Institute of War, praising its works in increasing the efficiency of Italy's military training.

Mussolini made no specific mention of Italian claims on France in the opening speech of his tour yesterday but several times there arose from his 50,000 listeners the cries of "Tunisia" and "Savoy"!

Tunisia, French North African protectorate, and Savoy, once Italian and now part of France across the border from Piedmont, have been mentioned in the Fascist clamor for territorial concessions which started last November.

To Il Duce's question as to whether "the great democracies" reciprocated the "sincere desire" of the Rome-Berlin axis for peace the crowd cried "No!"

"You have already answered," Mussolini added, "I limit myself to saying that in view of their acts it is proper to doubt it. That the great democracies are not sincerely devoted to the cause of peace is incontestably demonstrated in that they have already started what might be called a white war, that is to say, a war on economic ground."

Regarded As Moderate

At another point in the speech he said, "There are not at present in Europe problems big enough or acute enough to justify a war. There are knots in European politics but recourse to the sword is, perhaps, not necessary to cut them.

"Nevertheless, there is need that these knots be united once and for all because sometimes a hard reality is preferable to a long uncertainty."

Diplomatic circles in Rome regarded the speech generally as moderate. While Il Duce spoke King Victor Emmanuel, at Campanella race track, near Rome, chatted in friendly fashion with the French and British ambassadors.

(French diplomatic circles in Paris, however, reading between the line of the speech, found in it an urgent notice to France to open negotiations on Italy's claims. Some Paris observers saw a studied coincidence in simultaneous inspections along French frontiers by Mussolini and his axis partner, Chancellor Hitler.)

Armstrong Makes Fine Impression In Old England

(By Drew Middleton Associated Press Staff Writer).

London, May 15 (AP)—The British boxing public has gone completely nuts over Henry Armstrong.

Four weeks after landing to start work for his welterweight title defence against Ernie Roderick May 25, Henry is the talk of the pubs and the pride of the publicists.

They didn't know what to make of him at first but they like him fine now. The sports writers who journeyed down to meet the Queen Mary expected a cross between the late Bert Williams and Battling Siki.

What they found, of course, was a mild mannered little guy travelling with his wife and daughter. He did not brag. He used good English. His clothes were seemly. His manners perfect.

He did everything right. He told them he wasn't worried about the foul rule, that he was quite willing to abide by English boxing rules. He spoke feelingly and proudly of his race.

The next day there were pictures of the sad-eyed little negro and lengthy stories in every London paper. The writers spoke of his boxing record but what really got them was Henry's intelligence and courtesy.

"Armstrong is the finest character I have ever met in boxing" wrote one critic. "He is a credit to his race and to his country."

But Henry's actions are so correct sports writers are wondering if he really can fight. And out at his training camp he has been taking it easy. The left hand he hurt aganist Davey Day in his last American fight still bothers him.

Henry has lost many a round on a low blow in the United States. Over here he would lose the fight.

Amsterdam and Oswego Undefeated In Can.-Am. Loop

(By The Canadian Press)

If Rev. Harold Martin had visions of things to come in the current Canadian-American League campaign, it's no wonder he, as President, predicted at the outset a season of "better and faster" baseball for his loop.

For, with the schedule hardly underway, they have two clubs each undefeated in four starts a boy who put one of them there with a pair of identical story book finishes and another who walked in from the outfield to hurl his squad to their initial victory.

Amsterdam Rugmakers and Oswego Netherlands are the two pacesetters, each with nothing but a nothing in the loss column after sweeping weekend competition. The Nets climbed into the van with a pair of victories over Utica Braves, taking a 10-7 count Saturday and winning 8-4 yesterday.

For Amsterdam, pennant winners last season, the road was rougher but the circuit clouting of young Pat Hoysradt ironed out the bumps. The Rugmakers downed Cornwall Bisons, 10-6 Saturday and made it two in a row yesterday only after a 10th inning homer by Hoysdrat gave them a 3-2 decision. It was the six-foot slugger's second game-winning homer of the season.

When Ottawa Senators lost 11-7 to Gloversville Glovers Saturday it was their third straight defeat, with Eddie Metro playing the outfield in each case. Yesterday's game found Metro on the pitchers' slab, however, and Senators with their initial victory, a 5-4 triumph over those same Glovers.

The two-day stand at Rome saw Ogdensburg Colts and Rome's Colonels play to a stalemate, with Colts capturing Saturday's contest 4-2, and the homesters winning 8-6 yesterday.

The New Telephone

By DOROTHY PIPER

The March family had always been in meager circumstances. The only luxury they could really afford was a telephone, and even that could scarcely be termed a luxury. It was, indeed a necessity, since Henry (Pop) March was in the "Hacking and Expressing" business.

It was an ugly old instrument, that telephone. It jutted importantly from the kitchen wall.

As time went by "Pop" gradually sold his horses and wagons. The "Hacking and Expressing" stable became "March's Long-Distance Trucking." With "Pop's" business advancement came plenty of money and the ambition to remodel the cottage. The first suggestion made by the decorator was to remove the old kitchen wall 'phone, and place a new, up-to-date instrument upon a neat little table in the living-room.

Mrs. March protested vehemently. "Why, Henry" she exclaimed, "we can't do away with that old telephone it would be like destroying an old friendship. Just think of all the precious messages that have come to us through that telephone! Then there was the time that Terry—"

Mrs. March's voice faltered, but "Pop" knew instinctively what she was going to say. She was going to recall the morning that Terry, their eldest son, had 'phoned from a distant city that he had enlisted in the navy and was leaving port at any minute.

Terry traveled a long distance; so far, in fact, that he was unheard of for seven years, and both parents, believing him dead, spoke his name with lowered voices.

Perhaps Mrs. March was a little unreasonable regarding the old telephone. Anyway, her protestations were overruled, and a man came from the telephone company and yanked the 'phone from the wall, unceremoniously tossing it into the back of his truck. In due time a new, shining instrument reposed sedately upon a table in the living-room.

Mrs. March was a little afraid of the new telephone. She was foolishly suspicious of the first call. When it came, the unfamiliar whir of the bell startled her and she gingerly lifted the receiver.

"Hello! Mrs. March? Mom?" inquired a strong, masculine voice from the other end of the wire. There was just one person in the world who called her by that name, and Mrs. March uttered a faint cry as she recognized it. "Don't get nervous, Mom," continued the voice, "it's only Terry. I'm at the station. There's somebody with me, two somebodies in fact, and we're coming right over."

Mrs. March hurried into a fresh, new housedress. She even dabbed a bit of powder on her nose and tried to encourage the natural wave in her pretty white hair. She rushed to the window just in time to see Terry step out from a taxi. She had expected to see him in uniform, but his new suit of "civvies" helped her to believe that he was home for good and all. With him was a comely young girl with sparkling, eager eyes. She carried a wee, wiggling bundle which proved to be a pocket-edition of his sailor daddy.

Words must be cleverly handled to fittingly describe a homecoming. Briefly, there were kisses, tears, embraces, and never a word of reproof because Terry had failed to write home. It was Terry himself who finally brought up the subject.

"I often wondered," he said, "why I never heard from home, because I wrote and wrote without receiving an answer. Then I began to think you had disowned me on account of the way I went off without saying good-by. One day, not long ago, I learned the reason for your silence. The boy, who had charge of the post office on my first ship, was opening many of the letters in search of money, and throwing them away because he couldn't seal them up again. My letters must have fallen into his hands."

It was quite natural, after several days at home, that Terry should want to take his wife out and introduce her to his boyhood chums. So one evening "Mom" and "Pop" were left to care for their tiny grandson. Again the new telephone came into the limelight. It was Terry, calling from a neighbor's home.

"Hello, Mom," he said in his funny sailor vernacular, "would you mind going topside and seeing if the little bo'sun is all right? My matey here is afraid he might wake up to take the watch. If he is awake, will you please give him his messkit, Mom?"

Mrs. March smiled as she replaced the receiver. For a second she stroked the new telephone with a gesture that was almost a love-touch. Afterward she hastened "topside" to the bedside of the "little bo'sun".

TORONTO STOCKS

Toronto, May 15 (CP)—The Toronto Stock Market opened the new week in sluggish trade but with a generally firm price tone. Gold stocks were up a half point in the index at noon, base metal shares were unchanged and the western oils slightly higher while the industrials was down ⅛. Volume was around bottom, showing turnover of only 157,000 shares in the first three hours.

The stronger display on the New York and London markets failed to stimulate bidding locally. Two of the cheaper issues, Chesterville and Reno, firmed on good volume and Kerr-Addison, Naybob and East Malartic also improved. Noranda Smelters gained ground and other base metals were steady.

Industrials were slow and mainly unchanged. Prices were soft for the steels, liquors and utilities. Anglo-Canadian, the only active trader in the western oil group, failed to hold more than 2 to 3 cents of an early 10-cent gain. Home and Okalta held unchanged.

WALL ST. CLOSE

New York, May 15 (AP)—The Stock Market took on a little rallying color today and leading issues edged up fractions to a point or so.

Volume dwindled after a brief active flurry in the forenoon. Transfers for the five hours were at the rate of approximately 400,000 shares. Prices were chipped down from the best near the final hour.

Kinsmen Club to Hold Theatre Night for The Eye-Clinic Fund

Sixteen Fine Prizes Will be Distributed

In an effort to replenish the depleted coffers of their eye-clinic fund, a work that is doing much good in providing treatment and in most cases eyeglasses for underprivileged children of the city and district, members of the Belleville Kinsmen Club are staging a party at the McCarthy Theatre tonight.

Two excellent motion pictures are being provided while the feature of the show wil be the distribution of sixteen handsome prizes, all silverware. These prizes have been on display in the Belle Beauty Salon, Front Street during the past week and have caused much favorable comment with the beauty of workmanship and design.

Doors open at seven o'clock and President William Hurst anticipates a large crowd. All proceeds will go to the Eye-Clinic Fund.

NO CURTAILMENT

the first Canadian tour ever undertaken by reigning British royalty would be made sharp at 10 a.m. E.D.T. Wednesday, the under-secretary said.

Decoration of old Quebec for the royal visit was nearly complete from Wolfe's Cove where their Majesties will take their first step on Canadian soil to the Provincial Legislature buildings where they will receive the province's official welcome from Premier Maurice Duplessis.

Wolfe's Cove steamship dock and its great shed stood out brightly with its hangings of tri-color and gold, the Legislature buildings in and out were done up in royal style and streets were spotlessly clean.

Yesterday the streets echoed the tramp of feet of hundreds of militia who gave dress-rehearsals of parades they will stage during the visit.

Police held an open air mass in front of the Provincial Legislature's main building and visitors and city folk jammed sidewalks on sight-seeing jaunts.

GOOD DEMAND FOR SILVER DOLLARS

So heavy has been the demand for the silver dollars struck by the Royal Canadian Mint at Ottawa in honor of the impending visit of Their Majesties to this country that several banks on Saturday reported their stocks of the dollars entirely depleted.

One enterprising management of a cigar store on Front Street collared a small supply of the coins and used them during the day Saturday as change for pleased customers. The Royal commemorative design has been one of the most pleasing of many issues of like nature, and the coins have been in been in keen demand among collectors.

TRENT CANAL OPENS

Two weeks ahead of the ordinary date on which the function occurs, due to the Royal Visit, the Trent Canal was officially opened today. Workmen went into action at eight o'clock today removing emergency dams, placed in the canal in case of flood. It is expected that if the body of Lockmaster Percy Knox, missing for some time, is in the vicinity it will be recovered today. Workmen have been notified to keep a sharp lookout for the body while working at removal of the dams.

REPLACED BY A POLICEMAN

London, May 15 (AP)—A traffic policeman is going to replace the Scotland Yard detective now assigned to the Duke of Windsor.

Scotland Yard officials said last night that bombing activities of the outlawed Irish Republican army required every man on the job, including Detective Sergeant Attfield who has been with the Duke since he abdicated.

Police Constable Kenneth, athlete and linguist, leaves shortly to relieve the Sergeant.

ANNOUNCE CREWS OF ROYAL TRAINS

Twelve Veteran Railroaders from Here Will Pilot Trains from Brockville to Brighton

Twelve veteran Belleville railwaymen were accorded the greatest honor of their lives the other day when they were chosen as part of the personnel of the crews which will man the Royal Train and Pilot Train conveying Their Majesties and entourage while enroute from Brockville to Brighton.

At the throttle of the engine of the Royal Train when it leaves Brockville for Kington will be Engineer T. H. Crozier, 37 Forin Street, while at his side will be Fireman T. H. Hallam, 9 Elm Street. Driving the Pilot Train which will precede the Royal Train will be Engineer W. V. Fairbairn, 325 Charles Street, who will be assisted in his important duties by Fireman H. A. Singer, 68 Alexander Street.

Other Belleville veterans will relieve their colleagues just before the trains leave Kingston for Toronto. These men will take the Royal Trains as far as Brighton where other crews will take over the official duties.

Piloting the Royal Train when it leaves Kingston will be Engineer F. W. Potter, 276 Charles Street and at his side will be Fireman F H. Gillett, 47 Grier Street, while at the throttle of the pilot train will be Engineer R. L. Muirhead, 407 Bleecker Avenue and Fireman J. T. Clark, 113 College Street East.

Latet reports state that a second engine will be placed in commission to assist the Royal Train when it leaves Kingston. At the throttle of this engine will be Engineer A. Calcutt and Fireman W. G. L. Hart, both of this city.

Servicing the trains while they are in the Belleville Division of the Canadian National Railways will be Machinist J. MacKenzie, 161 College Street East and Machinist Helper A. Taylor, 377 Bleecker Avenue.

All firemen on the Royal Trains are veterans of the Great War.

Dentist Electrocuted

An electrocution claimed the life of Dr. Frederick James Hosking, 33, at Hillsdale, 15 miles south of Midland, on Sunday. He apparently received the fatal shock when he switched off a sun lamp as he bathed his three-year-old son. The child was unharmed.

A man whose body was badly mutilated when run over by a train at Brantford, Saturday, was identified by relative as that of Charles H Wickson, roofing foreman for a Brantford firm. It was believed Wickson was taking a short cut home across the railway tracks when the accident occurred.

Dragging operations in the Beaver River failed to reveal trace of the body of Joseph Parks, Thornbury Transport Truck Company owner, whoe hat was found floating in the river Saturday night. Kenneth Bell told police he saw a hand and arm appear above the river surface below Thornbury dam shortly after Parks left his office Saturday.

Body Found In Creek

Gordon Ofield, 51, also was a victim of drowning. His body was found in a creek on his farm near Greensville, five miles west of Hamilton, Saturday. Relatives said Ofield had been in a habit of walking near the creek since suffering a nervous breakdown two months ago. They believed he walked too close and tumbled in.

Injuries suffered by George Hannah, 82, when he slipped while climbing a stone bridge abutment with his grandson and fell 18 feet at Colborne, Saturday, proved fatal.

3 Flying Boats Take Off

Sydney, N.S., May 15 (CP)—Three Royal Canadian Air Force flying boats took off from Sydney toda, presumably bound for the waters between Newfoundland and Canada's east coast to meet the liner Empress of Australia, bound to Quebec with King George and Queen Elizabeth.

The big machines were expected to be gone several hours after which they would return to Sydney to refuel for a dash to Gaspe to participate in the welcoming at the mouth of the St. Lawrence River. The craft took off earlier than had been anticipated originally.

Aboard one of the bombers is Mayor George Slaven of Sydney.

Destroyers Meeting Liner
By ARTHUR ANDREWS
Canadian Press Staff Writer

Aboard H.M.C.S. Saguenay, Fame Point, Que., May 15 (CP) — The Canadian destroyers Skeena and Saguenay, steaming along at 17 knots were 460 miles away from the liner Empress of Australia and the scheduled rendezvous tonight with the ship bearing the King and Queen to Canada at 7 a.m. E.S.T. (8 a.m. E.D.T.) today.

The destroyers, representing Canada's first official welcome to their Majesties on their historic visit, planned to see the rendezvous with the Empress and her escorting cruisers, the Glasgow and Southampton, between Cape Race, Nfld. and St. Paul's Island, north of Cape Bretoon. The meeting was expected to take place about 6 p.m. E.S.T. (7 p.m. E.D.T.)

Arriving here yesterday after a 520-mile voyage from their base at Halifax, crews on both ships felt keenly the delay in the Empress' schedule as a result of fog and ice off Newfoundland.

Prayers for the King and Queen were said yesterday at the divine service on both ships. While the red-and-white church flag floated from the yard arms. Commander Houghton of the Saguenay and Comamnder Grant of the Skeena read the services.

LINER

ed much closer to persons on the promenade deck enjoying a cool breeze.

At 10 a.m. the convoy cruiser Southampton catapulted an airplane from her deck. The plane soared around the ships and then raced ahead over the Gulf of St. Lawrence to report whether any fog or ice would be encountered ahead.

The cruisers Glasgow and Southampton drew so close on either side of the liner that the crews could be seen engaged in their morning exercises on the forward and quarter decks.

The King took a brisk walk about the promenade deck after the plane's departure.

Canadian Destroyers To Meet.

At the rate of 19 knots, the Empress was expected to be abeam of Cape Ray Light at 4 p.m. Shortly after that she will be met by the Canadian destroyers Skeena and Saguenay which are to give their Majesties their first welcome to Canadian waters.

The twelve-day voyage of the Empress, which started Saturday, May 6, from Portsmouth, is likely to end early Wednesday. The liner may arrive below Quebec around midnight Tuesday and tie up there, moving into Wolfe's Cove for the welcoming ceremonies sharp at 10 a.m. Wednesday.

Since shaking herself free of fog and ice yesterday, the Empress has made 18 and 19 knots steadily, encountering no more of the hazards that held her up for three and a half days on the Atlantic, delaying her arrival at Quebec by two full days.

The liner passed 50 miles south of Cape Race, most easterly tip of Newfoundland, at 2 a.m. today.

Making 19 Knots.

That was because the Empress, her landing at Quebec delayed two days by ice and fog, was "stepping on it" all of last night and early today. The big liner did 19 knots most of the time during the night after shaking free of the zone of fog and icebergs that had delayed her schedule.

The Empress pushed her way through the last of ice floes yesterday afternoon and soon after increased her speed from 2 to 18 knots. Given good weather, she was expected to reach Quebec early Wednesday morning. Escape from ice and fog was welcome to all in the royal flotilla.

Originally scheduled to arrive at Quebec Monday morning, all hope of reaching the historic city on schedule was abandoned Saturday. For a time it was believed the Empress could complete her voyage by Tuesday but as the shroud of fog continued to cling to the ship it became evident this would be impossible.

FOREIGN OFFICIALS

project as a basis on which further negotiations could be undertaken.

These negotiations will be carried out in Geneva next Monday by Foreign Secretary Viscount Halifax, Foreign Minister Georges Bonnet of France and Vladimir Potemkin, Soviet Foreign Vice-Commissar. Russia was expected to hold out for an outright triple alliance among Britain, France and the Soviet during the conversation.

Won't Amplify Statement

Prime Minister Chamberlain told the House of Commons today that the Foreign Secretary would go to the Geneva meeting but said he could not amplify at present his statement to the House last Wednesday outlining the British plan.

(Reports reaching London from Moscow said British Ambassador there had received a reply to the Government's proposals, but it was expected the note would not be made public until the Government had time to study it.)

Mr. Chamberlain announced a foreign affairs debate would be held on Friday and that the white paper outlining future policy for Palestine would be published Wednesday at 7 p.m. (2 p.m. E.D.T.). He said only one day of debate would be allowed on the Palestine formula.

The Labor opposition protested loud and long when Richard Butler, Foreign Under-Secretary, announced Sir Maurice Peterson, the British Ambassador to Spain, had accepted an invitation to watch General Franco's victory parade in Madrid next Friday.

Put in Bad Position

They claimed the British government was being put in the position of publicly condoning a breach of the Anglo-Italian agreement which stipulated Italian troops should leave Spain immediately after the civil war ceased.

The government, on the other hand, insisted it was usual diplomatic practice for Ambassadors to accept such an invitation.

J. J. Davidson, Labor, asked if the government had "taken into consideration the fact that many of these Italian troops (who will march in the parade) were responsible for the deaths of British sailors."

KING MAY VISIT

ial that "the impression had been given that the royal party is in danger and that the shipping route they followed is a perilous one."

"This is nonsense," it added. "The North Atlantic route is perfectly safe. But delays occur on it at this time of year. Authorities had been warned. They should have sent the King and Queen on a more southerly route. It would have taken an extra day but would have saved two days' holdup in the ice zone."

May Visit Annually

The Daily Mirror, commenting on the delays which will prevent Their Majesties arriving in Quebec before Tuesday, said:—

"This week-end many thousand watchers have asked whether at this season of the year meteorologists or navigation experts could not have foreseen these impediments and so modified the route taken by the Empress of Australia as to secure the King and Queen as swift a passage as enjoyed by the humblest traveller on a voyage that is normally much safer than a run on any great motor road in England."

Prediction that the Sovereign may visit the Dominions annally in the future was voiced in an editorial in the Observer (Conservative).

"The first occasion of Canada's receiving a visit from her reigning sovereign will not be the last," the paper said.

"Facilities and habit of travel are so extending that within a measurable time it might conceivably have become the established custom for the King to appear annually in each of his dominions.

The editorial reminded its readers that "Under the Statute of Westminster, George VI is the King of Canada with exactly the same immediacy that he is King of England."

The Star said in an editorial that "Despite many other suggestions, neither the Canadian nor British Governments thought it necessary to add to rather than curtail the royal tour"

Add Lost Days Is Advice

The paper continued:

"Perhaps the true importance of this visit of Their Majesties to the Dominion even now is not fully appreciated in Whitehall, but there remains little doubt that the most sensible thing to do is to add the two lost days to the itinerary and thus silence the protests of many thousands of Canadians who have mapped out their timetables as carefully as did organizers of the royal tour."

"Alterations in the plans will mean a heavy financial loss allied with a sense of grievance toward those responsible for what can only be described a a blunder in sending be described as a blunder in sending the royal liner on so northerly a course," the editorial said.

GOVERNMENT ENGINEER INSPECTS THE MOIRA

Further progress in the matter of flood control for the Moira River is indicated with the expected arrival in Belleville today of Mr. D. W. McLachlan, chief engineer of the Dominion Department of Transport, who will engage in a thorough inspection of the river with the special flood control committee of council.

Members of the committee are Alderman Burton Jennings, chairman of the Regional Planning and Flood Committee, with Aldermen Haig and Lewis and city engineer Chas. Mott.

Pastoral Letter Read On Royal Visit

At all the Masses on Sunday, in the Church of St. Michael the Archangel, a letter was read addressed to all the parishes in the Archdiocese by the Most Rev. M. J. O'Brien, Archbishop of Kingston on the visit of Their Majesties, the King and Queen to Canada. After referring to the singular honour conferred by Their Majesties, the King and Queen in their presence in Canada and the enthusiastic welcome they will receive from a devoted and loyal people who recognize in our lawful sovereigns the supreme civil authority governing us, he stated that it is interesting and refreshing on this occasion to review the teachings of the Church in regard to our duty towards our rightful ruler.

In the Catechism we read the words of St. Paul, taken from Romans XIII that we obey the laws and respect the public officers, "not only for wrath, but also for conscience sake". We also pray (1 Tim. 11) "for all who are in high station that we may lead a quiet and peaceful life". St. Paul gives the fundamental reason why our lawful rulers are to be obeyed when he says (Romans XIII) "Let every soul be subject to higher powers; for there is no power but from God; and those that are, are ordained of God. Therefore he that resisteth the power, resisteth the ordinance of God." Herein is the reason why the Church has been for two thousand years the protagonist and defender of lawful authority because all lawful authorities come from God, and in obeying and respecting it the individual is obeying Almighty God.

Let us make the King's visit the occasion of renewing our gratitude to God, for His blessings upon our beloved land, and of deciding to do our share to make our country more peaceful, more happy and more prosperous. Let us by our words, and especially by our actions preach the gospel of peace and of brotherly love, among individuals and nations. Let us pray, too, for a continuance of God's blessings upon our great commonwealth of Nations and upon Their Majesties.

JOSEPH HURST GIVEN 2 MONTHS

Pleads Guilty to Receiving Stolen Goods in a Previous Court

Joseph Hurst, Belleville, was sentenced to serve two months in the common jail when he appeared for sentence before Magistrate E. J. Butler K.C., in today's local police court, Hurst having pleaded guilty to a charge of receiving stolen goods in a previous court.

A second charge of breaking and entering the Holland warehouse and stealing a quantity of tea was dismissed, it being established that no accused person could be charged with stealing goods after having been convicted of receiving the same goods. Charles A. Payne K.C., representing Hurst, introduced Ontario Law Reports to substantiate his contention that his client could not be charged with the theft of a quantity of tea after he had been convicted of receiving the tea as stolen goods.

"One offence includes the other", contended Mr. Payne. His Worship agree and after dismissing the theft charge, sentenced Hurst to two months in the common jail

"This man was the principal party in this case, because he offered money to others to steal the tea," suggested Crown Attorney B. O. Donnan K.C.

"I believe Victor Whitely was the ring leader and I intend to break up this combination", added His Worship, who had previously sentenced Whitely to the Ontario Reformatory for the theft of the tea. Two other accomplices were given suspended sentences.

Two East Moira Street women were bound over to keep the peace, after His Worship heard the evidence in a common assault case, the result of a quarrel between the two women.

Three men appeared on charges of intoxication and following pleas of guilty the trio was given a week to pay.

Nazi Parade In Danzig Tonight

Warsaw, May 15 (CP-Havas)—A Nazi demonstration will take place in Danzig tonight, reports reaching Warsaw from the Free City said today.

Plans for a parade, in which storm troops recently arrived from East Prussia will participate, were completed by Nazi party leaders in the Free City last night. Counsellor Mieller of the German Foreign Office was present at the conference.

Meanwhile, the departure of War Minister Taduesz Kasprzycki for Paris to meet military leaders there and the report that the Vice Foreign Minister, Miroslav Arcisnewski, would leave shortly for Moscow were regarded here as further proof of Polish determination to resist any attack on Danzig and the Polish Corridor.

PERSONALITY OF KING GEORGE VI SERMON THEME

Impressive Patriotic Service Held at Bridge Street United Church — Royal Pictures Are Shown

This memorable week when Their Majesties King George and Queen Elizabeth step on Canadian soil for the first tour of Canada by a reigning sovereign of the Empire and by the Queen was marked by a special patriotic service at Bridge Street United Church Sunday evening. Rev. Dr. James Semple, minister, spoke on the personality of the King. The music was patriotic in character. The large choir under direction of Mr. Alec Gordon sang effectively the great hymn by John Oxenham, "My Own Dear Land," and that by William Blake "And did those feet in ancient time" ending with the lines:

"Till we have built Jerusalem
In England's green and pleasant land."

The congregation and choir sang the hymn "Lord of the Lands" by Albert D. Watson and the National Anthem.

Coloured pictures were shown to illustrate the lives of the Royal family and the Kingship.

The King's Personality

In his study of the character and personality of King George Sixth, Dr. Semple declared that King George belonged to the twentieth century, that he understood his age and that Britain had had kings who did not understand their time and whose faces looked backward when they should have been looking forward.

The King is a student of economic and social questions, it was indicated. He has a very large library, and keeps very close to the people and so from knowledge of books and knowledge of the people he knows realities. "Think of his great interest for the poor people and how his heart is affected by the poverty of some of his subjects. Think of his great interest in connection with the housing problem in the cities," remarked the minister.

"He is very popular with boys" Dr. Semple stated, telling of the experiments the Monarch has taken with public school boys and boys from the factories who have been privileged to meet for two weeks in summer, in pleasant natural surroundings to enjoy the great outdoors. As Prince he planned the place of meeting, visited it once each week and spoke to the boys.

The Peace King

"More than any other king we may speak of him as the peace King". Dr. Semple stated. During the crises the King has been very close to the Prime Minister. Their Majesties' hope is peace as a great reality for Britain and the world.

Reference was made to the nobility and happiness of the Royal household over which the King and Queen preside. The Bible is the most important book in the King's palace. He reads it daily and it is read to the Royal family.

"The King and Queen are very close to Canada at this moment and there is in the King a recognition of the fundamental fact that Sunday is a day of rest." Many people in Canada are impatient the Royal train may not stop on Sundays. But observance of Sunday is a rule of the King's family.

The minister said there was danger ahead if the people do not pay more respect to the Sabbath. Many do things on Sunday they have all week to do. Remember what our forefathers did," he advised.

It is also to be noted that there is a place given to the Church of God in the coronation of British kings. The King's strict observance and attendance at church was marked. The present King and Queen in the days of King George Fifth brought the greetings of the Throne to the union of the two Presbyterian Churches in Scotland and also the union of the Methodist Churches in the Old Land.

"All these things are evidences of a noble personality, Long may the King and Queen reign and may lasting peace come to all the people," was the prayer of Dr. Semple.

A number of colored views were shown at the close of the service. Appropriately the first picture was that of Queen Mary, as it was Mother's Day. Other pictures were of London, Buckingham Palace, Ludgate Hill, Westminster Abbey, the King in his coronation robes, a picture telling the traditional story of the bringing of the Stone of Scone, on which the rulers are crowned, to London, the crown sceptre and orb, Queen Elizabeth in her coronation robes, Princess Elizabeth, the flag which has meant liberty to British subjects and to those who are not subjects of the Empire.

Of the Queen the minister said, "We are fortunate in having a queen who is interested only in the best for her own household and for the land.

"We ought to all thank God that we are British subjects."

Principals in Drama of the Sea

Picked up boat load by boat load, unaware of the fate of their companions, 44 seasmen were rescued following a head-on crash between two Nova Scotian fishing boats 150 miles out in the Atlantic. The crash, between the Isabell Parker seen at the RIGHT, and the Edith C. Rose, took place in a dense fog, but only one casualty resulted, that apparently from a heart attack during the collison. The captains of the two boats involved are shown, LEFT, Albert C. Hines, 60, TOP, of the Edith C. Rose who related a dramatic account of the event, and George Goodwin of the Isabell Parker.

Not Quite Unanimous on Conscription

While the British government, and seemingly most of the nation, endorse Prime Minister Chamberlain's conscription policy as a necessity brought about by the dangerous European situation, there are dissenters, and the picture shows part of a parade of 2,000 members of the No Conscription League that marched through London's streets with placards proclaiming their stand on enforced military training.

Acquitted Following Death of Son

Acquitted by a New York jury on a charge of first degree manslaughter, following the chloroforming of his imbecile 16-year-old son, Louis Greenfield kisses his wife, Anna, before they leave the court to 'start a new life'. Greenfield, during the trial, said it was 'the will of God, the best thing for him', that led him to painlessly put to death his son who had never progressed mentally beyond a two-year-old. The jury, composed mostly of married men and women, deliberated four hours before reaching its verdict.

Zog and Queen in Turkish Haven

Seen as they arrived at Istanbul where they were afforded sanctuary by the Turkish government, are King Zog and Queen Geraldine of Albania, who held their former kingdom when the troops of Il Duce poured in to take over the country in the name of Italian King Victor Emmanuel. The queen is gradually recovering from shock and privation caused by her flight which took place but a few days after she had given birth to a son. Zog, a Mohammedan, is reported to be a candidate for the throne of Syria, where it is felt he would receive Moslem support as a bulwark against the inroads of Italian Fascist ambitions.

When the train bearing Their Majesties King George VI and Queen Elizabeth leaves Ottawa on Saturday, May 20, Preceded by the pilot train, on its journey over Canadian National lines to eastern Ontario points; it will be manned on its run to Brockville by a crew whose service with the National System totals 167 years. Halt! Who Goes There?

Getting final instructions from Sergeant Coombes at Portsmouth before they boarded the Empress of Australia, Top, are the eight Royal Marines and two buglers whose presence is required throughout the royal tour. They will act as sentries outside the "royal apartments", wherever these m be. In charge of the King's horses at Ottawa, where Their Majesties will drive about in a horse-drawn coach are six members of "N" division, R.C.M.P., who will act as riders and postillions. Corporal A. S. Wilson, BOTTOM LEFT, heads the group of Constables A. Tilley, E. E. Muffit, T. T. Birkett, H. G. E. Chipman and G. E. Francis.

Dramatic Scene From U. S. Murder Hearing

Screams, shouts, imprecations and accusations filled the town hall police station at Germantown, Pennsylvania, when a dozen persons involved in the sensational Philadelphia arsenic murder-for-insurance ring, blamed for deaths extending over an area of four states were given a hearing and ordered held for a grand jury session. Each of the accused testified in the presence of the others and charges and counter-charges were flung back and forth. In this dramatic picture taken in the court room, Mrs. Joseph Romualdo, widow of an alleged victim of the poison ring points an accusing finger at stoli Mrs. Marie Woloshyn, screaming "She's in this just like me!"

WESTERN WHEAT GROWERS GIVEN 70c FOR WHEAT

Wheat Legislation in House Wound up by Passing of Canada Grain Act

YOUTH TRAINING

Ottawa, May 16 (CP)—Western wheat growers today were assured of an initial price of 70 cents, no more and no less, on their 1939 crop.

The long and bitterly debated issue was finally settled last night when the House of Commons wound up the Government's wheat legislation by giving third reading to the Wheat Board Bill, which sets the minimum price, and to the amended Canada Grain Act.

The House reverted to the wheat question after a day spent discussing monetary policy generally and giving second reading to the Youth Training Bill. Critics of the Government's wheat policy will have a final chance to air their views during debate on the Agriculture Department estimates.

John Blackmore, Social Credit leader, concluded the long wheat debate with a last appeal for an 80-cent minimum price, similar to that of the current crop year.

"You wouldn't need to bring in all the principles of Social Credit (to finance it) but the principle of the state creation of money, backed and governed by the amount of production in the country," he told the Government.

London—Temperature 48; rain.
Paris—Temperature 48; cloudy.

Why the Weather!

Highland climate! Many hikers and campers are now planning to travel towards the mountains for recreation. Elevation coupled with the exposure is an important climatic factor in making mountain climates agreeably different from lowlands. Mountain climate cannot be generalized, since exposure plays so important a part. Elevated places have more intense sunlight with more violet and ultraviolet rays, which is favorable to quick tanning and sunburn. Three-fourths of the sun's rays reach the earth's surface at 6000 feet, while only about one-half reaches it at sea level. But in spite of this the temperature is three degrees cooler with every rise of 1000 feet. The rainfall increases up to 6000 feet, after which it diminishes.

HITLER PURGES ARMY COMMAND OF 5 GENERALS

Opponents of 'Lightning War' Strategy Watched Says Mme. Tabouis

GESTAPO ACTIVE

Goering, Hess and Hitler Keep Surveillance Over High Command

Paris, May 16 (CP-Havas)—Chancellor Hitler and Field Marshal Goering continue "purging" the Reich Army high command of those officers who oppose their "lightning war" strategy, with five prominent commanders dismissed in the past six weeks, Mme. Genevieve Tabouis reported in the newspaper L'Oeuvre (Radical-Socialist) today.

Officers of the high command are continually watched by the German Secret Police and officials under Rudolf Hess, Hitler's deputy in the Nazi party, the foreign affairs commentator said.

Surveillance By Police.

"This surveillance culminates in sanctions and dismissals when Goering and Hitler perceive that officers do not entertain their strategic plans providing for a 'lightning war'," Mme. Tabouis added. "On April 1 Generals Fritz Loeb and Joachim von Stuelpnagel, respectively Director of Industry and Raw Materials and Substitute Products and Quarter Master General of the Army and General Quada were discharged.

"During recent days General Kurt Liebmann, Commandant of the German Military Academy, and General Geyer, Commander of the Fifth Army Corps, were discharged."

Ivan Maisky to Represent Russia At Large Meeting

Geneva, May 16 (CP-Havas)—The Soviet Government today informed the League of Nations' secretariat that Ivan Maisky, Ambassador at London, would represent Russia at the session of the League Council opening next Monday

The move came as a surprise to diplomatic observers who thought that Vladimir Potemkin, Soviet Foreign Vice-Commissar, would come to Geneva to meet Foreign Secretary Viscount Halifax of Great Britain and Foreign Minister Georges Bonnet of France to iron out difficulties in the Anglo-Soviet negotiations for an anti-aggression agreement.

DIES OF NEUROTIC TUMOR

Detroit, May 16 (CP)—Body of Kenneth, infant son of Patrolman Archie Cameron of the Detroit Police Force and Mrs. Cameron, was turned over to specialists today for an autopsy. The child died yesterday from a neurotic tumor, an affliction which brought death in all 30 cases on record.

Kenneth became ill in February. Attempts to halt the ailment by blood transfusions and other means proved futile.

British Princesses Go Exploring 'New World' of Every-Day Life

London, May 16 (CP)—The Daily Mail said today the subway ride Princesses Elizabeth and Margaret Rose took yesterday was Queen Mary's idea and the beginning of a new course of training in how other people live.

Queen Elizabeth was said to have approved the plan when she left the children in their grandmother's care. Under the plan the Princesses would make unannounced trips on buses and trolleys to every-day London affairs such as flower shows and exhibitions.

"The Royal children are exploring a new world—it is a world of every-day life," said the Daily Mail. "Their journey in London's underground yesterday was for them an experience as novel and exciting as an invitation to the palace would be to most children. For once there were no fanfares, no salutes, no bows and curtsies when Princess Elizabeth and her sister walked out.

"There is a purpose behind this expedition. It was to give the Princesses some knowledge of how life goes on beyond the glitter and glamour of the court. This was the first of the lessons planned for them by Queen Mary with the approval of the King and Queen. Here is true wisdom. It is well that these contacts with the people should be made by a young girl who may one day be the queen of a great democracy.

"It is intended that they should see for themselves how people of the country live and how they go about their daily lives—that they should learn at first hand something of the human element in the machinery of the world's greatest human centre. The mind that is directing them is that of Queen Mary.

"When Queen Elizabeth sailed for Canada she left both of her daughters in her care. Both the Queen and Queen Mary hold strong views on which they are agreed about the way in which the two little girls should be trained for the difficult life which lies before them. Queen Mary does not believe that Princess Elizabeth as the heir presumptive should go to school.

"But she does believe that the children should be prevented from seeing life only from the viewpoint of the palace or through the eyes of a single class."

HISTORIC QUEBEC EAGERLY AWAITS COMING OF KING

21-Gun Royal Salute Will Boom Out the News of Landing on Canadian Soil

MAJESTIC GRANDEUR

Long Chain of Beacons Will be Lighted as Liner Sails up St. Lawrence

By LEON EDEL
Canadian Press Staff Writer

Quebec, May 16 (CP)—Historic Quebec, teeming with expectant thousands, today impatiently ticked off the hours that brought King George and Queen Elizabeth nearer on the epoch-making visit to Canada.

When the King and Queen set foot on Canadian soil a little after 10.30 a.m. tomorrow a 21-gun royal salute will boom out the news from the Citadel. It will be heard by the city's 150,000 inhabitants, as well as thousands who have been pouring in during the past few days.

The fact there had been a two-day delay as a result of fog and ice off the Canadian coast was forgotten in joyous anticipation. For the first time since General Wolfe won this country for Britain, 180 years ago, its King was about to walk among its citizenry.

Down at Wolfe's Cove, not far from where the great soldier landed his men for their final assault against Quebec, the big shep wrapped in multi-colored decorations, at which the Empress of Australia will be berthed, was ready for the coming of royalty.

POLAND SHUTTLES TROOPS ACROSS DANZIG TERRITORY

Army on Wheels Move Back and Forth Between Gdynia and Corridor

NAZIS PICKET STORES

By ROBERT RIEFELL
(Copyright, 1939, By The Havas News Agency)

Warsaw, May 16 (CP-Havas)—Poland is keeping a virtual army in Danzig by shuttling troops continuously across the Free City territory in armored trains.

The Poles are reported reliably here to have taken all necessary measures to prepare either for a direct invasion of Danzig from East Prussia or for a Nazi "insurrection" within the Free City. Information here is that the Nazi High Command has decided upon an economic severance of Danzig from Poland preparatory to its return to the Reich.

With economic interests in Danzig as well as 45,000 Polish Nationals, Poland is keeping an army on wheels moving in a steady stream back and forth between Gdynia and the Polish corridor.

The Polish troop trains have been observed in the last few days moving between Tczew, on the Vistula River at the Danzig-Polish frontier on the south, and Gdynia on the north. Nominally these armored trains are moving troops to and from Gdynia and Polish Pomerania. Actually they are the same troops engaged in a new mode of garrisoning by the shuttle method, informed observers said.

Disappointment Felt at Kingston

Kingston, Ont., May 16 (CP)—Keenest of disappointment at the curtailing of the visit of King George and Queen Elizabeth to Kingston was expressed here today.

Originally it had been planned that their Majesties would attend Divine service at Fort Henry and then make an eight mile drive through the streets of Kingston. The revised plans mean that their Majesties will not arrive in the city until 7.45 p.m. (E.D.T.) on Sunday, and an abbreviated drive will be made.

Canadian Destroyers Will Lead Royal Flotilla Below Old Quebec Some Time Tonight

Aboard E.M.S. Empress of Australia, May 16 (CP)—The liner carrying the King and Queen to Quebec sped alone the Gaspe coast in glorious sunshine this morning.

Charged with escorting their Majesties through Canadian waters to Quebec, the destroyers Skeena and Saguenay steamed proudly today at the head of the royal flotilla hastening up the St. Lawrence River.

At 7 a.m., E.S.T. (8 a.m. E.D.T.) the Empress and her convoy of two cruisers and two Canadian destroyers were opposite Riviere Almartre and expected to reach Father Point at 2.30 p.m. At Father Point a pilot will board the big liner to take the royal vessel on the last lap of the 11-day trip from England.

The royal flotilla was well up the St. Lawrence River. The weather was the most enjoyable since the Empress left Portsmouth May 6.

Proud Procession

The procession was a proud one, with the destroyers Skeena and Saguenay and the cruisers Glasgow and Southampton following the Empress.

The Canadian warships met the royal squadron late yesterday in Cabot Strait, manning the ships and cheering his Majesty as they passed. The King, who reviewed the Skeena and Saguenay from the bridge of the Empress, sent a message to the Skeena thanking the Canadian navy for the welcome and congratulating it on the splendid appearance of the ships.

In reply members and officers of the destroyers' company expressed appreciation of the honor conferred upon them.

One-Sentence Speech by Hitler

Berlin, May 16 (AP)—Chancellor Hitler continued today his inspection of the fortifications opposite France, fortifications for which his military experts claimed "invincibility" and of which the Chancellor himself said:

"In these constructions, my fellow citizens, imagine yourselves the difference between today and the past."

Hitler made his one-sentence speech to a cheering crowd after a spectacular sham battle yesterday which the military experts said demonstrated the impregnability of the fortifications.

His tour took him from Aachen to Trier in the western fortified zone today.

WOMAN DROWNED AS CAR PLUNGES

Three Occupants Succeed in Escaping from Submerged Auto

Ottawa, May 16 (CP)—Mrs. Oscar St. Denis, 38, Ottawa, was drowned last night and three others escaped with minor injuries when the automobile in which they were riding crashed through the guard rail at Dow's Lake in the south end of the city.

John Lesage, brother of Mrs. St. Denis, said he was driving up an incline near the lake when he was blinded by the lights of an approaching automobile and was unable to avoid crashing into the rail.

Lesage, Wilbert Corcoran and Miss Phyllis Stonier, all of Ottawa, were treated in hospital for cuts and bruises about the head after they escaped from the submerged automobile and were helped to shore by passersby. Miss Stonier remained in hospital.

Council Takes No Action On Motion to Limit Parking To Fifteen-Minute Period

Recommendation Passed on Thursday is Referred Back at Council Meeting

ALDERMEN TO BE PAID

Board of Education to Get Answer on Addition to School in Two Weeks

Parking regulations in the city will remain as incorporated in the present Parking By-Law, when the recommendation passed in committee on Thursday night last, limiting parking to fifteen minutes in the business section and having angle parking on one side and parallel parking on the other, was referred back to the committee at the regular session of the City Council held on Monday night in the Council Chambers. A large deputation of the merchants of which Charles T. Dolan was the spokesman, appeared before the council protesting most emphatically against the recommendation and requesting that the Parking By-Law be left as now constituted. The members of the council agreed with the suggestions as put forth by the deputation but Mayor Bone expressed his displeasure with the existing conditions regarding parking and hoped that in the near future something would be done to alleviate the congested condition.

School Addition Asked For

A deputation from the Board of Education including Russell Wotten, Chairman of the Board, submitted a requisition by-law for $35,000 for which to build an addition to Queen Mary School to relieve the congested condition at that school and this by-law was referred back to the next regular meeting of the council, when a definite answer will be given the Board of Education. The council would have acted on the by-law at last night's session but at the present time the council is endeavoring to secure relief from taxation for the citizens by being given permission to use some of the surplus of the Sinking Fund for the reduction of the tax rate and it was expressed that it would be unwise to ask the Government for the concession to use this surplus and at the same time ask the permission of the Municipal Board for the privilege of issuing debentures to cover the cost of this addition Both of the above questions were thoroughly discussed before being acted upon and the council put in a busy night, it being a session of some considerable length.

Aldermen To Be Paid

A by-law fixing the rate of pay for Aldermen at $5 per regular meeting and $5 per committee meeting with special meetings of the council at the same rate, the same to be retroactive to January 1st, 1939, was passed through the various stages without discussion. Aldermen Haig, Kennedy and Marshall voted against the by-law and

BROKEN CIRCUIT INTERRUPTS LIGHTING SERVICE ON EAST HILL

Failure of the electric lighting system in sections of the east hill last evening for a period was due to a broken circuit in the wiring system of Corby's Park, it was stated today by manager O. H. Scott of the local Public Utilities Commission today. Considerable work was necessary to trace the broken circuit before service could be restored.

FLAGS, ARM BANDS AND BANNERS WILL BE SUPPLIED FREE

Notice was served by the committee in charge of the school children's excursion to Kingston on May 21st., today that all flags, arm bands, banners and other equipment for the children will be supplied free of charge by the committee.

Numerous requests made by parents regarding the size of flags led to the discovery that many contemplated private purchase of the flags. These are being bought in quantity by the committee and will be supplied free, parents are advised.

NEW LIME-KILN STARTED TODAY

Located on his farm on the seventh concession of Tyendinaga, the new lime-kiln recently completed by workmen under his supervision, was officially opened today by Mr. Harry Smith, Belleville coal and ice purveyor.

Fires in the kiln were lighted shortly after noon today and the kiln is expected to go into production immediately. There is a plentitude of limestone on the property, it is reported, and it is expected the output will be a large one. Mr. Smith removed several acres of standing timber from the property some years ago, and since that time has devoted his energy to the construction of the new kiln.

FRESH MINT AND ASPARAGUS OFFERED FOR SALE ON MARKET

If there is a rush within the next day or so on city butcher shops for succulent cuts of Spring lamb, the city market can be blamed. For today in all its redolent flavor new mint was offered for the first time this season. Bunches sold at five cents each and business was brisk during the early hours.

Only a few vendors were doing business today, as farmers apparently are busy at seeding operations. Asparagus was quoted at fifteen cents and two bunches for twenty-five cents. Potatoes were fairly plentiful with good quality stock offered at $1.55 for ninety-pound bags.

Interesting Cases Described in Report Of V. O. Nurse

Held in the Y.M.C.A. last evening the monthly meeting of the Victorian Order of Nurses committee was featured by an interesting description by Miss Soutar, nurse in charge, of two cases. Miss Soutar in her report, pointed out that 507 visits had been made during the month to 178 patients, and 65 new cases had been attended to.

Miss Soutar gave two contrasting pictures in the case histories she described. One told of a modest family struggling against hardship, the children well trained, the mother industrious and cheerful, and the father hard working and hopeful in spite of disasters. The well kept rooms of the little home made visiting it a pleasure.

In sharp contrast was the home of a family in which there were 14 children, the mother totally incompetent to keep a home in order. The poverty of the family was almost unbelievable, and the family conditions deplorable. There was still hope for some of the older boys and girls if a chance were given them.

Mr. P. C. MaGuire presided for the business part of the meeting, and the financial report and presented by Mr. E. S. James. Plans were completed for tag day.

Utilities Commissioners Favor Annual Stipend

Pass Motion to Make Application to Council to Pass Necessary By-law

$400 TO CHAIRMAN

Members of the Belleville Public Utilities Commission went on record at their regular meeting this morning as favoring the annual payment of $400 to the chairman of the Commission and the sum of $300 for each of the other two Commissioners.

To this end a motion was passed asking the secretary to make application to city council to pass the necessary by-law authorizing the Commission to pay this sum.

"We believe the workman is worthy of his hire, and that the chairman of this Commission and the Commissioners, in that they spend many hours weekly, be recompensed for the loss of time in the position, it was stated by Commissioner Mayor Bone in seconding the motion advanced by Commissioner Clifford Baragar.

"It might be well to draw to the attention of the citizens of Belleville the fact that this annual payment has full authorization of the Ontario Hydro Commission, and that such money will come out of the combined profits of the local utilities," commented Chairman M. P. Duff.

In St. Thomas the five members of that Public Utility are paid the sum annually of $200 each, and in Peterborough the remuneration of the chairman is set at $600, and that of the other two Commissioners at $400.

Turn Down Request for Grant

An application for a grant of $100 made by the special committee in charge of the Belleville school children's excursion to Kingston on May 21st was turned down. A motion that this be paid was advanced by Commissioner Bone, with the proviso that one-half the sum be taken from the Waterworks Department and one-half from the Hydro branch. Believing that a precedent would be set in the matter of grants, this motion was defeated by the votes of Commissioner Baragar and chairman Duff.

"We have never given a grant to anyone, and we're afraid to start now," stated the chairman.

Employees' Salaries Increased

With the exception of senior office employees, nominal increases of salary were granted all employees of the Commission except those of the gas plant. An average raise of two dollars per month was granted upon the recommendation of manager O. H. Scott. As yet, it was pointed out, many employees of the Commission are below the salary standards of those paid by the Ontario Commission.

PRIZE WINNERS AT THEATRE PARTY

Sixteen people today are the proud possessors of handsome pieces of silver given away at the Kinsmen's Club theatre party at the McCarthy theatre last night, where a near capacity crowd enjoyed excellent motion picture entertainment.

Between performances tickets were drawn from a metal container by R. D. Arnott, M.P.P., and presented by him to the fortunate holders. He was assisted by President William Hurst and Kinsmen Gardner Duff, Don Thomas, Orliff Lloyd and others.

Prior to the drawing, the appreciation of the club for the generous response of the general public to the appeal for funds for their Eye-Clinic Fund through the medium of the theatre was expressed by President Hurst.

Winners of the silver prizes were: Miss Chloe Gaffney, Miss Kitty Howie, Miss Mary Carmichael, Miss Florence Waldron, Miss Agnes Keene, Mrs. George Frechette, Herbert Muir, Mrs. Balyx, Miss Jean Shorey, Miss Lambros, Mrs. Chas. Symons, Mrs. Gordon, Mrs. Morley Smith, Miss Jean Sprung, Jule Cole, Mrs. Jeffery, Mrs. Cretney and Miss Sonderberg.

SOUVENIR BOOKLET ISSUED TO CHILDREN

An attractive booklet, specially prepared by the Ontario Department of Education to commemorate the history-making visit of the King and Queen to Canada has been issued and is the gift of the Department to Belleville school children as well as the children of the Province.

While most of the pages are devoted to the program of the Royal tour and other incidentals connected therewith, suggestions for programs marking observation of Empire Day in the schools are included.

In a foreword presented by Dr. L. J. Simpson, Ontario Minister of Education, mention is made that Empire Day this year will be observed in schools of the Province on May 23, and that it is assumed the public will be invited to attend the exercises.

On the second page is a large reproduction of a photo of Their Majesties. Other illustrations are highlights of well-known Canadian scenes. The booklet will be widely appreciated as a souvenir by many of the children.

Gas Plant Not to be Closed Says M. P. Duff

In view of the fact considerable discussion has been aroused over the rumoured closing of the city gas plant, members of the Belle- Public Utilities Commission at their regular meeting this morning reached unanimous agreement that "no thought of closing the gas plant was being entertained at the present time."

"I hope this statement will put some of the citizens at rest," commented chairman M. P. Duff. "Some of the gas users have been worried over the matter. As far as we know now there is no talk of closing the plant and cutting off this important service."

ROYAL STANDARD AND FLAGS DECK SCHOOL FOR DEAF

Hundreds of Pupils Prepare Souvenirs and Diary of Visit of Their Majesties the King and Queen to Canada — Visit of Duke and Duchess of York in 1901 Recalled

The Royal Standard surmounted by the British Crown gleaming in traditional scarlet and gold, about which the bright colors of the Union Jack, Canadian Ensigns, individual flags bearing the Cross of St. George, Cross of St. Andrew and Cross of St. Patrick, are artistically draped were placed yesterday above the entrance to the Ontario School for the Deaf. Four large Union Jacks float bravely from facades of the building to the left and right of the entrance. A short distance away on the school flagpole another large Union Jack whips itself in the breeze.

The decorations were received yesterday from the Ontario Department of Public Works, and were placed in position, according to instructions received by Supt. W. J. Morrison and members of the school faculty. They are the official government decorations which will grace all public buildings in Ontario.

Pupils Prepare Souvenirs

But commemoration of the Royal Visit is not confined to decoration of the outside facades of the buildings alone. Inside an intense patriotic feeling is being demonstrated by the pupils and faculty.

Representatives of the Ontario-Intelligencer visiting one of the class-rooms yesterday saw pupils engaged in preparing souvenir books of the occasion. Photographs of the King and Queen, the Royal Princesses, and many incidents pertaining to the visit are being carefully clipped from newspaper, magazine and periodical.

A personal diary of the visit from the time Their Majesties left England until they arrive at their home in June will be kept by pupils. Each day's progress of the tour is pointed out by the staff and the day's page written by students. These daily accounts of the Royal progress are being carefully kept and will be pasted alongside pictures and photographs pertaining to that particular day.

Pupils are taking a keen interest in the visit. Classrooms are decorated with small Union Jacks. Letters to parents are being carefully written. These describe the activities of the school prior to the Royal Visit and "voice" the hope of the children that they will be permitted a glimpse of the Royal Couple when the train passes through Belleville.

For unlike other schoolchildren of the city and district pupils of the O.S.D. will not make the trek to Kingston to see their King and Queen. Instead it is the present plan that they will march on Sunday evening to the railway station where they will take up position in a body to view the Royal Train as it glides through the city on its way to Toronto.

Visit of 1901 Recalled

All of which recalls that memorable day in 1901 when a body of pupils of the school prepared an address, and marched to the station to see the Duke and Duchess of Cornwall and York, as their train paused here for a few minutes before proceeding to Toronto.

All preparations had been made carefully in advance. Pre-visit communications with the Royal party brought word that the Duke and Duchess would see the children. The address to be read to them was carefully prepared and rehearsed.

Then came the great day. Two hundred and fifty strong the children marched to the station. But here disappointment met them. The crowd that surged about the platform, filled up the space allotted to the students, and all efforts to remove it were futile. The train pulled into the station, and the Duke and Duchess appeared outside one of the coaches. Pushed in the background by the excited crowd, the most of the children could not get a glimpse of them. But efforts on the part of Superintendent Mathison succeeded in providing a space for two representatives of the school, Fred Terrell and Violet Grey.

Tribute by the Deaf

The address was "signed" by Terrell and interpreted vocally by Miss Grey. "It read"—May it please your Royal Highnesses—The deaf children of Canada loved your good grandmother, Queen Victoria—they love your father and mother—and they love you. May you have a long and happy life—"The Deaf Children of Ontario."

The Duke and Duchess graciously shook hands with Terrell and Miss Grey and thanked them for the address, expressing their mutual regret that the large crowd had prevented them from seeing the student body.

TRENTON BAND PRESENT CONCERT

Large Crowd Present at Ottawa Air Station

Ottawa Journal of Monday's issue carries the following comment regarding the Royal Canadian Air Force band from the Trenton Air Force base, now in Ottawa awaiting the arrival there of Their Majesties, the King and Queen—

"Large crowds gathered at the Ottawa Air Station at eleven o'clock Sunday morning to listen to a concert played by the already famous R.C.A.F. band from the Trenton Station. Among the many officers of different units present were Air Vice Marshal Croil, Chief of the Air Staff; Wing Commander Edwards and Wing Commander Kenny. The band which is in the Capital for the Royal visit, was under the direction of Flight Sergeant T. P. Cooper.

"Aircraftsman Lancaster gave a trombone solo, "The Lost Chord", by Sullivan, and Flight Sergeant Cooper played a cornet solo, Schubert's "Serenade". The band is in Ottawa to play at several functions during the days Their Majesties will be here."

Police Blotter

Archie Lamb and John Mills, both giving Flinton as their home address, were arrested in Belleville early today after police learned the men had disposed of some 410 pounds of copper wire. The men were held in custody and subsequently turned over to the Provincial Police for further investigation.

Plainclothes Constable Fred Isard apprehended the pair after they had disposed of the copper wire at a local junk yard, police entertaining suspicions the wire might have been that which was stolen in Belleville last week. Such suspicions were unfounded, however, but subsequent investigations led police to believe the wire had been stolen from the Ore Chimney Mines in north Lennox County, Provincial Constable W. E. Smith revealed later today.

Lamb and Mills are being held for Lennox County police.

Harvey Weirmer, Bancroft, was sentenced to serve three months in the common jail by Magistrate J. L. Lloyd in County Police Court this week and being convicted of a charge of being found in the possession of a still, suitable for the manufacture of illicit liquor. A fine of $100.00 and costs was imposed, but Weirmer was unable to meet the assessed fine and was given the jail term in default. The case was investigated by R.C.M.P.

City Motorcycle Patrolman Doug Ellis took over his official duties of patrolling city streets yesterday, much to the regret of several motorists, who were apprehended in the act of violation of the city speed laws. Several motorists will be hailed into court on speeding charges as the result of yesterday's check-up around the city.

With no arrests necessary last night the cell block at the police station housed exactly ten transients a decrease over last week's average.

All Nine Lives Snuffed Out as Cat is Hanged

The proverbial nine lives, said to be possessed by a cat, failed to function in sequence and a black cat passed into the feline paradise as the result of a practical joke played by several local boys, who hanged a black cat in a shed on St. Charles St. last night. Today police were notified and upon investigations found the cat dangling by the neck and very much dead, having doubtless strangled as the result of the attempts of teen-aged boys at what they seemed to have termed as 'fun.'

Today, however, Plainclothes Constable Fred Isard ascertained the names of two of the boys, who were seen molesting a black cat near a city shed situated on St. Charles St., last night. At the time neighbours dispersed the boys and set the cat free, the lads allegedly teasing the feline at the time. It is supposed the boys returned and hanged the cat from the shed timbers. The lads responsible for this type of cruelty to animals will be hailed into Juvenile Court on charges of cruelty to animals later, Chief Kidd intimated.

Salvation Army Youth Group Holds Meeting

A very enjoyable meeting was held by the Salvation Army Youth Group last evening.

The meeting was opened by singing the hymn—"Gird on the Armour" after which Mrs. Major Alderman offered prayer. The program continued as follows: A trombone duet by Miss Margaret Stebbings and Miss Ruth Alderman. Minutes of the last meeting were read by Miss Dorothy Stebbings. Choruses led by Miss Dorothea Alderman. Report of the Groups visiting shut-ins; a vocal solo — "Prayer of a Child", by Miss Margaret Stebbings. Pianoforte solo by Miss June Wardle. Scripture reading by Cyril Magar; address by guest speaker—Rev. Mr. Freeman of the Alliance Tabernacle. The meeting was brought to a close by singing "Throw Out the Life Line" and prayer by Miss Dorothy Mitchell.

Rev. Mr. Freeman's address was very much enjoyed by everyone present. His text was the Salvation Army's motto "Blood and Fire." He mentioned a few prominent places in the Bible where relations to Blood and Fire would be found and gave their meaning.

Marett presented the secretary-treasurer's report which showed last year's receipts as $275.63 and an adverse balance of $5.37. The membership last year reached the high mark of fifty-five and it is hoped to exceed this in the forthcoming season. The election of officers was next held, resulting as follows: Honorary President, Mrs. G. Deacon; President, H. R. Pearce (re-elected); 1st Vice President, C. A. Seaton; 2nd Vice President, Watson Hall; Secretary-Treasurer, F. R. Wells.

Committees:

Grounds: H. R. Pearce, C. A. Seaton, W. Hall, E. Brady, K. Armstrong and J. Brady.

The Grounds Committee will see that the courts are put in good shape right away, and was empowered by the meeting to get necessary equipment. Grateful appreciation was evidenced of the generosity of Mrs. G. Deacon in furnishing the courts for the Club. The matter of affiliation with the Trent Valley League was left over for a meeting to be called later. Dues were left unchanged. The Club as a whole is looking forward to a very successful 1939 season.

At Marmora Public School on Friday, following the afternoon session, the flag raising ceremony was carried out under the direction of Principal E. C. Prentice, assisted by the teaching staff. The scholars recited "We Salute the Union Jack" and following the salute, sang the National Anthem. President W. Bedore of Marmora Branch Canadian Legion, gave a short address on the significance of the Union Jack and the import of the Royal visit. Medallions, the gift of the Government, were presented to the scholars.

Arrangements for the visit of Marmora Branch No. 237 Canadian Legion to Kingston on May 21st were further advanced at a special meeting held in the Legion Room on Friday evening. A letter was read from President Alex Sorget of the Kingston Legion and Chairman of the Veterans Sub-Committee concerning arrangements which are being made for the Legionnaires in attendance that day. Past President P. Gray mentioned the chartering of a bus which will leave Marmora about 4.30 a.m. with such Legionnaires and families who are not driving their own cars.

Miss Madaline Bertrand spent the week-end in Toronto.

Mr. Vernon Caverley of Oshawa, who purchased a large tract of land along the northeast and east ends of Crowe Lake last summer, is setting out three or four thousand Norway Pine seedlings this spring. Mr. Caverley erected a small cottage and an ice house last fall and is planning to improve the property during the coming summer. A number of building lots have been sold but whether cottages will be erected this year or not is not known.

Mr. and Mrs. Hugh Brady have moved into the Marett house on Burstall Street, formerly owned by the late Richard O'Neill.

Mrs. F. N. Marett visited in Toronto for a couple of days this week.

The May (annual) meeting of Marmora Women's Institute was held on Wednesday evening at the home of Mrs. Gordon Jarvis with the president, Mrs. Gordineer, in the chair. The opening exercises were conducted in the usual manner after which the minutes of the last regular meeting, last annual meeting and other reports were given. The treasurer's report showed receipts of $226.20 with expenditures of $178.26 and a balance on hand of $47.94 to start the 1939-40 year.

Letters were read from the Neighborhood Workers' Association re holidays for underprivileged children also one urging the forming of a Girl Guide organization. It was felt that the latter, while it would fill a very real need to the young girls in the village, would need leadership that might be hard to secure at the present time, so the matter was laid over.

The secretary, Mrs. Spry, gave a splendid summary of the year's work. There had been ten regular meetings with an average attendance of 29 and several special meetings, a social evening, picnic at Tipperary House when Springbrook was entertained, several families had been assisted under the supervision of the Chairman of Relief, $28.00 had been raised for the Institute for the Blind by a Tag Day. A booth was operated at Marmora Fair and a contribution of $7 for special prizes given as well as the usual $75.00 grant for Marmora Public Library. Two Travelling Bridge and Euchre parties had been held and Mr. George White of Madoc had given a splendid address on "Canadianization" at one of the meetings. Sick members had been remembered with cards and gifts of fruit.

Mrs. Nichol gave a brief report of the recent Officers' Rally in Madoc.

Mrs. J. C. Sills, the District President, then addressed the meeting on the subject of the "Co-operative Program," dividing it into three headings, viz: Local Leadership, Home Conference and Speaker Service. The local Institute voted in favor of having the Speaker Service this year. Several choices of subjects were made to be submitted at the coming convention on May 26th. in Eldorado. The Roll Call was answered by paying the annual membership fee for the next year.

Mrs. Sills then graciously conducted the election and it proved a hard task.

The final results were as follows: President, Mrs. H. W. Sabine; 1st. Vice President, Mrs. L. Green; 2nd. Vice President, Mrs. D. Thomson; Secretary - Treasurer, Mrs. Wm. Lavender; Board of Directors, Mrs. Gordineer; Pianist, Mrs. F. R. Wells; Assistant Pianist, Mrs. Nichol; Press Reporter, Mrs. M. Levender; Board of Directors, Mrs. G. Jarvis, Mrs. E. Gray, Mrs. Nichol; Auditors, Mrs. Jas. Rice, Mrs. F. Sweet; Delegates to District Annual, the President, Mrs. Wm. Lavender, Mrs. J. Gordineer and Mrs. G. Jarvis.

The Institute thanked Mrs. Sills for her assistance and for the helpful address she gave on this her annual visit.

Several games of Bingo were played and lunch was served by the committee. The meeting closed with singing "God Save the King."

Canadian Cheese Industry Stands To Gain From New Legislation

Gov't. Assistance to Consolidate Factories — Premium on High Quality Cheese and Help to Improve Curing Rooms Now Possible

The Cheese and Cheese Factories Improvement Act which was recently passed by the Parliament of Canada, for assistance to the Canadian Cheese industry, at present being explained to central district makers by the local federal grader, J. L. Irwin at district meetings of makers gives:

Assistance towards amalgamating two or more existing factories into one factory:

Assistance towards insulating and refrigerating cheese ripening rooms of existing factories:

Assistance towards standardization of cheese pressing equipment;

And payment of a premium on account of the production of cheese of high quality.

Provision is made to encourage the consolidation of cheese factories into larger units. Under the Act the government may pay one-half the cost of new material, new equipment and labor utilized in reconstructing an existing factory or in building and equipping a new factory, providing that each such reconstructed or new factory replaces two or more existing factories, and that the cheese-ripening room in each factory so reconstructed or built is efficiently insulated and equipped with mechanical refrigeration to control the temperature of the ripening room.

It is expected that in such reconstructed or new factories the cheese ripening room will be required to be equipped with shelf-room sufficient for the make of the cheese during seventeen days at the peak of production, and that in addition there will be in the ripening room sufficient space to box and pile the cheese made during the week of the season of greatest production.

There is nothing in the Act, it is pointed out, to oblige owners of factories to consolidate two or more existing factories into one unit, but there are definite advantages in such consolidation.

Freshly Painted Buildings Gleam In Gay New Colors

Gleaming new store-fronts, buildings freshly painted and renovated, Belleville is gradually emerging from its annual "facelifting" in fresh attractive colors.

Members of the Fire Department have, or are just concluding entire renovation of the interiors of the station-house; the former Frontenac Electric building is gleaming in a new coat of white, while the Queens Hotel looks fresh in a new outside coat of green paint.

Stores along Front Street have been the mecca during the past few days for a small army of painters and decorators busy at refreshening unattractive paint jobs and in general giving the main business thoroughfare a thorough "going-over".

Buildings on other streets are likewise undergoing the new Spring transformation while many private residences are emerging fresh and bright in new Spring apparel.

Adding to the cheeriness of the whole color scheme are the bright shades of flags and bunting. Windows of Front Street stores are tastefully decorated with pictures of Their Majesties, while the outside of the buildings are being gradually transformed into a maze of patriotic colors.

Sweet Peas Seeds And Deacon Shirts Liked in Baghdad

Two Belleville-sold products are making good in faraway Baghdad. Iraq.

In a letter received by Mayor Jamieson Bone from his brother, Stuart T. Bone, member of a large financial firm in Baghdad, a request is contained for "another order of those splendid Deacon-made shirts which I brought to Iraq some years ago and from which copies and copies of the copies have since been made."

"They are ideal in texture, size and fit for this country, writes Mr. Stuart Bone.

Canadian sweet peas sold by Bishop and Son, local seeds supply house are also bringing glory to the large garden owned by Mr. Bone in Baghdad, the Mayor has further been informed. In competition with even the hardy English varieties, the Belleville-sold peas have proved themselves entirely adaptable to the climate and soil of Iraq. They are about the only sweet peas which will grow here", it was stated.

At present the warm season is commencing in Baghdad, and though summer has not arrived as yet, so far in April temperatures of over 80 degrees have been registered.

"Soon we will have steady heat of from 100 to 120 degrees in the shade. Then we will have to move from the city to a cooler spot in the country", Mr. Stuart Bone writes.

Six months furlough out of every two years is granted Mr. Bone and his wife from Baghdad.

PRESTO MUSIC CLUB

On Monday evening, May 8th 1939, the final regular meeting of the Presto Music Club was held at the home of Mrs. F. E. Houston, 6 Pine Street. The musical portion of the program was arranged by Mrs. T. R. Dolan and in view of the approaching visit of the King and Queen, was British in character. It was followed by movies shown by Alec Gordon.

A very tasty lunch was then served the dining table being decorated in a manner fitting the occasion of the royal visit. After a social hour, the meeting was brought to a close.

Retired Hydro Employee Started His Career With the Rathbun Co.

Harry Hall, Deseronto, Helped in Early Building of Telephone Systems

Recently honored by fellow employees of the local district of the Hydro Electric Power Commission when he was presented with a well filled purse at a dinner held in the Queen's Hotel, Harry Hall of Deseronto who has retired on pension is looking forward to a less active period than during his many years as an efficient worker of the Commission.

A native of England, Mr. Hall came to Canada as a small boy with his parents, and has spent the greater part of his life in this immediate district. His family located at Napanee where Mr. Hall attended the public school, and one of his first jobs was in the town blacksmith shop. When he was about nineteen years of age he went to Deseronto and secured a position with the Rathbun Lumber Company. His first job, he recalls, was driving a team for a line gang in the building of telephone and telegraph systems. This work carried him through the entire Central Ontario district.

Now at the age of 67 years, Mr. Hal is able to reminisce of the earlier days in Deseronto and district. He refers to the time when Deseronto had a population of some 5,000 people and the Rathbun Lumber Company employed about 700. He worked for this firm for many years, and also worked for a subsidiary company, the North American Telegraph Company which was later taken over by the Bell Telephone Company. Mr. Hall was then transferred to Napanee, and later to Madoc.

While in Madoc he severed his connection with the company and secured a position with the Seymour Electric and Power Company. He was in the service of this company for the period between 1910 to 1916, when it was taken over by the Ontario Hydro Electric Power Commission. Mr. Hall had charge of the telephone department, and he was in charge of the service work through the entire central district.

A public spirited resident of his own community, Mr. Hall has served as a member of the Deseronto Board of Education and has assisted in the work of many other civic committees. For many years he has annually given a party on New Year's day for the children of the Mohawk Indian Reserve and on the occasion of his last party had more than 200 children as his guests.

He has been a member of Craig Masonic Lodge No. 401 since 1910. He has been a life member of Moira Chapter No. 7 Royal Arch Masons of Belleville and a member of Deseronto Lodge No. 102, I.O.O.F. for thirty-three years.

Now retired from active work with the Hydro he served for so long, Mr. Hall has no definite plans except that he will probably take it a little easier from now on.

In his retirement his many friends of Belleville and district will wish him every success for many more pleasant years and a well-earned rest.

HISTORIC VOYAGE NEARS END

It was a natural expression of Her Majesty that she was sorry that the delay in the arrival of their liner on account of the fog might cause disappointment to the people who had planned to welcome them. Like the King and Queen, the people regret that conditions were such as to cause nearly two days' delay in the time of arrival of the ship bearing the King and Queen and the royal retinue to Canada. There will be disappointment that the plans cannot in their entirety be carried out. It has taken several days out of the program, meaning shortening of arrangements, particularly at Ottawa and Kingston.

In such great events as this tour which is to make history, it is natural that both King and Queen and people should regret that nature intervened and caused postponement of their landing. No doubt Their Majesties, like the people, have set their hearts on every arrangement so that they naturally think along the lines of the prearranged plans. However, the changes are being made as few a spossible, so as not to cause too great disappointments.

When one is on a tour or expecting guests one is naturally full of expectation and Canadians have promised themselves an occasion of many happy events across the Dominion of Canada as the Sovereigns pay visits to many centres.

Their Majesties have passed through experiences with which even many Canadians are not acquainted, with fogs at sea and an ice field and icebergs. At home in the Motherland the progress of the liner carrying the King-Emperor and Queen-Empress has been watched closely as the vessel reported days in the fog and in the iceberg field.

Now that they are safely through that part of the Atlantic where such experiences are to be met at this season, there is a great sense of relief to know that the vessel is but a few hours away from the famous old city of Quebec, where it will arrive tonight. In the morning its royal passengers will disembark. Anticipation of the coming of the King and Queen has been whetted by the delay in arrival.

At the present time Their Majesties are in waters which have seen the growth of a continent. It is fitting that the representative of the Empire, the King, should see the historic river and the land where French colonial settlements were begun in what is now French-Canada, particularly as Quebec is largely Norman-French in its origin, and because today France and Britain are powerful allies. It will be a unique experience for the King and Queen to see in Canada how the French-Canadian and the English-speaking Canadian, representing English, Irish, Welsh and Scottish blood, live side by side, both playing a part in the development of this nation. This lends a cosmopolitan aspect to this country and here the King and Queen of Canada will see two great racial lines living in harmony.

IN SCHOOL AND COLLEGE HALLS

With the coming of late spring weather, the time approaches when schools and colleges will turn out new classes of boys and girls ready to make their contribution to the Dominion and the world. They have been fated to be brought into one of the most remarkable developments of history, the new world sense which is manifesting itself so much in the last few years. These times are great times for those who are resolute and heroic and who see in the very intricacy of the problems of today their opportunity to be tested and to be found not wanting.

First, there are the graduates who will pour out into the world. They come of a free democratic world which has left its early mark upon them. They are thoroughly of this age and are possessed of vision, energy, appreciation of the blessing of living in this great hour on the world.

Others in the schools are just taking a new step, not graduates as yet but as sure as destiny, to graduate in due course. They still have their educational training to receive. They are the younger ones, whose appearance on the public stage will not be made for some years to come. They too are taught the lessons of this age.

May the graduates find a world which is seeking peace obtaining its desire, and may the menacing clouds disappear and may those who will be graduates of the years ahead find reacting upon them the policies of a new peaceful world, which will make it possible for them to lend a powerful impetus to the developments of this country of theirs. If these young people and children are ushered into a world of peace ,they will find great tasks to achieve.

Science is making it possible for these newcomers to the world of effort and for the young scholars of today to wake the finest contribution of any generation in history.

VIS-A-VIS

I watched her sitting with her dolls,
Her tea-set spread awaiting friends,—
Real or imagined I knew not,—
So seriously a child pretends.
Her knitting rapidly progressed
As she employed the skein of blue
That matched her eyes; she little guessed
A wistful one was watching through
The mist of years,—back to a day
When all the beauty of the world
Was made, it seemed, for childish play,
Its secret in a rose-heart curled;
When butterflies were messengers,
And birdlings pixies in disguise,
And dandelion down was made
For pillows when they closed their eyes.
And little seeds were magic balls
That had to go to bed to rest
So they could rise some golden morn
And waltz about in colours dressed.
And trees grew tall so baby birds
Could sway more gayly in the sun,
And waves and sand and everything
Were made to aid you in your fun.

. . . . .

Such innocence at times makes sweet
The bitterness long living brings:
She did not let the world use her,
But shaped it to her scheme of things.

SEVENTY-SIX YEARS MARRIED LIFE TOGETHER.....that surely is something in a world where divorces are the rule rather than the exception, where many marriages are made the Hollywood way instead of in Heaven. It gives one a pleasant thought and a nice taste to hear of the Picton couple, Mr. and Mrs. Maybee, in their nineties, who have been married seventy-six years, have been together all that time and still love, and honor, cherish and obey each other. That they should be presented to Their Majesties at Kingston is only right and proper, not only because they may be the oldest married couple in the Empire but because they set an example of what the married state was meant to be by the All-wise Father of All, not merely a series of trial trips.

OH YEAH, YOU'RE NOT SO HOT! Folks are getting quite smart there as in less than a week the theft was noticed."

HITLER IS APPARENTLY DRESSING UP DANZIG FOR THE KILL. The same tactics employed in the Sudeten and other places Hitlerized are being followed in Danzig which is being flooded with young German tourists, while Danzig soldiers in the Nazis army are being sent home on leave—with instructions what to do in certain contingencies. Whom the Gods wish to destroy they first make mad, is still true, and folks having sensed the madness are anxiously waiting for the destroyal.

NATIONS ARE STRENGTHENING THEIR ARMAMENTS against possible aggression from neighboring nations, and it is natural that that great force for peace and good will and better living, the Salvation Army, should be strengthening its armament against the powers of evil. Hence it is no surprise that in Belleville the old Citadel which has survived its usefulness should be torn down and a new and modern Citadel erected which will be a credit to the Army and the City generally. The new Citadel has been planned to provide equipment for Young People's work, lacking in the old edifice. To cost $15,000 the Salvation Army has undertaken to provide $12,000 and give the citizens of Belleville an opportunity to take an interest in the new Citadel to the extent of $3,000, and the manner in which prominent citizens are taking hold of the project indicates that the objective will be more than attained. For over fifty years the Salvation Army has been a power for good in the community and any endeavor to extend that work and make it more efficient, if that is possible, should be generally encouraged, especially as the new building will be an improvement and in construction will provide employment for Belleville workmen.

Mr. Charles Cook, who has the street sprinkling contract, was making the turn at the above mentioned corner when, owing to the road bed giving way, the wagon upset and he was thrown to the ground and sustained a few minor injuries. Considerable damage was done to the sprinkler.

Under the auspices of the I.O.O.F. of this city an assembly was held last evening in the Oddfellows' Temple, Front Street, and was a most enjoyable affair.

After considerable discussion, Mr. J. F. Wills moved and Mr. S. S. Moore seconded a motion that the city council be requested to submit a bylaw to the ratepayers at the earliest possible time, asking for authority to issue debentures covering a period of thirty years, the same to bear interest at 4½ per cent, the proceeds to be applied in building the schools required. The following were present at the meeting: Messrs. W. S. Morden, Chairman; W. P. Hudson, R. B. Morden, C. P. Sharpe, J. F. Wills, P. Harrison, Fred S Deacon, G.A. Bennett, W. D. Taylor, S. S. Preventing Flat Feet

One of the worst cases of flat feet I have ever seen was that of a recruit who wished to go overseas during the War. The examining physician rejected him and he was referred to me as president of the medical board. His arches were all the way down on the floor. After having him walk around the armoury floor, bare-footed, he kneeled down and there was not a white spot on the whole sole of the foot. He informed me that he had walked nearly thirty miles to be examined and that he was one of the contenders in a three-mile walking race the next day against the world's amateur champion. He was second to the world's champion in the race and claimed that he could walk ten times the distance without feeling any pain in his feet.

Why was this man with such flat feet able to walk without pain?

Walking did not cause pain because the ligaments binding the bones of the foot together were not rigid nor had the tendons of the muscles become too hard. It is this lack of "rigidness" that enables a dancer with flat feet to still do the ballet.

However, in most cases where the arch—crossways of the foot—is down on the floor, the foot is rigid and after taking a plaster cast of the foot, an arch support gives relief. It is usually too late to use exercise or other methods of treatment. It is, however, the beginning or early cases of flat foot that can and should be helped because exercise can lift up and hold the arch, making arch support unnecessary.

Dr. Bryan Keon-Cohen, Melbourne, in The Medical Journal of Australia, says "Raising and lengthening the heel of the shoe puts the weight of the body on the proper bone or bones, prevents the toes turning out, and supports the weakened structures on the inside of the heel and foot. All the patients' shoes must be similarly altered; no slippers or sandshoes are permitted, and in no circumstances whatever may weight bearing be allowed unless the proper footwear is worn."

EARLY UMBRELLAS

Once introduced into England, umbrellas speedily came into favor more with men than with women. The Duke of Wellington, it is said, reprimanded some officers who were protecting themselves with umbrellas from the rain whilst actually under fire at Bayonne. "The Guards may carry umbrellas if they please," said the Iron Duke, "whilst on duty at St. James's; but to do so on active service in the field is not only ridiculous but unmilitary."

I recollect, sixty years ago, seeing a field officer of my old regiment (Royal Scots Fusiliers) riding from the camp to the railway station in full uniform with an umbrella held over his head.

Queen Victoria owned an umbrella entirely lined with the finest chain mail; it was given to her after one of the attempts on her life during her sixty years' reign.

An umbrella can, of course, be a weapon of offence as well as of defence. I remember Mr. Amery, then our genial Minister for the Dominions, telling how he had to use his umbrella for the former purpose during his visit to Africa.—London Sunday Times.

FOUNDATIONS OF EMPIRE BASED ON CHARACTER

Fine Word Portrait of King and Queen and Empire

"Foundations of Empire", was the subject of a very interesting address before the Belleville Rotary Club Monday by Rev. Arthur Cragg, pastor of the United Church at Northport, Prince Edward County, who was introduced by Rev. James Semple, of Belleville, as a young man of great promise, a credit to the ministry and one for whom great things may be anticipated. Winning a travelling scholarship at the University, Rev. Cragg was privileged to go abroad, study at Cambridge University in England, and study at close hand conditions in England and on the Continent.

"Foundations of the Empire", were important, said Rev. Mr. Cragg, for if the foundations are faulty the whole structure is endangered. Foundations of the British Empire were sketched in the light of history, and while self-interest and commercial gain entered into empire expansion at times, with conquest and force of arms, subsequent administration had been featured with ideals for good which added strength to the Empire. Self interest had even entered into the deliberations of the League of Nations, and the incidents of Ethiopia, Manchuria, Czecho-Slovakia, and other recent history making events. A nation or empire to endure must be built on more enduring foundations than self-interest, ideals of truth, justice and honor which made sure and safe foundations for time and eternity. No nation can live unto itself alone and the whole world must be treated as a community with equal justice meeted out to all.

Foundations of the Empire were based on the King and Queen who by their character and purity in public and private life symbolized the foundations of the Empire. The loyalty and devotion of their subjects the world over proved that the foundations of Empire were sound and lasting. The affection shown by the citizens of other countries for the British King and Queen was another tribute to the soundness of the foundations of the Empire. The speaker was in Paris when the King and Queen visited there and was amazed and delighted with the welcome tendered and the genuine evidence of affection given by the French People.

Another evidence of the soundness of the Foundations of the Empire rested in the universal respect for the Bible and the successful struggles for religious and political liberty.

Speaking of British administration in remote parts of the world, the speaker cited overtures by Germany to India and the reply that while there had been much that was objectionable to Indians in British rule, still there had been so much good and so much more of good than could have been expected from any other country, especially Germany that a change of administration was unthinkable.

In the King and Queen were found personified the principle of service, the greatest quality in the world. The speaker appealed to Rotarians as members of an international organization to devote themselves to the spread of the finest ideal of service throughout the world, to promote Christian ideals instead of self interest in international affairs—and make the world a better place in which to live.

Rotary appreciation was expressed by Percy McGuire and President MacLean Haig.

Visitors present were Rotarians Wm. Hastings, Toronto; Mac Gordon, Peterboro; Major Bourne, Toronto, Clifford Dick, Toronto; Rev. A. B. Allnutt, Toronto; Gordon Friesen, Belleville.

S. R. Burrows had charge of the musical program; Fred Deacon acted as sergeant-at-arms.

Birthdays celebrated included I. G. Hefkey and Past President W. B. Deacon, a charter member of the club.

CORNWALL GOING AHEAD WITH PLANS

Expect King and Queen to Make Appearance if Only for Minutes

Ottawa, May 16—(CP)— Cornwall, Ont., is going ahead with preparations to greet the King and Queen "when and if" they arrive, in spite of the fact that before there was any postponement of the arrival in Quebec it was announced the Cornwall and Brockville stops had been cancelled.

A strong protest was made to Ottawa by delegations from Cornwall and Brockville and it was hoped that the brief halts at those towns when the Royal train is en route from Ottawa to Kingston, would be made.

"The whole situation is so uncertain we cannot do otherwise than to go ahead with our arrangements," Mayor J. A. Phillips said last night. "It is unlikely we will have definite word in connection with the Cornwall stop until Wednesday, but we are planning to hold the Royal celebration as announced and it will be carried out when and if the King and Queen arrive, whenever that may be," he said.

Screwy News

ARRIVED TOO LATE TO VISIT HIS MOTHER

Bradford, Pa., May 15 (AP)—William Taylor took a Mother's Day bouquet to Warren State Hospital only to learn that his mother had died two weeks ago. When he inquired for her, Taylor was told there was no patient named Mrs. Jennie Taylor.

"But, I've visited her here for 23 years," the 35-year-old knife factory worker protested. An investigation disclosed his mother died April 29 and her body had been sent to an Anatomical Board in Philadelphia.

COUNCIL TAKES

Aldermen Thompson, Rollins, Logan, Butler, Jeffery, Allin, Cushing, Jennings and Lewis with Mayor Bone supported the by-law. Alderman Harvey was in the chair in the committee on by-laws. Alderman Haig was in favor of the principle of paying the Aldermen for their services but did not think it was an opportune time to bring the matter to council.

Mr. Dolan in speaking for the merchants on the Parking recommendation before the chair, stated he did not believe that the Parking by-law was perfect nor did he believe that any municipality had a perfect measure to control traffic and he congratulated the council for at least trying to remedy a bad situation, but he did not think the time was opportune to limit the parking to fifteen minutes in the business section. "I am not only speaking for the merchants tonight," said Mr Dolan, "but for all those who do business in this city. I think the general feeling is that a person cannot shop in a fifteen minute period and I don't believe it is practical. I think the angle parking is also the best for this city. Parallel parking is a nice mental picture but it does not work out in fact because there is always the likelihood of double parking."

No Serious Accidents

The speaker stated there had been no serious accidents with angle parking, just a few little bumps to fenders when backing out, "but to back into parallel parking spaces is just twice as hard as moving into an angle parking space," said Mr. Dolan. The speaker admitted that Oshawa had 15 minute parking but the area only extended a few yards down from the main intersection. "It is a fact that women do 85 percent of the shopping in this city and they cannot back into parallel parking space," said the speaker. "They do not like going down into the parking lots at the rear of the stores because of the mental hazards in coming out into the main line of traffic." Mr. Dolan also advocated that the gangways leading to these parking lots be cleaned at regular intervals.

Letter Read Members

Mayor Bone at this juncture read a letter from Mr. F. S. Deacon asking that the Parking by-law be left as now constituted. Alderman Logan stated he was opposed to any change in the by-law and he believed the merchants were the worst offenders in regards to breaking the regulation limit for parking. "I am informed there are several merchants on Front Street who leave their car in one place for an hour and then go out and move it to another location and I think this should not be allowed and that the police should use every means in their power to stop this practice," said Ald. Logan.

Alderman Butler: "I have been confronted with the argument that residents of the rural districts do not like to park their cars in the parking lots for fear of losing gasoline and sometimes spare tires. If these lots are to be of any service to the city motorists should have every protection when placing their cars in these locations."

Ald. Rollins: "I am a firm supporter of angle parking. I know the streets are narrow but taking everything into consideration it is the best method for this city. I am of the same opinion as Ald. Logan that probably the merchants are the worst offenders and I think the police should be very strict with Belleville residents but that rural residents should be educated to this by-law by warnings."

Against Recommendation

Ald. Kennedy: "I am certainly against fifteen minute parking and also against parallel parking."

Ald. Harvey: "I think the by-law should remain as it is at the present time."

Ald. Jennings: "I had no intention when I brought this matter up of voting for it, but I wished to get the opinion of the largest number. I am in favor of angle parking but the bus company had been complaining of not being able to make time on their schedule due to the traffic congestion on Front Street."

Russell Woodley: "It is only a very small percentage of the merchants that are offenders with regards to parking and I don't think the whole body of merchants should receive a black eye for the actions of a few. I am in favor of strict regulation by the police but am certainly against any move to shorten the time of parking."

E. I. Shapiro: "I think there should be more signs to indicate where the parking spaces are in the city and they should be put in convenient places."

Ald. Jennings: "I have been advocating that procedure. I don't think the arrows and signs should be on the pavement because they are soon obliterated. They should be put up on convenient posts."

Mayor Bone, reading from a copy of The Ontario Intelligencer, did not agree with the thought expressed that it was ill considered legislation. "I think it is," said the Mayor. "I am in favor of a change but will vote with the majority to leave the parking as it is, but I still contend that fifteen minutes is long enough to do pickup shopping and if longer time is required then the motorist should put his car in one of the available parking lots. I am also in favor of angle parking on one side of Front Street and parallel parking on the other side. I still think we are in the "horse and buggy days" The Mayor again read an item from the "20 Years Ago" column of The Ontario Intelligencer which stated that "Alderman White and Fire Chief Brown are in Peterboro looking over the fire hall in that city in an effort to get some idea for a new hall in Belleville." "And we are still looking," said His Worship.

Opinion Solicited

His Worship also inquired from the merchants present if they were in favor of an eleven o'clock closing by-law on Saturday night in this city. "Girls are standing behind the counters from early Saturday till some time on Sunday morning in some cases and this is not at all fair. I don't think such conditions should exist." Mr. Dolan answered in the affirmative if he would be agreeable to a closing by-law to apply to Saturday night in this city.

Mr. Russell Wotten was the spokesman for the Board of Education in respect to their requisition by-law for a sum of $35,000 to build an addition to Queen Mary School. "We originally asked for $50,000," said Mr. Wotten but after a thorough investigation and concerted work by the architect and the Board it has been found that we can build the addition for $35,000. In the next three years Belleville will pay off in debentures for schools $150,000 and I am of the opinion that this addition can easily be built without very much inconvenience to the taxpayer. The conditions at Queen Mary School are not of the best at the present time with 60 pupils crowded into the auditorium. I understand at your last meeting you were given some figures by Mr. C. E. Argue in which was stated that the capital cost was 9.62 per pupil. Those figures are correct but I would like to point out that in three years that figure will be down to $1.50 when these debentures have been retired. We will then be lower than Toronto.

Figures Explained

Mr. H. B. Fetterly, a member of the Board, took the figures quoted by Mr. Wotten for the addition and showed that the plumbing and heating of $9,000 was an absolute necessity even if the addition was not built and the boiler room alteration of $1,500 were also needed. The building will cost $35,000 made up of two-storey wing $12,800, plumbing, heating and ventilation $9,000, boiler room alterations $1,500, lighting and wiring $3,200, roof $1,440, balance of architect's fees, $1,550, extension to auditorium $5,250 and contingencies, $260. Dr. W. J. Kinnear, also a member of the Board, stated the Board was economical and not extravagant and the matter had been very thoroughly discussed before presentation to the council. He stated that a large number of the Board members were heavy taxpayers and they certainly would not have advocated the expenditure unless it was absolutely necessary.

The question came up again when the by-law was presented and Ald. Allin who served nine years on the Board of Education did not think the Board was asking for anything out of reason but he was willing to have the matter referred back. Ald. Haig explained this was not a request but a demand for the money and that it would have to be dealt with. The alderman explained about the movement on foot to secure part of the surplus of the Sinking Fund to help reduce the tax rate and he did not think it would be advisable to ask for this reduction and at the same time make a request to issue debentures for this addition.

Question Is Asked

Ald. Rollins: "Could not this matter be left over for another year? I feel the addition is badly needed but in the light of the explanation given by Ald. Haig, could not some other arrangement for the time being be made?"

Ald. Lewis: "I think we should give the Board a definite answer on the matter."

The council were going to take an impersonal vote on the question but this was ruled out of order and the whole question with the by-law was referred back to the committee with the assurance a definite answer would be given at the next regular meeting of the council.

Reg. Moncrieff asked for more assistance for the Beaches Association or else the charter would be given up and the whole project disbanded. He claimed the men promised from the Public Works Department had not been forthcoming nor had the garbage been delivered that was promised for fill. The speaker clashed with Alderman Kennedy over some statements that were made but the air was considerably cleared when a committee of Aldermen Jennings and Kennedy were appointed to confer with the Beaches Association and work out a scheme that would be satisfactory.

Ald. Lewis: "The Beaches Association have appealed for aid many times and just as many times have they been turned down. We have not been given the support that the Association deserves. The garbage starts for the beach but gets somewhere else."

Ald. Allin: "I think the Beaches Association is a worthy organization and the scheme a worthwhile one."

Ald. Butler: "The Welfare Department is a passive organization and when men are wanted we are able to supply them."

Garbage Contract Renewed

The council voted to renew the garbage collection contract with Mr. Zebedee at a price of $4,100, the renewal to be signed on June 15th. Repairs to Number 1 Fire Hall for an amount of $60 was ordered, while the Special Property Committee was allowed to decorate a house owned by the city. Mr. Clinton McBride was sold a lot on Holloway Street for $50 with the proviso that a house be built on the property within one year to cost $2,500 and the purchaser to pay the 1939 taxes.

The Executive Committee consisting of Mayor Bone, Alderman Haig and the City Treasurer, advised in a report to council the purchase of bonds from Nova Scotia to the amount of $25,000 at 2½ percent for three years, and $25,000 from New Brunswick at 2.95 percent for three years. The money used is from the Sinking Fund. The report was accepted.

Aderman Rollins asked if the two bridges and the City Hall could be decorated on the occasion of the visit of the King and Queen to Canada and Ald. Cushing thought it could be arranged. The invitation from the City of Kingston for the Council and their wives to be present in Kingston on May 21st was accepted. The Belleville Council will be placed on the City Hall steps in Kingston, giving them a good view of the royal procession. The city will sign agreements with Maurice Callaghan, J. Wesley Moore and Russell Woodley for transfer of property in their names.

Motions Passed

A motion introduced by Ald. Haig and seconded by Ald. Thompson "That is as much as the amount in certain Sinking Funds is sufficient to pay the principal of the respective debts for which they were established as the said debts become due, notwithstanding the provision of the By-Laws authorizing the said Sinking Funds and pursuant to the Provisions of Section 321b of the Municipal Act as enacted by Section 18 of the Municipal Amendment Act, 1939, no further sums will be required to be levied and raised with respect to the debts, provision for the payment of which has been made by said Sinking Funds. That the Council respectfully petitions the Municipal Board for its approval of the Council's action" was passed without discussion.

Another motion, moved by Ald. Haig and seconded by Ald. Thompson, "That the committee consisting of Mayor Bone, Ald. Haig, City Solicitor, City Treasurer who are negotiating with Ontario Municipal Board regarding our ceasing to levy for Sinking Fund Bonds, for which we already have made full provision.

Be also authorized to apply to said Municipal Board as speedily as possible, for authority to have our Sinking Fund surplus applied pro rata to each Sinking Fund bond issue" was also passed.

A third motion, also moved by Ald. Haig and Ald. Thompson, "That the representatives of the City Council on the Hospital Board, His Worship the Mayor, Aldermen Marshall and Haig be a committee to discuss with the Board the agreement to be entered into in regard to the Isolation Unit and in particular to discuss the suggestions contained in the letter of the City Solicitor of May 15th and report back" was passed.

The Council then adjourned.

Quints Excited About Their Trip To See King

Callander, Ont., May 16—(CP)—Prospects of seeing Toronto, where "one-car trains run down the middle of the streets", are more exciting to the Dionne Quintuplets than the rare honor of meeting the King and Queen. They'll be leaving home for the first time when they journey to Toronto by special train for an audience with Their Majesties next Monday.

The five girls, five years old May 28, know much about Toronto. Stories about that city come before almost anything else when their nurses, Molly O'Shaughnessey and Louise Corriveau, return from week-ends there.

Miss O'Shaughnessey said today that each morning for the past three weeks the Quints, on being awakened, ask her—"Today we go to Toornto, mais oui (yes)?"
to Toronto, mais oui (yes)?"
made it quite emphatic that she is to sit between Mother and Father Dionne during the train ride to Toronto on the private "Quint Express" next Sunday night. Mrs. Dionne received instructions from Emilie on a visit yesterday to the Dafoe nursery—home of the five daughters.

AT THE BELLE

"SERGEANT MADDEN"

"WOMEN IN THE WIND"

The power and sincerity of a magnificent portrayal by Wallace Beery, the camera magic of Director Josef Von Sternberg, the crackling action with which he has infused his film, and a group of inspired performances by a trio of young secondary leads make" Sergeant Madden," screening at the Belle Theatre, memorable and thrilling entertainment.

Story of the New York police, "Sergeant Madden" presents Beery in the title role as a thirty-year veteran of the force. He is that Irish cop to the life. His despair is his son, Dennis played by Alan Curtis, a hot-headed young "smart guy" who knows a quicker way to success than his father's plodding methods, but runs afoul of the law and becomes a snarling, defiant criminal. Curtis, as a result of his work, becomes the season's finest young "menace."

Laraine Johnson, as the adopted daughter who marries Curtis, and Tom Brown as the adopted son torn between loyalty to his father and his idolization of his foster-brother, stand right beside Curtis in sincerity and convincingness, while memorable work in featured parts is turned in by such players as Fay Holden, Marc Lawrence, Marion Martin, David Gorcey, Donald Haines, Ben Welden and Etta McDaniel.

The story is permeated with suspense and dramatic power from start to finish, rising to a gripping climax when Curtis, a fugitive from justice, dares to visit his wife and new-born son in a New York hospital while Beery waits outside to take him bare-handed.

"Women in the Wind"

"Women in the Wind," the Warner Bros. picture with Kay Francis and William Gargan in the leading roles which is the companion feature attraction is an entertaining novelty among aviation pictures, for its thrills, of which there are many, are mainly supplied by pretty girls.

The makers of the picture carefully disclaim any attempt to recreate any specific incident of aviation history or to identify any specific person noted in the annals of flying, but the air of factual authenticity is certainly furthered by the sequences dealing with the triumphant finish of a record-breaking flight around the world, the breaking of the trans-Atlantic record by an ingenuous young flier who claims he didn't know he was flying across the ocean, and the winning of a women's transcontinental air derby by a young and very personable aviatrix.

It is with this last feat that the story is mainly concerned. The pretty aviatrix, portrayed by Miss Francis, has entered the race in the hope that by winning the $15,000 first prize she can hire a great specialist to cure her brother, injured in a plane crash.

In what Miss Francis has announced will be her last role in motion pictures, puts a glorious period to a long career.

The Belle News of the day will be presented on the same program.

AT THE McCARTHY

"Super-Sleuth"
"Everybody's Doing it"

Something new in hilarious comedy is the present bill-of-fare in entertainment, on the screen at the McCarthy theatre, where funmaker Jack Oakie is now playing in "Super-Sleuth".

A role ideally suited to the versatile talents of Jack Oakie gives him the advantage of not only provoking slide-splitting laughter from the audience, but also allows him unlimited scope to develop situations of powerful dramatic talent which holds the audience tense with excitement. Ann Sothern, recently in "Trade Winds" with Joan Bennett and Fredric March, has the co-starring role with Jack Oakie and such Hollywood celebrities as Eduardo Ciannelli, Alan Bruce and Edgar Kennedy, Joan Woodbury, Paul Guilfoyle and Willie Best, have the important featured roles in "Super-Sleuth" which is an Edward Small, production, the man who made "The Duke of West Point" and "King of The Turf", which is also booked for showing at the McCarthy Theatre soon. Sally Eilers, Preston Foster and Arthur Lake in "Everybody's Doing it" a splendid second feature hit now playing with "Super-Sleuth" is an altogether different type of entertainment and makes the program one of the best offerings to date at the McCarthy Theatre. A sport scope entitled "Bird Dogs" also found favor with the large audiences who have already attended the McCarthy Theatre this week.

Special Services At Baptist Church

Rev. W. D. Harrison Speaks on Mother's Day Theme—S. A. Officers Guest Speakers in Evening

"'Honor thy father and thy mother' is the first commandment with a promise attached to it," stated Rev. W. D. Harrison, special speaker for the Intermediate B.Y.P.U. Mother's Day Service at Victoria Avenue Baptist Church on Sunday morning.

"There is a tendency in the human heart to drift away from mother's love but after she has passed away, how we would like to say some word that would delight mother's heart. Honor your parents by your love and care for them," counselled the preacher, "and prove your affection by obedience."

The speaker went on to say that Jesus, in His dying hour, was thinking of His mother, the pure, good woman upon whom God had bestowed the greatest honor. In the midst of His suffering, the Saviour commended the care of His mother to John, the disciple.

Rev. C. T. Olmstead, who was in charge of the service, welcomed the guest preacher and the members of Rossmore United Church young people, who were present. A further word of welcome was extended by Miss Doris Whittle, President of the Intermediate B.Y.P.U. Miss Mildred Bertrim read the Scripture lesson from Proverbs 31.

The intermediate choir sang "Hark, Hark, My Soul" very effectively and the intermediate boys' quartet sang "The Old Rugged Cross.' Miss Anna Hogle was heard in a lovely vocal solo. Miss Jean Cook gave a reading that was appropriate for the occasion of Mother's Day.

Toronto Salvationists At Evening Service

Officers of the Salvation Army took part in the evening service. Brigadier Fred Riches of Toronto, who was guest preacher, stated that while it was customary to think of a church edifice as being the sanctuary of God, it was likewise true that the workshop, office, home and even the fields could be the sanctuary of God when occupied by people whose Christian conduct reflected the presence of God.

"Why do people call on God to reveal Himself when He is already revealed on every hand in the bounties of nature? What we do need is that God should reveal us to ourselves so that we may realize our failures and our shortcomings," averred the speaker.

The Scripture lesson was read by Major Benjamin Bourne, who is in Belleville to supervise the Salvation Army building campaign, now in progress.

Prayers for the safe conduct of Their Majesties were offered at all services during the day.

MISS NAPOLEON

By Violet M. Methley

"How truly kind; I wondered whether you would not feel obliged—as a spy in British pay—"

"Don't try me too far. I have said that is a lie!"

"Then I will leave you—to your loyalty!"

For a moment she stood, hands clenched, eyes steely: then with a rustle of silk she was gone.

CHAPTER XXI

"Westward Ho!"

Up and down, up and down, like the caged black panther in the Maharajah's private menagerie — up and down one length of her room, with something of that panther's padded tread. Hands behind her back, eyes fixed on the ground between her pacing feet, lips set in a rigid line, the loose black satin robe caught closely round her accentuating the whiteness of her face, up and down—up and down ..Leonie seemed urged on unrestingly, by some demon of disquiet and disillusion.

"And at night, too, she walks — she walks always," the ayah told the other servants. "Truly one would say she never slept."

At the end of the third day, the Maharajah, working in his library, was startled by the sudden apparition of Leonie, still wearing the black satin wrapper, her face pale as marble, her eyes steady and darkening under level brows. He rose, pushing aside his papers, looking at her uncertainly.

"What do you want?" he asked, "Why do you stay here?"

"There is something which I wish to say to you," her voice had the edge of frozen steel. "Your forces here at Khotalghar are, as I know, sold to England—oh! given, if you prefer the word! Words, after all, matter very little.... But there are still the six aeroplanes which you ordered from France, which have not yet been despatched to India, and are in the hands of the manufacturers."

"Yes.... the Maharajah muttered. "I intend to put those also at the service of the British Flying Corps. I am writing the letter now."

"You will not do it!" A spark seemed to be lit suddenly behind the slaty greyness of her sombre eyes. "Do you hear me?—you shall not! I forbid it—those at least shall be kept out of the British claws."

"I.... What do you wish, then?" Zindia spoke sullenly, but with a note of acquiescence which was unmistakable.

"I want them put at my disposal—to be used as I wish." The cold incisive words rang like a command and as a command they were received, although with some show of protest.

"If I do that, I must know what you mean to do with them, for what purpose...." the Maharajah began nervously, only to be cut short in mid-speech.

"Why? I see no necessity for you to know anything. It is quite sufficient that I have my reasons and my intentions. Those aeroplanes were planned by me, ordered by me, and I tell you that they shall never serve England!"

"Very well. I agree. I will make out the necessary papers putting them at your disposal," the Maharajah said.

"There is another thing. I want enough money to take me to France. I've nothing to do now in India—thanks to your cowardice."

"You are cruel."

"I mean to be. You've failed me—yourself—India."

"You are going to France? I shall be there myself soon. I have offered to serve with my troops."

"Then you will make the arrangements and let me have the money. I shall be leaving India soon."

"You may not find it so easy to get a passage."

"I can manage harder things than that, I fancy. That is all then—"

She was gone swiftly, noiselessly.

That question of a passage preoccupied most European women in India. They felt forlorn, abandoned, after their menfolk disappeared into the ever-growing blackness of the war-cloud. And yet for some time they did not know which way to turn, or where they wanted to go. It all depended on where the particular man who mattered had gone to—and that, for weeks, no one knew, no one could more than guess.

The summer heat passed, the cold weather season began to draw near, during that waiting time, and then, at last, to Chrissie Struan, as well as to many others, came a letter.

Wilson Hall, who was still keeping a brotherly eye upon Chrissie from the hotel at Pathapore, found her reading it on the same veranda where so much had taken place in the lives of both of them. And, as she read, she alternatively laughed and cried.

"Oh, Mr. Hall, it's a letter from Ranny!" Chrissie told him, quite unnecessarily. "A splendid long letter at last! He says he couldn't write before—it's dated September 26th, the day they arrived there—"

"Where?" Hall asked.

"France.' Chrissie drew a long breath, and something like the shadow of a cloud seemed to pass over the sunlit gold in her eyes. "Of course, we knew more or less, but they're really there.

"There are lots of most thrilling things in the letter. I must read you bits of it." She rustled the thin sheets. "The Suez Canala is all entrenched—just fancy! Of course, they're afraid of the Turks attacking; it's so fearfully important to hold it. Oh! and here's something tremendously interesting!"

She read aloud, her voice shaken with excitement.

"There's a good deal more," Chrissie was still turning over the sheets. "The Suez Canala is all en- the rest is—well, not exactly news!" She laughed and blushed, looking at Hall deprecatingly then added in a businesslike manner: "Anyhow, now we know where we are—and the sooner I can get back to England the better. I must be nearer to Ranny, in case....He understands that; and he says that I'd better apply for a passage at once; they'll be providing troopships to send home the families soon now, he expects."

"I see — yes." Hall looked thoughtful, leaning forward in his chair as Chrissie went on rather unsteadily.

"Of course, it's—it's very hard to have to think of Ranny as actually in the fighting; I daren't think of it. But I know it's where he'd want to be, and it's a great comfort to have heard from him, to be certain of what he wants me to do. It's the waiting that's so impossible...."

"Of course; that's so always. Well—" Hall leaned back and surveyed his out-stretched legs contemplatively. I think that the sooner I make a move too, now, the better. I may be able to find some useful job in Europe, even if the U.S.A. don't officially come into the war as I hope they will!"

"Do you mean you'd join the British Army?" Chrissie asked eagerly.

"Or the French. I might do worse. Or I may be more use in a Red Cross job. Anyway, once your passage is fixed up, I'll feel free to start off myself, and get on with it."

"You mean, you've been waiting all this time for my sake? Oh! Mr. Hall, it was very, very good of you—and I don't know what I should have done without you. I really don't!"

"That's all right. I might even be able to get a passage back to Europe in the same boat as yourself, which would be better still; almost too good to be possible."

"It would be simply splendid!" agreed Chrissie fervently.

"Splendid—yes; simple —well, I rather doubt that!" Hall commented drily. "But if I don't manage it, it won't be for the want of trying."

There followed another period of waiting which was even more harassing than that which had gone before.

But passages were secured at last, and the almost unhoped-for, despaired-of journey was about to begin. Hall by the exercise of more diplomacy than he would ever have believed himself to possess, had obtained the right to travel in the trooper. Together they stood on the deck of s.s. Berkshire and watched Bombay receding behind their ship's wake as the steamer kept on its steady course towards the horizon. This was their last glimpse of India.

Across the silver waters of the harbour, from the clustered shipping at the quays, tiny skiffs and wide-sailed dhows skimmed like butterflies in the sunlight.

The gateway to the country of the Great Raj closed gradually, leaving only a memory of the murmur of voices, temple bells and drum-beats, all blending even in remembrance into a lessening hum as the land receded, faded into the distance.

ALMOST ENVIES BLIND BARTIMAEUS

Evangelist Continues Campaign at Evangel Temple With Capacity Crowd

Campaign Continues at Evangel Temple, Capacity Crowd

"I almost envy 'Blind Bartimaeus' because the first person he beheld was none other than the Lord Jesus the compassionate Son of God, who had stooped from the ivory palaces of the Gloryworld to come to earth to give spiritual sight to those helplessly blinded by sin from birth", so said Evangelist Tom Miller, the Scottish Bible Expositor in addressing an audience last night which so taxed the capacity of the Evangel Temple that it was necessary for some to stand, after all available benches from the Sunday School room had been placed in the auditorium. Though the campaign was originally scheduled to come to a close last night, due to the continually rising interest manifested in the services, Mr. Miller agreed to continue his stay in Belleville another week after a standing vote was taken by the congregation.

Speaking from the 10th chapter of the Gospel by Mark, the evangelist used the account of the healing of Bartimaeus as an illustration of how spiritual sight is received when Christ is accepted as the believing sinner's personal Saviour. "Notice these very important things as to the way that Bartimaeus received his sight. He cried for the right thing—Mercy. What we need is the mercy of God. Some people think that education, reformation, or a change of location are what they need. But all of that would not have changed this poor blinded beggar's eyes—he needed the mercy of the Son of God to heal him. He cried to the Right One. It would have been useless to cry to anyone else, as no one else had the power to heal his eyes. So no one else but Christ can give you spiritual sight. Preachers have their place in God's economy, but even the best preacher can't save you, but Christ will when you accept the finished redemptive work of Calvary's Cross. And possibly most important of all, this blind man cried at the right time, when the Lord was near. As far as we know the Lord Jesus was never near that place. It is nothing short of a tragedy to fail to accept Christ when He is near, making overtures of His redeeming love to your heart, because we never know if He will draw near to our human dwelling place in convicting power again. And what a transformation was his! He believed, exercising faith. He received sight. He followed Christ, the proof of his thorough conversion from his former life to the Lord Jesus Christ".

The musical preliminaries included a duet "Why Should He Love Me So", Misses Bennett and LaFontaine; a solo "I Know a Name", by Miss Bennett; a duet "Meet Mother in the Skies" by Pastor and Mrs. Kulbeck; a Vibraphone solo by Ed. Rupert, as well as hearty congregational singing of several Old Gospel favourites and choruses.

All Three Hurlers Have Been in the Big Leagues for Some Time

YANKS MOVING UP

McCarthy's Power Machine Have Not Been Defeated in Five Starts

(By Sid Feder Associated Press Sports Writer).

The handwriting on the wall does funny things to players.

They take a look at the big "period" for their ball-playing careers, and sometimes they come apart at the seams. Or sometimes it gets their "dander" up, and they come back all or at least part of the way.

In this latter group, you might take the case of yesterday's winning pitchers on the curtained three-game major league program. There was curly-haired Wesley Ferrell, the Yankees' handsomest man; there was lefty Larry French, the Cubs' 10-year man, and there was 32-year-old Fritz Ostermueller, Boston Red Sox southpaw.

The Yanks had about come and told Wes he didn't have many more chances to show them they hadn't made a mistake when they signed him last year after he had been dropped by Washington. Lefty Larry French lost 19 games in '38 for the Cubs, and when he was belted out his first two starts this season, the Chicago front office didn't cheer about handing him his pay cheque. And Fritz had been anything but a ball of fire in three previous outings this spring.

They All Clicked

So yesterday, it was more or less the "last ditch" stand. And they all clicked.

Ferrell did it with a sore elbow and went eight innings before giving way to Johnny Murphy. Between them they tured in a five-hitter to blank the Athletics 3-0 and keep the Yanks 1 1-2 games in front of the American League.

French ran into slight trouble in the second inning, but went on from there to a six-hit job in turning back his old mates, Pittsburgh Pirates 6-2. Ostermueller was given a lot of hitting support in trouncing Washington Senators 9-2 with an eight hit elbowing performance.

Wes' win for the Yanks boosted the world champions' victory streak to five straight. From the Athletics' point of view the only saving feature was the 10 putouts credited to Skeeter Newsome, which equalled the American League record for that particular task for the first time since old Nap Lajoie did it for the same club in 1901.

Injecting something a little out of the ordinary into the baseball news, a squad of catchers with Philadelphia Phillies gathered at the base of Philadelphia's city hall and tried to catch a ball thrown from the top by another catcher, Spud Davis. Of the five receivers at the bottom of the building Dave Coble, an untried rookie, was the first to make the catch, which he is seen doing in the lower picture. Davis is shown at the TOP. Distance of the drop was 595 feet, some distance behind the 708 foot catch made last year in Cleveland by Henry Helf, another rookie.

Conny Smythe Working On Device to Signal Goals Automatically

Toronto, May 16 (CP)—Conny Smythe, manager of Toronto's National League Club, said today he plans to confer with electrical engineering experts on the possibility of inventing a device to signal hockey goals automatically.

Smythe said his idea would be "to have a puck with a band of a certain color and to have the goal posts wired in such a way that rays were made from between the posts. Then when the puck penetrated these rays it would automatically register the goal light and there could be no dispute on whether or not a puck passed the goal lines."

JERSEY GIANTS SOUNDLY BEATEN BY ROCHESTER

Winners Ring up 25 Hits Off Three Hurlers and Coast to 16-1 Win

Marvin Duke Allowed 10 Hits But Kept Them Well Scattered

(By The Associated Press)

It's hard to think of any serious ups and downs in the International Baseball League race when there are only 4 1-2 games separating the first seven teams in the standing, but it is becoming evident the league-leading Jersey City Giants and Syracuse Chiefs are not keeping up their early-season pace.

Since ending their first home stand and starting north, the Little Giants have been getting little more than an even break. Their nine victories in 13 home games gave them a lead they haven't lost yet, but on foreign fields they have won only six games and lost five.

The Chiefs didn't do so well at home, but spurted into third place in their first week on the road. Now they have lost six of their last seven games and fallen back again into a virtual tie with Buffalo for sixth.

Rochester Red Wings, going great guns the past few days, were one good reason for Jersey City's worst defeat of the season yesterday, but the Giants hit more like midgets, too. The count was 16-1 and it was just about the mesaure of the difference between the teams for that afternoon.

Wings Get 25 Hits

Every Rochester player hit at least once as the Red Wings clubbed out 25 hits off three pitchers. Jack Sturdy connected for a homer, triple and three singles and Dusty Cooke and Sam Narron for four blows apiece. The Giants got only seven altogether off Ken Raffensberoer, who hung up his second mound victory.

Syracuse batsmen swung about as ineffectively as those from Jersey City. They touched Marvin Duke of Montreal for 10 hits but went down 4-1 because they couldn't make them count. Ted Kleinhans allowed only eight blows but couldn't get through the eighth inning safely after Art Parks belted his seventh home run of the season. A walk, an error by Ben Sankey, Leo Norris' single and Duke's sacrifice fly gave Montreal two more runs and the ball game.

Cold weather caused postponement of the Baltimore-Toronto game while Newark and Buffalo took a day off following a Sunday doubleheader.

CHINESE CAPTURE YOCHOW

Chungking, May 16 —(AP) — Chinese military authorities reported today that Chinese forces had recaptured Yochow, in Northeastern Hunan Province, 100 miles southwest of Hankow.

The report could not beverified through independent channels and foreign observers were inclined to doubt that the Japanese had lost this Yangtse River foothold. The Japanese took Yochow last fall, a few weeks after the Oct. 26 capitulation of Hankow.

Subjects of another batch of gridiron rumors are these campaigners in the cleat and clutch wars, whose scheduled moves involve London, Peterborough, Montreal, Ottawa, Hamilton and Toronto. LEFT is Geo. Willis, best snap in the intercollegiate loop with Western University, practically certain to line up with Hamilton Tigers of the Big Four this fall. RIGHT starting at the top and working down, Herbie Hendrie, last year with Peterborough's O.R.F.U. team, said to be returning to Balmy Beach in Toronto Herbie Westman, who booted McGill to the college championship, taking over, 'tis said, as kicker with Dominion champion Toronto Argos, whose Bob Isbister has gone to Hamilton and Cal Moore, who missed most of last eyar with Ottawa Rough Riders, reported returning to his first love. TONY CANZONERI TO TRY COMEBACK

Lightweight Champion Has Gone Back a Long Way in Fight Game

New Orleans, May 16 (AP)—Former lightweight champion Tony Canzoneri, the little fat man trying to make a comeback, knows today what it means when the ringside boys say "he used to be good once."

This is his home town. Last night thousands who had cheered him on the climb to the lightweight throne stood up and booed when he fought a 10-round draw through a veil of blood with Nick Camarata, also a local product.

The first shock for the boys who had seen him in the great days came when he climbed through the ropes and bounced across the ring with a jerk in his walk. Tony kept rubbing his double-chin and stroking a long patch over his right eye that had been blasted open in a New York gymnasium more than a week ago. The fight idled along, with Tony doing the heavier punching. He had sudden fits of furious fighting that looked like a man striking out in a wild dream. Camarata stabbed Canzoneri's eye to a red mush.

Referee Ray Dolan, who thought Tony had won, said "he ought to quit before he goes blind."

"Me," Tony said, "I'd like to come back if the folks will have me."

ANOTHER LINK WITH LOUIS RIEL PAST DIES

Fort Qu'Appelle, Sask., May 16 (CP)—H. F. Grass, who built the scaffold from which Louis Riel was hanged at Regina, and made the coffin for the rebel leader's body, died here Saturday. Grass was born at Kingston, Ont., 80 years ago, and came west in 1882.

CORBYS RALLY TO BEAT CEMENTMEN

Score Three Runs in Eighth Inning to Win by 8-7 Count

Coming from behind the Corbys A.C. 'mushballers' scored three runs in an eighth inning rally to down the Point Anne 'Cementmen' 7 to 6 in exhibition softball game played at Point Anne last evening.

Each nine opened with a vengeance and scored three runs each in the initial frame. The Cementmen moved into a commanding lead with singles in the third and fourth but as Corbys scored three in the eighth, the best the homesters could do was bag one and the game was called on account of darkness.

The veteran Earl "Sonny" Green ascended the mound for the homesters and after a lengthy lay-off from the game of softball turned in an impressive performance. Eddie Schrieder and Con Harris divided the hurling labors of the Corbys.

Cy Barriage with a triple and three singles led the batters of the night, Reid, McMartin and Knott also clubbing for three bases. Genereaux, E. Green and Scott wielded potent bats for the losers. The homesters got one hit and one run off the deliveries of Harris.

The score by innings:

		R	H	E
Corby A. C. ..	300 010 03—	7	15	6
Point Anne	301 100 01—	6	7	3

Batteries: Point Anne, E. Green and M. Green; Corbys A.C., Schrieder, Harris and Knott.

BAGNATO WINS OVER CABELLO

Puerto Rican Stayed on Defensive for Entire Ten Rounds

Toronto, May 16 (CP)—Boxing experts still have little to add to the form sheets of Joe Bagnato and Johnny Cabello.

The hard-hitting Bagnato took a 10-round decision from the Puerto Rican lightweight here last night, but he had little chance to show his wares against Cabello's strictly defensive tactics.

The judges agreed unanimously on the Toronto lad who led most of the way in spite of a three-pound deficit in weights at 132. Bagnato was forced to cover up only once when Cabello came out of hiding long enough to land a hard right in the fourth.

The surprise result of the card was scored by Mike Martyk, 129 1-2 pound St. Catharines bulldog, who slugged out an eight-round decision over Jackie Callura, Hamilton Italian with an edge in experience and weight. The crowd, pleased with the toe-to-toe exhibition howled for a draw, but the favorable decision helped Martyk along the trail towards a Canadian bantamweight championship match.

No one protested the seventh-round technical knockout awarded Frankie Genovese in the semi-final more than Norm Hurdman who lost the fight. Hurdman, who had ben knocked down four times, emphatically denied he was in distress when the referee ended the fight and his actions supported his words. Genovese, former Canadian welter weight champ, at 150 had a two-pound pull in weights.

EXPERTS CONCEDE SIX WITH CHANCE TO WIN GUINEAS

Sea General is at Top of List with Archworth a Close Second

MANY LONG SHOTS

In This Respect McMark and Budsis Are the Most Favored

(By Foster Barclay Canadian Press Staff Writer).

Toronto, May 16 (CP)—Bettors who pass casually over the favorites and fish about for a long shot special will have lots of material from which to select a hope in the 80th running of the King's Plate here May 22.

Experts have analyzed the speed and stamina and past records of the probable starting lineup in the mile-and-a-furlong classic at picturesque Woodbine Park. The consensus concedes only five or six a chance to win.

Opinions of experts don't worry the long shot plungers. They remember Maternal Pride and her upset victory in 1924. Nobody gave H. S. Wilson's Colorbearer an outside chance to win the King's 50 guineas. She came home on top handily and paid off at more than 90-1.

Six Favored

The thoroughbreds favored by clockers, railbirds and race track hangers on in the battle for the guineas and the major portion of a $10,000 added purse are Harry Giddings' Sea General, C. George McCullough's Archworth, J. E. Smallman's Millius, Cosgrave's Stable's Jelwell, Mrs. R. E. Webster's Syngo Bay and H. R. Bain's Rye Grass.

Odds on the six will range from 2-1 to 10-1. The six or seven others expected to parade to the post before the King and Queen and 100,000 other persons will stretch all the way up to 100-1.

Followers hoping for an upset victory are stringing along with McMark, a big brown gelding owned by J. G. Pair of Brantford. The gelding showed he could run in the stretch when he finished second in the Coronation Stakes, a juvenile test event, last year.

Real Good Juvenile

McMark, racing in greatly improved fashion, came strongly in the stretch and finished a length behind Jelwell in the six furlongs dash. He ran over Archworth, the early pacemaker, in the final drive.

"Dude" Foden, one-time king of the half-mile riders, will straddle the gelding in the Plate. Pair checked in at the track with McMark last week and has put him through a few easy gallops.

Others placed in the longshot line included J. E. Frowde Seagram's Saragossa, W. P. Morrissey's Gas House, W. T. Raines Sea Cadet, H. C. Hatch's Budsis and R. W. R. Cowie's Adrift.

Jimmy Braddock Assisting Nova To Beat Baer

(By Gayle Talbot Associated Press Sports Writer).

New York, May 16 (AP)—Jim Braddock, the former heavyweight champion, is up at Lou Nova's training camp at Nyack, N.Y., giving the young Californian free and explicit instructions on how to beat Maxie Baer in their fight at Yankee Stadium June 1.

Braddock won his title from Baer in one of the big upsets of ring history, so he is in position to give Nova valuable pointers on the subject.

Jim, himself, is rounding gradually into condition preparatory to invading England early in June for a series of scraps.

"There isn't a doubt in my mind that Nova will whip Baer," said Jim yesterday. "This kid is the strongest thing I ever ran into. He's still stout as a bull after five or six rounds. That's going to be the big difference in their fight. Max hasn't lived the kind of life to have the strength and endurance he'll need against Lou.

"I guess Max is gambling that he can knock Nova out in the early rounds. He's going to be greatly surprised, because even if this boy does get knocked down he'll bounce right up. I wouldn't be surprised if Lou wins by a knockout in the late rounds."

Jim said he didn't want anybody to think he was trying to teach Nova how to box, because the youngster already knew the tricks.

Edmonton Grads Came From Behind To Defeat Cleveland

Edmonton, May 16 (CP)—Edmonton Grads are two games up on Cleveland Nokolos and can end the Underwood Women's International basketball challenge series in the third game tomorrow night.

Grads won 39-26 although they had to come from behind in the last half. The Edmonton girls, Underwood champions since 1923, encountered much more difficulty than in the first game of the best-of-five series Saturday when they won 61-32. Noel McDonald centre and captain, led Grads with 12 points.

Between the Lines

Ken J. Colling

With baseball and softball looming on the local sport horizon and scheduled to open next Monday, perhaps it would be well to acquaint the patrons of the diamond games with the changes in scoring rules, that have been adopted this year. There are four distinct changes in the 1939 scoring rules, so in order to enlighten those fans who keep their own box scores we might state there are four distinct changes in the scoring rules.

1. The old sacrifice fly rule has been returned to use.
2. Stolen bases will be credited when balks, wild pitches or passed balls occur.
3. There will be no credit for a run-batted-in if the batter hits into a double play, while a run is scored.
4. Any batter trying to stretch a hit an extra base and overslides the said base, will not get credit for the overslid bag.

In reference to the first mentioned change—it merely means when a batter skies out, be it a hard or soft fielding chance, and a runner subsequently scores, the batter will be credited with a sacrifice in the box score, but a run must score in oredr to assure a sacrifice. This rule always proved a bone of contention among scorers of old. Smith might hit a terrific drive to right, with a man on second. The fielder might make a sensational running catch for an out and the base runner advace to third after the out, but Smith would not be credited with a sacrifice. Then along comes Jones and pops a high fly into centre for an easy out, to have the base runner at third score afterwards. Jones gets a sacrifice and no turn at bat in the box score, while poor Smith who tried much harder, is penalized. "Tain't fair," cry some. However, the sacrifice fly rule is back again, but remember a run MUST score in order to credit the batsman with the sacrifice.

Insofar as change No. 2 is concerned the scorers were of the opinion, that when a balk, wild pitch or passed ball occurred, the base runner's presence on the base paths may have been attributed to the bungle, so a stolen base will be given base runners advancing on a passed ball, wild pitch or balk this year. Change No. 3 speaks for itself—no run-batted-in will be credited to a batsman, who hits into any double play, regardless as to the circumstances. The elimination of crediting a batter with extra bases when he overslides a bag will not materially effect his batting average, but it will effect his total bases if he is caught oversliding the bag in an attempt to stretch out a hit. Baseball and softball players should take warning of these changes and don't come running to the scorekeeper with a squawk—"I've been robbed."

The ownership of a batter when a pitcher has been relieved is solved in this way. Two or three balls, none, one, or two strikes on the batter by the first pitcher saddles him with the blame if the batter walks; two balls and two strikes puts it on the relieving pitcher if the batter is walked. The reliveing man will be given the strikeout if he makes it, no matter what the count of strikes when the first pitcher is relieved.

The earned run problem is made clearer by the following explanations: "An earned run shall be scored every time the player reaches home before fielding chances have been offered to retire the side. Even if a wild pitch be a third strike, it counts in the earned run cause. Give the pitcher the benefit of the doubt on fielding errors and in determining the base to which a runner would have been held with perfect support on the part of the fielders."

Generally speaking scorers and umpires try to keep abreast with the new rules in vogue, but such is not the case of majority of players, who sometimes are ignorant of the rules and are prone to argue the point when in the wrong partaining to the new playing rules, which we published last week and the new scoring rules, here-with-in available, there is no reason why all local baseball and softball players can't acquaint themslves with the new rules, which will be introduced when the opening game of the Bay of Quinte League brings together Walt Gerow's Napanee league champions versus the Belleville nine at the Fair Grounds next Monday morning.

Without ceremony the tennis courts, situated at the Quinte Skating Club grounds on Dufferin Ave., were officially opened over the week end. The floodlights were turned on and the courts are reported to be in splendid shape. Incidentally the Belleville Lawn Bowling Club is contemplating their opening on May 22nd, their greens having wintered splendidly, President Correll says.

There are rumours rife intimating Don Ross and Dan Howley will be out as president and general manager of the Toronto Maple Leafs Baseball Club respectively before the end of the season. None other than our good friend Jack Corcoran, maestro of the Queensbury A.C. has been mentioned to succeed Ross as President. The present management of the Leafs have made little or no outward attempt to give Ontario baseball fans a good brand of class AA ball in the International League. Toronto and Ontario will support a good team, but a shake-up has long since been needed in the inner works of the Leafs.

We're Telling You That "Speedy" St. Louis left recently for Toronto where he expects to catch on with the Findlay Club of the T.A.B.A.....Looks like open warfare in the O.L.A. circles, with the Orillia Terriers and Brampton both defying the parent body in using players who have received life-time banishment from the game....Smelled like another 'hometown decision' in the Genovese-Hurdman go last night; even the fans joined in with the Bronx cheers coming from Hurdman's corner....Remember the pitching battles staged between Joe Spring of Toronto and Freddie Geyer a couple of decades ago?.... Joe Spring Jr., a 17-year-old kid, will make his senior T.A.B.A. debut this week on the mound for the Findlays...."Turn back, turn back, oh time in thy flight."

The Stars Say—

For Wednesday, May 17
By GENEVIEVE KEMBLE

A PARTICULARLY lively and eventful day is read from the ruling lunar aspects, with much progress and fulfilled ambitions possible. In fact, this day may call for very drastic and decisive action, which, however, should not be permitted to have inharmonious reactions on the personal life. Use tact and compromise should friction disturb the domestic or social relations. There are signs of intrigues or undercover understandings in the sentimental affairs.

Those whose birthday it is may anticipate a particularly lively and expansive year, with much progress in the direction of ambitions and high objectives. Profitable and harmonious relations may be fostered by compromise, subtlety and friendliness rather than with ruthless measures. Intrigue or curious phases may prevail in the very personal contacts. This calls for discretion.

A child born on this day, although versatile, active and progressive in its outer life, may have certain obscurities or subtleties beneath the surface. It may be well equipped for a professional or commercial career.

SWEDISH AVIATOR ON ATLANTIC TRIP

Left Botwood, Nfld., at 3.40 E.D.T. in Small Plane Bound for Sweden

St. John's Nfld., May 16 (CP Cable)—Carl Backman, youthful Swedish aviator attempting a flight from America to Sweden, took off from Botwood Airport at 5.10 a.m. Newfoundland Daylight Time (3.40 a.m. E.D.T.) today on the second leg of his trans-Atlantic hop, according to word received here.

Backman landed at Botwood at 6 p.m. last night after a flight from Bangor, Me.

The brief message to St John's from the Airport did not give any details of the takeoff. The aviator, described as slim, blond and about 27 years old, left Bangor yesterday at 8.45 a.m. E.D.T.

Flight Unheralded

The young aviator's flight was unheralded, but James Dinegan, a United States Airways observer who talked with Backman before he left, said he understood he was taking part in a three-man race to Sweden for a prize.

The plane, a tiny "Monocoupe" powered by a 90-horse power engine, carried 160 gallons of fuel when it left Bangor. With a full load of 170 gallons, the flier was expected to be able to reach his destination with enough fuel remaining for another seven hours' flying.

WESTERT WHEAT

wheat price, he cited the increased expenses caused by the unsystematic land settlement policy followed by the Dominion years ago. For instance, Alberta had to maintain five times the highway mileage for each 1,000 citizens that Ontario did and twice as much as for the people of Canada generally. Alberta had to maintain 90,000 miles of highway, he said.

Agriculture Minister Gardiner added that Saskatchewan had to keep up 210,000 miles of road.

Urged Storage Program

Mr. Blackmore urged a storage program for handling unmanageable surpluses of wheat. He also proposed a scale of guaranteed wheat prices for heavy-production areas, with 90 cents for a certain minimum quantity, 80 cents for wheat beyond that quantity; and only 70 cents beyond another point.

The Youth Training discussion centred chiefly on proposals for a revival of the old apprenticeship system under which most youths learned a trade. Hon. C. H. Cahan (Con. St. Lawrence-St. George) urged that "some amicable arrangement" be made with the trade unions and industry, although he understood the unions were opposed to apprenticeship. J. F. Pouliot (Lib. Temiscouata) said older employees would have to show "some generosity" or industry would have to see that new work was provided.

"It is rather incongruous that a lawyer of all people, should plead for relaxation of trade union regulations," observed A. A. Heaps (Labor Winnipeg North). "How many lawyers in this House would consider a relaxation of the regulations having to do with their own profession?"

Mr. Heaps appreciated the Labor Department's work in Youth Training but submitted too much should not be expected as far as placements were concerned. The youth problem would remain as long as there was unemployment.

Labor Minister Rogers reported for the first two years of the plan 117,675 registration, of which 28,614 were in courses designed to lead to employment. Of the latter total, 9,239 discontinued before completing courses, 8,029 were placed in employment and 5,178 were still in training at March 31, 1939.

New York, May 16 (AP)—Only two spectators—each paid a dime to get in—saw a man's battle for life against an angry python at the New York world's fair. The python non-poisonous—clamped its jaws on Dr. Hall's forearm and quickly wrapped two coils around his upper arm and knee. Seven attendants released him.

grandeur, with the blue hills of the Laurentians on the other side of a blue St. Lawrence, and the towering heights of Quebec looking down on this newest historic moment in a city already old in history, the ships will glide into position, probably at the scheduled hour.

It will be, in reality, the beginning of a month of ceremonial that will see the King and his consort across the Dominion and back, with a brief sojourn in the United States before they take leave of their subjects.

As the liner sails up the mighty St. Lawrence today, headed for port after ten days at sea, bells in the churches of riverside villages will ring in the hope that their greeting will be carried to the ears of their Majesties. If plans are carried out the King and Queen should see from the deck of the Empress tonight a long chain of beacons burning along the coast, announcing the royal progress up the river.

When the Empress of Australia rounds the Island of Orleans in Quebec harbor there will be a roar of welcome from thousands who will line the heights which look down on a broad expanse of river and the surrounding hills.

Careful Check-up

Provincial Police, working with Royal Canadian Mounted Police and civic police, as well as Scotland Yard officials, have seen to it that no one shall disturb the peace. A careful check-up has been made of all suspicious characters.

One man, arrested two days ago because of erratic conduct, has been sent to his home in a nearby town where it will be seen to that he remains until after the royal visit.

Col. Piuze, superintendent of the Provincial Police, last night said that he was found to be in a demented condition.

The parade spirit which has prevailed here continued yesterday. The royal car was given a final run through the streets escorted by the special khaki-clad motorcycle squads. Red-coated troops were in evidence, as well as the white-helmeted Provincial Police.

Everywhere along the hilly, cobblestoned streets, along the broad Grande Allee, and in the spacious squares of this old city, the soft tints of advancing spring were dominated by splashes of red, blue and gold.

Home Atmosphere

By KARIN SUNDELOF

Leigh Higgins had not been 10 minutes at Pine Crest before its home atmosphere was impressed most forcibly upon his senses. Leigh was a hotel man. He had been born in a hotel, had always lived in one, and expected to die in one. He was accustomed to having at his beck and call porters, bell hops and maids. In fact, the whole hotel force always paid him homage the minute they heard his name, for Leigh Higgins was known as the richest man this side of the Atlantic.

His doctor had ordered him to Pine Crest. He had given him six months, unless he took care of his health. The doctor knew all about Pine Crest. Some distant cousin of his owned the place, and ran it for summer boarders to put her two sons and her daughter through college.

It was late in the season. Except for one or two stragglers, Leigh Higgins was the only boarder there. He had not thought much about the home atmosphere of the place until he had tried to tip the girl that brought him his hot water. She laid the dollar back upon the dresser.

"You forget that this is not a hotel," she said, and Leigh, startled at the culture of her voice, looked at her a second time.

Surely this was no ordinary waitress. Why, she was beautiful! Not many girls in Leigh's social sphere could hold a candle to her loveliness in spite of their silks and jewels. Leigh pocketed the dollar.

"Yes I forgot," he returned, humbly.

"You see mother has let all the maids go, now, except one," explained the girl. "And as I am not going back to school, I can help her a bit. I am Valerie Verne. I hope we can make you comfortable, Mr. Higgins. Supper is at five thirty."

She closed the door noiselessly behind her. For some minutes Leigh Higgins stared at the closed door, as if half expecting that she might come back. For the first time in his life Leigh Higgins was in love.

It was on one of their morning walks that he proposed to her, just as the red sun was gliding over the edge of the hills.

"I know you're only twenty-one," he said to her, "and I must seem an old man to you. But I can give you everything."

Her breath caught in a half sob, as she turned and caught his hand in both of hers.

"No, you can't dear Mr. Higgins," she murmured. "If I had thought of anything—like this, I should have told you. You see, I'm going to be married. You haven't met Ritchie, because he's struggling so hard to get ahead so we can be married. He's just graduated from law school. The minute he can save up enough, he's going to give me a ring."

And Leigh Higgins, looking at the lovely flushed face before him, and feeling the warm, pulsating hands in his, knew that he had never known happiness, and never would.

Two days later he was in town again. He went straight to the office of a lawyer friend.

"I'm interested in—er—a young friend of mine," he began, coming right to the point. "His name is Richard Wells. Fine young fellow. Great stuff. I've traced a relative of his, who died on a Western ranch. Now, I want you to draw up papers, making it appear that this fellow left young Wells sole heir to $10,000. Here's my check for the amount. Mum's the word, mind you. And—er—it wouldn't be a bad idea to take the young fellow into your office, either."

That was how it happened that Pine Crest had a wedding so soon. Leigh Higgins was invited, although he didn't go. He did, however, send the bride a huge chest of real silver.

The night of the wedding, the doctor found him alone in the spacious suite of his hotel.

"Why not you stay at Pine Crest, man?" he asked him, bluntly, feeling his pulse. "I gave you six months if you stayed on in the city working like a fool. I give you no more, now."

Leigh Higgins smiled, wryly. "Say, Doc," he observed. "What odds? You can have all the hospitals you want when I'm gone. And say, I was never happier in my life than I am right now."

"You look it," was the dry response. "And why?"

"I've just helped to create the best bit of home atmosphere the world has ever known," said Leigh Higgins. "And that's that."

Little Benny's Note Book

Me and pop were taking a walk for pop's hmealth and I said, Our teacher was talking about great inventions in school today, pop.

Were you listening? pop said, and I said, Sure, pop, and she asked us what we thought was the greatest invention ever invented, and we said the telephone and the electhic light and the radio and different things and she said no it was the printing press.

And by gollies she was right, pop said. The greatest monuments man has ever bilt are lyberries, do you realize that? he said, and I said. Yes sir, sure, they always have the most steps and the highest doors and everything.

If they were holes in the ground they would still be man's greatest monuments as long as they contained books, pop said. What do you suppose litterature is? he said, and I said, Books.

Litterature is the permanent record of mankind's noblest and most useful thoughts, pop said. A few hundred years ago those thoughts used to disappear in the perishable memories of our ancesters, but since the invention of the printing press they are imprisoned forever in the form of printed words for future geenrations to read and profit by. If there had been on printing press in Shakesbeer's time there would be no immortal Hamlet today, but when Shakesbeer asked the famous quetstion, To be or not to be? the printing press answered, Absilutely, pop said, and I said, Well jimminy, pop, wouldn't there even be any funny pages on Sundays?

You have seized the idea by both horns and one tail, pop said. Yee gods, leave me alone with my cigar and my own lofty thoughts, he said.

Wich I did for about a block.

Rawdon

Rawdon — Around two hundred friends and neighbors as well as many from Bethel community gathered on Thursday evening at the spacious home of Mr. and Mrs. John Morrison and tendered their daughter Nellie and her husband a miscellaneous shower. The young couple received the guests and the bride looked charming in her wedding gown.

Rev. J. M. Beckel was master of ceremonies and the programme opened with community singing led by Mrs. Don Heath and Mrs. Will Heath with Mrs. Harold Elliott as pianist.

Master Bobby Elliott rendered a piano solo "The Witches Dance" and Mrs. Percy MacMullen of Mt. Pleasant contributed a humorous reading. Mr. B. C. Tucker expressed best wishes on behalf of Bethel Sunday School as Nellie was a member of his class. Mr. C. U. Heath expressed greetings from Bethel United Church congregation, Mr. John Scott from the community at large. All spoke highly of Nellie and wished for her the best of everything in her new home at Mount Pleasant. Mrs. Harry Preston delighted with a humorous reading "Patching Overalls". Miss Ella Sutherland read an appropriate address as follows:

Bethel, May 11th, 1939.

Dear Nellie and Herbert.

We, your friends and neighbors of Bethel community are gathered together tonight to wish you well as you continue your married life together. It is natural for two young people to link their lives together for better, for worse, for richer, for poorer in sickness and in health. It is our hope that you will so cherish that bond of matrimony that nothing will ever mar the union that you made one with the other on Saturday afternoon April 29th.

Nellie, we Bethel people have always thought a great deal of you. Your cheery disposition and genial manner have ever won for you many warm and lasting friends. You have always been a sensible girl and your approach to problems of life have always been most sane. You have ideals which are Christian and you have tried to work them out in daily life. You have always tried to do your best for the church of which you are a member. It is a great loss to us to lose one who has fitted into the community and church life as you have done. But we have decided to hand you over to the Smith clan and we hope you will continue to be as helpful in your new community as you have been in ours.

Herbert, we Bethel people do not know you so well but we wish for you and Nellie the best of everything that is worth while. We will follow you with interest as you and Nellie walk together the pathway of life. It is our hope that you will meet all the obstacles of life in the spirit of the Master.

We are sure that as time goes on and we come to know you better we will think of you as we do of your wife.

We have been very glad to come here tonight and shower you with these gifts and we hope you will long cherish them because they are the gifts of people who are deeply interested in you both and wherever you go and whatever you do may you always remember the love and friendship of the people of Bethel.

Signed on behalf of church and community, Annie Warren, Eva Farrell, Ruth Green.

Both Herb and Nellie graciously replied thanking their friends for the many parcels which when opened revealed a large array of useful gifts. They also invited all their friends to visit them in their new home.

All joined in singing "For they are jolly good fellows" and an appetizing lunch was served at the close.

The Township Executive of the Ontario Religious Education Council for Stirling, Marmora and Rawdon convened in Bethel United Church on Wednesday evening with the president Mr. Carl Clancy, Wellmans, in charge of the meeting.

Mr. and Mrs. John Farrell, Bethel, recently visited Mr. and Mrs. Henry Farrell at Carmel.

A large number of Rawdon folk attended the funeral of Mrs. Wallace McInroy in Springbrook Church on Wednesday.

TORONTO STOCKS CLOSE

Toronto, May 16—(CP)— The selling on Toronto Exchange today was more urgent than the buying in the early trade and prices weakened in the mining and industrial divisions to post losses of about a point in the indices by noon. Western oils moved up to record a moderate index gain on the announcement that allowable production in the Alberta oil field would be increased about 15 per cent. Turnover reached 215,000 shares in the first three hours.

The Canadian Car issues were sharply down on a report that the preferred dividend might not be paid. The preferred lost about 4 points and the common 1 1-2. Steels were weak generally along with the foods and the liquors.

Nickel and smelters declined about a point and moderate weakness ruled among the other base metal shares. Eldorado backed down to 1.22. Soft spots in the golds included Preston, East Malartic, Uchi, Chesterville and O'Brien. Kerr-Addison and Pamour were up.

Canadian exports of eggs are running ahead of last year, with 2,428 cases inspected for export to Great Britain last week as compared with 2,247 cases a year ago. Since April 21 to date inspections totalled 5,888 cases for export against 4,522 cases in the same period of 1938. Locally, the egg market was generally quiet and prices unchanged. Graded shipments closed at 20c for grade A-large, 18c for medium and 17c for B and C grades. Government inspected lots were offered at 1-2c premium.

ROYAL BRIEFS

Quebec, May 16 (CP)—Chef Louis Baltera took no chance about the trout to be served to their Majesties at the Provincial Government's dinner tomorrow. Louis ordered a supply of carefully-bred trout from New York. Meanwhile the government sent squads to northern waters. They smashed through three feet of ice and fished for trout for the Royal meal. Clarke, Secretary of the Canadian Chamber of Commerce, told the Montreal Executive Association last night that business benefits, while secondary to the fact that "their Majesties will come to abide with us—a King and Queen among their own people," will be an important factor in connection with the Royal tour. While the King was not coming for the purpose of promoting business, "the immediate result will be reflected in the tourist trade," he said.

Edmonton' May 16 (CP)—As a reminder of the Royal visit here June 2, the name of Edmonton's famed Portage Avenue may be changed to Kingsway and a small park near the Canadian National Railways station named Queen's Park. Quebec, May 16 (CP)—Louis Gillet, member of France's Academy of "Forty Immortals", here to report the visit of the King and Queen for a leading French newspaper, said Monday the Royal visit "will demonstrate again to the world Britain's level-headedness and the enormous strength of the empire. It will show Chancellor Hitler what a serious error his Foreign Minister, Joachim von Ribbentrop, makes when he claims the empire is crumbling and falling to pieces," Gillet said.

Quebec, May 16 (CP)—Fruit for their Majesties figuring in tomorrow's menus has arrived in Quebec from England, Canadian points, and the United States. From England have come hothouse grown fruits, including luscious peaches and large Muscat grapes. With these will be placed in the Royal fruit basket apples from Georgian Bay, the well-known Canadian Spy. "And because this particular monarch is also an earnest and honorable British gentleman with a high sense of his official duty Americans are glad to welcome him to this continent and next month to this country," the paper continued.

Paris, May 16 (CP-Havas) — The journey of King George and Queen Elizabeth to North America is an event of vast historic importance emphasizing the greatness of colonial empires, Gabriel Hanotaux, historian and member of the French Academy, said today in an article in Le Journal. VISIT OF ROYAL seen by those who may gather to pay tribute to the King and Queen.

At Kingston, where Their Majesties were to have spent Sunday, the visit will be restricted to a drive through the city.

"For a time," the official statement said, "it was feared that it might not be possible to make the stop, which had been arranged for Kingston because it was felt that Their Majesties should not be denied an opportunity for adequate rest on Sunday, after the strain which will be imposed upon them by the crowding of the many events into the few days after their arrival, which has been so regrettably delayed.

"It has been found possible, however, to retain the visit to Kingston in the program, though the time has necessarily been curtailed.

To Carry Out Drive

Their Majesties have indicated, however, that rather than disappoint the people of Kingston and surrounding districts and particularly the school children and war veterans, they would like to carry out the proposed drive through the city."

Stops for brief periods at Cornwall and Brockville were in the original itinerary but were removed even before the first postponement of the arrival in Canada. After protests from civil delegations of both towns there seemed a likelihood the stops would have been restored to the itinerary.

Under the changed program the royal tour will be restored to the original program once the King and Queen reach Toronto next Monday'

All major functions originally scheduled for Ottawa have been included in the condensed itinerary with the exception of the proposed drive through Ottawa and across the river to the Quebec town of Hull. This fixture was not mentioned, but may be fitted into the program later.

Prime Minister Mackenzie King and almost his entire cabinet will leave Ottawa at noon today for Quebec where the government leader will be one of the first to greet His Majesty while his ministers, with other Canadian Privy councillors, will be presented.

OBITUARY

JOHN PREST

(Sidney)

Following an illness of some months duration, Mr. John Prest, one of the oldest and most respected residents of Sidney Township, passed away early Saturday morning, May 6th, at his home in the 8th concession.

The late Mr. Prest, who was in his 84th year, was of a kindly disposition and a good neighbour and friend. He was exceptionally devoted to his home and family, and was held in high regard by a large circle of friends. His early life was spent in Thurlow, but he had occupied his present home for the past thirty-seven years.

The funeral which took place from his home on Monday afternoon, May 8th, was conducted by Rev. Mr. Ward, pastor of the Sidney Baptist Church, who gave a most comforting message of consolation. The hymns sung were "Rock of Ages" and "Peace, Perfect Peace", and a most sympathetic solo, "I will sing you a song of that beautiful land", was rendered by Mrs. Don Rose. The many relatives, friends and neighbours from far and near in attendance at the funeral testified to the respect in which the late Mr. Prest was held.

The pall-bearers were nephews of the deceased—Nelson Prest, Clayton Prest, Ernest Wilson, Clifford Wilson, Nathan Reid and Ralph Smith.

Surviving to mourn the loss of a loving father are four sons—Leonard, John, Charles and William and two daughters, Mary and Nellie. Also two sisters, Miss Carrie Prest and Mrs. William Smith, all of whom reside in Sidney. To them is extended deepest sympathy in the loss they have sustained.

Interment was made in the family plot in Guffin's Cemetery, in the 8th Concession of Sidney, the graveside service being conducted by Rev. Ward.

the decks as they approached the Empress and cheered the King and Queen as they swept by 200 yards away. The King doffed his cap time and again while the Queen waved with enthusiasm.

When the order to join the escort was received the destroyers performed an outward turn and, increasing their speed to 24 knots, moved into position in front and on either side of the Empress. The Skeena was on the port bow and the Saguenay to starboard.

A little later the Empress entered Canadian waters and during the night the flotilla passed through the Gulf of St. Lawrence and into the St. Lawrence River. Tonight the ships will cast anchor below old Quebec, steaming into Wolfe's Cove tomorrow morning.

Rugged Quebec Coast Line

The liner was hugging the south shore of the St. Lawrence today to give the royal party a good view of the rugged Quebec coastline before a background of snow-covered hills.

The King, hatless, paced the deck smoking a pipe and enjoying the sunshine. A cold north wind stirred up whitecaps on the broad river.

STAG PICNIC FIST FIGHT FATAL

Playboy Scion of Chicago Wealth Dies of Blow on Head

Sarasota, Fla., May 16 (AP)—Potter D'Orsay Palmer, four-times married playboy scion of Chicago wealth was apparently the aggressor, Sheriff C. J. Hutches said today, in a stag picnic fist fight which resulted in his death.

The 34-year-old Palmer died yesterday of a cerebral hemorrhage which followed a blow on the head Thursday at a Junior Chamber of Commerce outing near Bradenton. Assistant State Attorney W. M. Smiley said Kenneth Nosworthy, a Bradenton meat cutter, said he struck Palmer with his fist.

Nosworth remained at liberty today. Sheriff Hutches said he saw no reason to detain him because he was available and "from all I can find out, Palmer was the aggressor."

At Palmer's bedside when he died were his parents, the socially prominent Mr. and Mrs. Honore Palmer of Sarasota and Chicago, and his bride of less than five months, a former waitress, Pluma Louise Lowery Abatiello.

Nosworthy said Palmer, who had been drinking, singled him out, followed him around, taunted him and finally struck him with his first. Nosworthy returned the blow knocking Palmer to the ground. Palmer jumped up and tried to wield a bottle and Nosworthy struck him a hard blow with his fist.

Says the Two "Merit Same Treatment as Enemies of Church and State"

SYNOD OPENS

Kingston, Ont., May 16—(CP)—Warning of the dangers to the state and church from communism and Fascism, Rt. Rev. John Lyons told the 73rd annual meeting of the Kingston Synod of the Anglican Church today that the two "merit the same treatment as the enemies of church and state."

Referring to what he termed "Modern Ideologies," Bishop Lyons said time-honored institutions, hitherto seemingly unshakeable and solid as granite, are giving way "though the process of time and the subversive influence of a new world order." Christianity and Democracy are face to face with a "religion of force, the doctrine that might is right, a religion of atheistic humanism, a man-made social and economic program which places the state, not God, supreme."

The existence of Communism and Fascism should arouse action for maintenance of "our cherished heritage, our Christian and Democratic institutions." Bishop Lyons said. The independent rights and autonomous spheres of activity of the individual, the family, the church and the religious community all are ignored or crushed under the systems labelled "Modern Ideologies," which profound a philosophy of life without God, based upon might not love.

Opposes Legislation

Bishop Lyons said it had been foreshadowed that the Ontario Government would introduce legislation widening the privileges of Sunday sport and theatres. He called for "becoming action and influence to oppose strongly any such attempt to encroach upon the peace and quiet of our Canadian Sunday."

"Sunday observance is man's own protection, safety valve under the pressure of modern life. The sanctity of the Sabbath must be upheld and Sunday safeguarded as a day of rest."

Referring to the visit of the King and Queen, Bishop Lyons said:

"The visit of their most gracious Majesties, King George VI and Queen Elizabeth to Canada marks a new epoch in intra-Empire relations. It is the first time in our history as a Dominion that the ruling monarch and his consort have visited our country. Their visit to this land and to this city is awaited with joyous expectancy and grateful anticipation. The genuine and loyal affection of Their Majesties' subjects in this Diocese has been voiced in common with the Church throughout Canada by our revered head, the primate of all Canada. Canada, Ontario and Kingston are honored by Their Majesties. Another link is forged in the invisible bond which binds us in deep devotion to the heart of Empire—the throne, made radiant and more potent by the personality and influence of Royal occupants."

WILL TAKE STAND IN OWN DEFENCE

Mickey MacDonald Likely to be Called by His Counsel, Frank Regan

Toronto, May 16 (CP)—Mickey MacDonald will take the witness stand in his own defence at this afternoon's session of the MacDonald murder trial, Defence Counsel Frank Regan announced today, after a surprise defence witness testified Mickey was in a downtown drug store about 20 minutes before bookie James Windsor was shot to death Jan. 7.

Mickey, 31, and his 19-year-old brother, Alex, are charged as two of the gunmen who entered Windsor's North Toronto home about 7.20 p.m., Jan. 7, and shot and robbed the bookie.

Margaret Mary Hoskins, 17, who said she had known Mickey since she went to school, testified she saw him "very, very drunk" in a drug store at Dundas and Jarvis Streets, which he left at 7.05.

Records of the Police Department's radio and teletype messages on the murder were produced by Inspector Richard Pounting.

PLACARDS IN JEWISH ON JERUSALEM WALLS

Jerusalem, May 16 (CP-Havas)—Placards printed in Hebrew appeared on the walls of Jerusalem today warning that the Jews "would take up the sword" if their hopes for a national home in Palestine were not fulfilled.

"We do not want to cause the death of innocent people but if necessary we will not hesitate to shed blood," the placards warned.

With the British Government's White Paper on Palestine scheduled to be published tomorrow night, various Jewish political factions apparently were united in opposition to the proposed settlement which is expected to restrict Jewish immigration to 75,000 during the next five years.

Rules for Cooking 100 Years Ago Subject of Interesting W. I. Paper

Roslin — The May meeting of the Women's Institute was held on Thursday afternoon, May 11th, at the home of Mrs. Wm. Weir, with an attendance of twenty-one. The president, Mrs. W. White, presided and the meeting opened with all joining in singing the Opening Ode and repeating the Lord's Prayer.

Discussion of these followed. The roll call was "Ways of Keeping Young".

It was "Grandmother's Day" and one of the grandmothers, Mrs. N. Sills was in charge of the program. Little Miss Mary Bates gave the address of welcome to the grandmothers to which Mrs. J. Robinson ably responded. Mrs. N. Sills gave a delightful talk on the motto for the day.

"If a smile we can renew
As our journey we pursue,
Oh the good we all may do
While the days are going by."

After this all joined in singing "The Maple Leaf" and "My Grandfather's Clock."

Mrs. C. Chapman read an account of a Grandmother's meeting held fifteen years ago in Plainfield, and "How to be a good Institute Member". and also read the Ten Commandments of the Institute.

Mrs. N. Alexander read one of Edward Mac Hugh's poems, "The Beautiful Life". Mrs. J. Chisholm gave a delightful talk on "Reminiscences of Earlier Days". Mrs. D. P. Leslie gave a paper "When Great Grandmamma gave a Dinner". They baked and they broiled and when it was enough they sat down at a groaning board.

On a top shelf among some old books this ancient cook book was found. Mr. John Farley, chief cook at the London Tavern compiled this art of cooking in which he told how to choose food and cook it. This book is of the tenth edition printed in 1804, with many additions of elegant dishes. Doubtless the first printing was some time earlier.

From time immemorial man has dressed his meat and exposed it to an open fire. There were no stoves, no gas or electricity to give uniform heat, no standard cups or measuring spoons gave uniform measurements. Yet some modern ways of cooking were already in use when this book was written. Many things were cooked in a wrapping of brown paper or under a lid of paper. Of recent years we have had a craze for paper bag cooking which is a modern variation of the old idea. With our modern insulated ovens we are not so much interested in such schemes for holding the flavor of the food.

The author describes a way of cooking greens or young peas when there is no more room on the fire. Place in a tin box with a tight cover so no water can enter and place the whole in another pot already boiling, over the fire. This was surely our good friend the waterless cooker. There was no time set save in a few instances, rather we are told to cook till it is enough. In short the experience and imagination of the cook was the principal factor in preparing a good dinner then as it is today.

They were lavish with butter and eggs in those days. Cream was something to pour in by the pint, and wines were recklessly added to all sorts of dishes. Meat and game were the first items and in the menus given we are amazed by the number and variety of meat dishes deemed suitable for one meal.

The place allotted to vegetables is in keeping with the whole trend of the book. There are just twenty-one ways of cooking them given in a chapter called "Roots and Vegetables" which would indicate that friend Farley did not consider that roots were vegetables.

The directions for cooking potatoes, from this book of 1804 were as follows: Boil in as little water as possible and they were cooked enough when the skins burst. The skins were then peeled off. Thereney, is much wisdom in this observation that numbers of cooks spoil their garden stuff by boiling them too much.

One clever idea shows how ingenuity took the place of equipment still to be invented: Eggs were broken on a slice of bread (the slice off a quartern loaf apparently was large enough to accommodate 6 or 8 eggs) and a red-hot shovel was turned over them till they were done. Then we come to directions for cooking certain dishes in scallop shells set near the fire and at once we were convinced that the term scallop came from the fact of the first of such dishes having been cooked in such a shell. Time was no object in that kitchen of long ago, doubtless there were sculling boys and maids to do the chores, so the cook could spend an hour beating a cake into which he had put 1 lb. of butter, 1 dozen eggs and lots of rich fruits all blended with flour. We like to use spoons and are too fastidious to use the hand which was the old method. Some still whisper that the human hand gets the best results. We find no leavening agent other than yeast and eggs mentioned in this book.

In the brief chapter on preparing nourishment for the sick we read that it is the indispensable duty of every cook to know how to prepare such nourishment. John Farley believed in the power of good food when skilled hands had dressed it. This is the way a cook gets to be an artist no matter what age he or she may live in.

Miss Blanche Reid gave a reading "The Kind Girl" and a poem. Each member of the Executive was asked to bring material for one months programme to the special meeting when the new programs will be planned. Mrs. N. Sills conducted a flower contest. An interesting group of antiques including one of the first paper dollar bills printed was on display.

The singing of the National Anthem brought this interesting meeting to a close. A dainty lunch was served and a social half hour enjoyed.

Merrickville Man To Fly 'Round World

Liverpool, May 16 (CP Cable) — Henry P. McLean, 56 year old contractor of Merrickville, Ont., disembarked from the liner Carinthia yesterday and told reporter of his "spur of the moment" decision to fly around the world starting next Thursday.

Mr. McLean said he decided four days out of New York to circle the globe in commercial airliners. He persuaded a Toronto nurse, Miss R. Atkinson, 25, to accompany him. He will use Imperial Airways planes to reach Hong Kong, Pan-American Airways to San Francisco and domestic services to Toronto, arriving about June 10.

When he started out, Mr. McLean had intended to holiday in England.

Thurlow Home Catches Fire

Gilead, May 16 (Special) — The home of Ernest Huffman, fifth concession of Thurlow, was partially burned by fire early today and only the prompt and heroic work of neighbors prevented a serious loss. The chimney on the house caught fire yesterday afternoon and was extinguished but at two o'clock this morning Mr. Huffman was awakened by the smell of smoke and investigation showed the chimney again on fire. A call by telephone to neighbors brought a ready response and with the exception of the one partition and part of the chimney, serious loss was prevented.

DEMOCRACY LACKS STRONG LEADERS

Statement Made by H. B. Fetterly in Speaking Before Y's Men's Club

"We of the democracies are not getting along and are practical failures simply because we lack strong leaders. We select men as leaders who display plenty of ambition, but for the most part they lack background, and thus we are confronted with economic and political problems, similar to those now facing Canada", stated H. B. Fetterly, Chairman of the local Children's Aid Society, as he spoke to the members of the Y's Men's Club at the Y.M.C.A. last evening on the subject of "Education in Modern Germany".

"The Germans, with Hitler at the helm, have a definite scheme to dominate the world and they instil this into their young from the time they are able to walk. At six years of age a German child becomes the property of the state and at ten joins the Hitler Youth Movement, during which time the child is taught, in the elementary schools, that the German or Nordic race, is superior to any other race on earth," stated Mr. Fetterly as he quoted from a German text book smuggled out of Germany by a U.S.A. college professor.

Complex is Cultivated

"That superiority German complex is cultivated today among seven of the ten million German youth under 21 years of age", added the speaker as he told of the period of labour training each German boy must give the state gratis in order to build up their economic status. "These Germans feel they were not defeated by superior armies in the last war, but rather were blockaded and starved into submission, but they hope to eliminate the possibilities of such a practice another time by these Youth Training Camps", stated Mr. Fetterly as he stated their object is world domination within two decades of Hitler's rise to power.

Eliminate the Inferior

In closing Mr. Fetterly spoke of the increased birthrate among the higher classes. "Hitler intends to eliminate the inferior, increase the birthrate of the pure Nordics and create a super race, he says. Hitler and Germany have blotted out Christianity and all societies. They want nothing international, only a superior German national race interests them," concluded Mr. Fetterly as he referred to the German efforts in this creation and the lack of proper education of statesmen by the democracies, which are not becoming stronger as the result despite repeated warnings and heedings.

Prior to introducing the speaker President Harold Vaughan appointed Y'smen Newt Thompson, Lorne McDougall and George Pauley, all past presidents of the club, as a nominating committee to select a slate of officers for the annual election of officers, to be held the last meeting of this month. The evening's musical entertainment was supplied by Y'sman Alec Gordon with two splendid piano solos.

B.Y.P.U. GROUPS ENJOY EVENING

Rev. W. H. Moore, Moderator of Peterboro Association, Principal Speaker

Baptist Young People's groups from Picton, Campbellford and Sidney, with representatives from Port Hope, Cobourg and Colborne met at a sectional rally in Victoria Ave. Baptist Church Monday evening.

The speaker of the evening, Rev. W. H. Moore, moderator of the Peterboro Association of Baptist churches, sounded a militant note in his address "Soldiering with the B.Y.P.U." Rev. Mr. Moore likened the Young People's Union to a division in the great army of Soldiers of The Cross. The church groups represented companies, these in turn forming the associations of battalions and the latter making up the division as represented by the Interprovincial conventions.

The speaker stated it was significant that St. Paul used the metaphor of a soldier so often in referring to followers of Christ and intimated that Christians should ever be on the offensive in order to further the Kingdom of God. "If we allow Christianity to retreat," he warned, "we allow anti-Christian isms to advance. We should think of ourselves as soldiers of Christ. The B.Y.P.U. is very dethink of ourselves from the individual point of view and the way we may apply ourselves as soldiers of finitely a cause which produces an effect in the Kingdom work. It is a cause worth living for and striving for, deserving of our best cooperation. Soldiering and not shouldering is what God wants. God does not want conscripts but He wants enlistment in the great army of Christianity."

Rev. E. K. Smith of Port Hope, Interprovincial cabinet representative, outlined briefly the B.Y.P.U. program in the Baptist Jubilee convention to be held at Toronto in July. Rev. Mr. Smith stated that the Lieutenant-Governor of Ontario, the Hon. Albert Matthews, would give an address.

Miss Aleita Horton of Sidney sang a lovely solo "Somehow" and the Picton union contributed with a vocal duet by Mrs. Keech and Miss Weidmark which was appreciated by the large audience. Rev. C. T. Olmstead offered the closing prayer after which refreshments were served in the church parlours.

BRITAIN MAY SEND RUSSIA NEW VOTE

No Official Indication is Given of Russia's Statement

London, May 16 (CP)—The Foreign Office said today that the Government "probably" would send a new note to Moscow this week in a renewed effort to bring Russia into the Anglo-French anti-aggression front.

There was no official indication of the nature of the British reply to Russia's latest statement of views, which was said to have declined to join the anti-war front unless Britain joined in an outright alliance with the Soviet and France.

Originally no British reply had been expected until Foreign Secretary Viscount Halifax saw the Soviet representative at Geneva next Monday, when the League of Nations council meets.

However, Russia's designation of the Soviet Ambasador to London, Ivan Maisky, as representative at the council session instead of Vlaumir Potemkin, Foreign Vice-Commissar, may have affected that intention.

Halifax To Visit Paris

Lord Halifax will fly to Paris Saturday morning for discussions with Premier Daladier and Foreign Ministry Georges Bonnet of France.

Informed French sources said Britain was counting on "mediation" by France to bring Anglo-Soviet negotiations to a successful conclusion.

Plainfield

Plainfield — Plainfield Women's Institute met at the home of Mrs. Clarence Marshall on Thursday afternoon. Mrs. E. Emerson, President, took charge. The meeting opened with a verse and chorus of "O Canada" led by Mrs. Ralph Wilder followed by singing the Ode and all repeated the Lord's Prayer.

Members then took their places in the kitchen to watch the preparing of meats by Mrs. Frank Hodgens. The prepared Swiss steak, crown roast of sausage, blade pot roast, beef and veal mousse, all of which were simply delicious and much praise was given Mrs. Hodgens for her work which was very helpful.

Next was the business meeting. Roll call was to be answered by sing, say or pay. Nearly all paid their fees.

Letters of thanks for flowers and cards of sympathy were read.

The co-operative programme was discussed. The quilting bee to be held at the C. N. Ex., Toronto, was discussed.

The financial statement was read by the secretary-treasurer, Mrs. C. Beatty, showing a balance of $64.75. The books were audited by Mrs. H. Harrison and Mrs. Orval Rollins. The teachers, Mrs. Donald and Mrs. C. Beatty, of the girls sewing class, had their pupils give a demonstration of their books, sleeping garment, bed socks knitted and bed room slippers made out of heavy material. All of which were very pretty and nicely done and a great help to the girls to learn to use the needle.

Mrs. H. Harrison took charge of the election of officers. President, Mrs. E. Outwater; 1st. Vice President, Mrs. R. Sullivan; 2nd. Vice President, Mrs. O. Rollins; Secretary Treasurer, Mrs. C. Poland Hopes Vicissitudes of Past are Over As She Resists Attempts of Nazi Domination

By Central Press Canadian

Poland, which participated with Germany in the partition of Czecho-Slovakia, fears she may be the Reich's next objective. Under leadership of Josef Beck (pictured above), the late Marshal Pilsudski's protege and now foreign minister, she has taken every precaution to prevent repetition of the dismemberment which destroyed Poland in 1795. Starting with signing of mutual protection pacts with France and England, this policy has culminated in a growing friendship with Soviet Russia, long Poland's bogeyman.

Announcement of "normalization of Polish-Soviet relations" was made in Warsaw after arrival of Vladimir P. Potemkin, Soviet vice commissar of foreign affairs, whose conferences with Britain and France are to decide the limits of Soviet participation in the anti-dictator front.

Indication of Poland's growing feeling of security behind Beck's mutual protection shield was the direct blow at Germany, made at the same time the Russian rapprochement was revealed. Daring Hitler's rage, Poland announced she was rejecting "insidious proposals" from Berlin for a Polish-German attack on the Russian Ukraine.

Poland, an ancient kingdom whose history dates from 966 and a great power from the 14th to the 17th century was completely dismembered by three partitions during the 18th century, in 1772, 1793 and 1795, Prussia, Russia and Austria, each taking a share of the booty, as shown by the map on left.

Overrun by the Austro-German armies during the world war, she regained her independence in the treaty of Versailles in 1919. Prussia was forced to surrender [illegible] square miles of land to the republic; Russia, 101,196 square miles; and Austria, 30,914 square miles. In addition, Poland in 1920 seized 11,140 square miles from Lithuania. Post-war Poland is shown on map at right.

A stranger-than-fiction story of a modern "Dr. Jekyll and Mr. Hyde" was unfolded in police court at Picton today, when Oscar St. Pierre, 60-year-old Hillier district farmer, peaded guilty to robbing a bank, attempting to break and enter another, and entering and robbing a pool room. St. Pierre was remanded to May 31 for sentence.

The elderly farmer and jack-of-all trades told a dramatic tale of a near-perfect crime that puzzled police for four years, and of blackmail and threats to kill. In the North Atlantic moderate gales occur on the average only about one day or so in June. In the South Atlantic, while June is the beginning of the hurricane season, these storms are comparatively rare and of moderate strength. Fog is most frequent during June but is practically absent east of the 40th meridian and south of the 40th parallel. Likewise in the Pacific fogs are a source of discomfort but generally only in the northern latitudes. In the Pacific temperatures will vary from 45 to 60 degrees north of the 40th parallel.

Gardiner Presides As 'Government' In Commons Today

Ottawa, May 17. —(CP)— The House of Commons met today under the leadership of a "one-man government". The one man and the government was Hon. J. G. Gardiner, Minister of Agriculture. Most of the other Ministers were at Quebec welcoming the King and Queen while Transport Minister Howe was on his way back to Ottawa from Halifax.

Even the oldest members could scarcely recall an occasion when only one Minister occupied the Treasury benches as the House moved through formal opening proceedings and the question period.

'Colonial Solidarity' New Phase Of Policy of Germany and Italy

Berlin, May 17 (AP)—The axis powers, Germany and Italy, introduced "colonial solidarity" as a new phase of their policy today, with Chancellor Hitler and Premier Mussolini under-scoring Italo-German unity by simultaneous tours of fortified zones overlooking French frontiers.

Hitler's tour through the Saar Valley—timed with Mussolini's swing through Piedmont frontier towns—and the Reich Colonial Congress in Vienna are to lead to a climax with the signing of the Italian-German Military Pact, probably in Berlin next Monday.

The new policy, aiming at enlarging Germany's and Italy's respective "space for existence" was proclaimed when an Italian delegation to the Vienna Convention yesterday assured Germany of Mussolini's full cooperation in the Reich's efforts to regain its lost overseas possessions.

Mussolini's Cabinet director, Dr. Mariengazzi, declared that "Italy will march at the side of Germany in the colonial question," to which General Franz Von Epp, President of the Nazi Colonial Association, replied he felt sure that the colonial claims would be met "maybe in a year, or in a decade."

Von Epp at the same time declared it was a "mistake to believe that Hitler is unfriendly to England."

Their Majesties Welcomed

Welcome, Your Majesties

By "JOIRE"

"Hark" the cannon's thunderous roar,
That greets their Majesties on our shore,
Could Wolfe wake up, this bright May morn
Such Royal Company to adorn.
Then Canada, from coast to coast
Will drink the Royal Couple's Toast.
Long may they reign, o'er such as we,
Who class ourselves among the free,
We hope their stay in our fair land
Will be one glorious, triumphal band
That binds us closer to the Throne
Of God's appointed, hallowed own.
In viewing Canada's ancient strand
As they travel o'er it hand in hand,
May they take to our people, o'er the sea,
The impressions gained in this land so free,
And to know that "Canada" come what may,
Will be there upon the day,
To Guard, defend and serve as before,
The "Gracious Couple" who have honored our shore.
"God Bless The Queen",
"God Save The King".

New History is Made In Old Quebec as King Sets Foot on Land

By LEON EDEL

(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Quebec, May 17 (CP)—From the King's wharf, a mile and a half away, to the sweeping bend in the mighty St. Lawrence River at Wolfe's Cove thousands of Quebecois bestirred themselves long before dawn today to thunder an overwhelming greeting to their King and Queen.

An historic Quebec made new history. For the first time in its storied centuries the King was setting foot on the soil of his dominion, accompanied by his consort and a distinguished retinue, on a journey that will take them 7,605 miles from the Atlantic to the Pacific and back again.

SWEDISH FLYER NOT YET SIGHTED

Aviator Carries No Wireless and Possibly Has Not Been Seen by Boats

New York, May 17 (AP)— Carl Backman, Swedish aviator attempting a trans-Atlantic flight from Newfoundland to Stockholm, Sweden, was unreported early today.

He carried no wireless, however, so reports of his progress would depend on his monoplane's being seen by a liner at sea or from some land point along his route.

At 3.40 a.m. E.D.T. Backman was 23 hours out of Newfoundland airport. If he were able to maintain top cruising speed of 110 miles an hour, he could have covered 2,640 miles or a little more than the distance of his planned course.

Stockholm, May 17 (AP)—Despite excellent weather conditions on this side of the Atlantic, aviators predicted today that Carl Backman, Swedish flier attempting a trans-Atlantic flight from Newfoundland to Stockholm, would not reach here before 8 p.m. (5 p.m., E.D.T.). No reports of his progress had been received up to 2 p.m. (10 a.m. E.D.T.).

PRIME MINISTER GIVES WELCOME TO ROYAL COUPLE

Canadian People Deeply Conscious of Signal Honor Conferred Says Speaker

NATIONAL UNITY

Hope Their Majesties Feel They Have Left One Home to Come to Another

Quebec, May 17 (CP)—Following is the text of the address of welcome to Their Majesties spoken by Prime Minister Mackenzie King today at the Dominion Government luncheon in Quebec:

May It Please Your Majesty:

On behalf of the Canadian people, I respectfully extend to Your Majesty and to Her Majesty the Queen a royal welcome to your Dominion of Canada.

We are deeply conscious of the signal honor of being the first of the overseas' nations of the Commonwealth to be visited by the reigning sovereign, and of having the high privilege of welcoming, in person, our King and Queen. We are proud indeed to feel that, in the person of Your Majesty, we have among us, not the symbol, but the living presence of the head of the whole empire.

Three and a third centuries ago, unknown, unheralded and unwelcomed, small craft crossed the then uncharted seas and sailed up the St. Lawrence to where this morning Your Majesty set foot on Canadian soil. Here, these early adventurers raised the fleur-de-lis of France and planted the cross of Christianity. That day was the birthday of Canada. Since then, these heights have witnessed other scenes alike heroic and historic.

This afternoon Your Majesty will view the plains where one and three-quarter centuries ago the soil of old France in the new world was won for the British Crown. The transition gave a firm foundation to the British dominions beyond the seas. Your Majesty will also see the memorial which, in a single epitaph, commemorates the virtues of the gallant leaders of the two great races then in conflict—a symbol of the highest chivalry, but, even more, of national unity.

Here, in 1864, after a preliminary conference at Charlottetown, the Fathers of Confederation drafted the resolutions which were the basis of the British North America Act. By this act, the Provinces of Canada, Nova Scotia and New Brunswick, were federally united under the crown into one dominion. On July 1, 1867, with a constitution similar in principle to that of the United Kingdom, the British Colonies thus united became the Dominion of Canada.

British Commonwealth Moulded in N. America Largely, Declares the King

This Moment is Historic Says King George Deeply Moved

Quebec, May 17 (CP)—Here is the text of the King's reply to Prime Minister Mackenzie King's address of welcome today at the Dominion Government luncheon here.

"Mr. Prime Minister,

"I am deeply moved by your words of welcome to the Queen and myself on behalf of the Canadian people.

"I recognize that this moment is historic. It is the first time that a British King has crossed the Atlantic. I stand today on the soil of North America. Here, in the past two centuries, through loss and through gain, the British Commonwealth of Nations has been largely moulded into its present form.

"This is also the first visit of the Sovereign to one of his oversea Dominions. It is fitting that it should be to the senior Dominion of the Crown. I am particularly pleased that, on the day of my arrival in Canada, I should have the pleasure of meeting, not only my ministers, but all the members of my Privy Council for Canada.

"You, in Canada, have already fulfilled part of the Biblical promise and obtained dominion from sea to sea. You are now engaged in fulfilling the latter part of that promise in consolidating government from the river to the ends of the earth, from the Saint Lawrence to the Arctic snows.

"The Queen and I are looking forward, with anticipation too great for expression, to seeing all we possibly can of this vast country. Particularly do we welcome the opportunity of greeting the men and women who are its strength and stay, and of seeing something of the younger generation so soon to become the guardians of its future."

Spirit of Quebec is Happy Fusion Of Vigorous Spirit, His Majesty Says

Quebec, May 17 (CP)—The King spoke in French when replying to Senator Raoul Dandurand, Government leader in the Senate, at the Dominion Government luncheon here today. A translation of his text follows:

"I wish, Senator Dandurand, to offer my tribute to the ancient Province of Quebec and this beautiful old city in the language of the pioneers who brought civilization to the shores of the St. Lawrence River. It was here that the door to Canada was first opened and it was here that the Canadian nation was born.

"It was here that great exploits were accomplished—leaving records that will ever remain glorious for France and Great Britain. It is here today that two great races dwell happily side by side. The spirit of Quebec is a happy fusion of vigorous spirit, proudly guarded.

"It was also from this old section of Canada that great numbers of early pioneers trekked to the west and northwest and joined with the sons of the British Isles and continental European nations to make Canada a land of free men.

"It is the mixing of the old with the new that makes for a powerful city or nation.

"Harmonious accord and blending of the various elements which constitute Canada was the ideal dream of the Fathers of Confederation.

"I cannot wish for you who hear me a more fortunate destiny than the fruitful and happy accomplishment of this noble dream."

Monarch Praises Loyalty of Quebec And Tolerance of 2 Canadian Races

Quebec, May 17 (CP)—The King paid tribute to the loyalty of the French-Canadian people and to the spirit of tolerance in which the two great Canadian races live as he replied to an address by Premier Duplessis of Quebec at a Legislative Chamber welcoming ceremony today.

The King's reply written in French was handed to the Premier. A translation of his text follows:

"I most cordially thank you for the loyal sentiments expressed in the address of welcome presented to me in this ancient and historic capital this morning and wish to state that the Queen and myself have been deeply touched by the reception.

"The allusion you have made to the memory of my venerated father and my mother also touches me profoundly. I wish to assure you that the late King entertained a deep love for the people of the Province of Quebec and the Queen Mother is similarly devoted to the Quebec people.

"The spirit of tolerance in which the two great races dwell side by side in this province is an example to the entire world. This harmony augurs well for the future of Canada. Canadians of French origin are proud, and justly so, of their traditions, customs and language.

"Associated with their compatriots of other origins, they are united in a love for Canada, loyalty to the Crown and devotion to the ideals of democracy and liberty so dear to everyone living under the British flag.

The Queen and myself are delighted to be in Canada and we assure you we will cherish this visit to your historic city. We thank you again for your kind wishes and extend the sincere thanks of Princesses Elizabeth and Margaret Rose for the kind thoughts and sentiments you entertain for them.

"In expressing our sentiments of affection for the people of the Province of Quebec, the Queen and myself pray that Providence may continue to guide you safely through the future."

70,000 GERMANS START CENSUS

Further Regimentation of Life of Nation is Foreseen

Berlin, May 17 (AP)—A volunteer army of 70,000 Germans began work today on a census which will afford the Nazi regime information on which to base further regimentation of the life of the nation.

One important purpose of the count, it was officially stated, is to determine exactly what callings, trades, professions or branches of labor are too scantily supplied to satisfy the needs of the country and which ones are overcrowded from the national viewpoint.

Measures designed to make individual talents and achievements better serve the dominating interests of the Reich are expected to follow.

Says Germans More Afraid of War Than Other Nations

Netherlands Labor Man Says German Labor Opposed to Nazis

Bournemouth, England, May 17 —(CP)— A Netherland Labor spokesman said today that the Germans are more afraid of war than any other people in the world.

M. Aldenbroek, Netherlands delegate to the annual conference of the British Railway Clerks' Association and Deputy Secretary of the International Transport Workers' Federation, said his organization was keeping close contact with transport workers in Germany who are opposed to the Nazi regime.

"I can assure you that very many of them are opposed to it but they have no means of expression," he said. "With regard to the present crisis I can say without hesitation that no people in the world are more afraid of war than the German people."

Salute of 21 Guns Fired at King George and Queen Land on Canadian Soil at Quebec

GREETINGS BY PREMIER

Throne Centre of National Life in Canada, Rt. Hon. Mr. King Declares at Dominion House Luncheon

By LEON EDEL

Quebec, May 17 (CP)—First reigning British Monarch to cross the Atlantic Ocean, King George VI, and his Queen, Elizabeth, disembarked today from the liner Empress of Australia and stepped into the most enthusiastic welcome old French Canada could provide.

For minutes before the Royal couple stepped ashore at 10:34 a.m., thousands of men, women and children set up a deafening roar that could not be outdone by the crescendo of marine whistles, tolling church bells and even the roar of low-flying airplanes. And only for seconds at a time was there a letup.

King and Queen On Deck.

The Royal chartered liner hove into sight on schedule. She had anchored down-river with her four warship escort and hauled up anchor at 8:15 a.m. Little more than two hours later she pulled along the jammed pier, tossed ashore her lines, lowered her gangplank.

During the brief manoeuvring of the ship, the King, dressed in the uniform of an Admiral, and the Queen, in a pearl grey ensemble, stood on deck and waved in response to the roaring crowd that at times became almost unmanageable.

The King and Queen disappeared from deck. At 10:18 Prime Minister Mackenzie King and Justice Minister Ernest Lapointe went aboard. They could not be seen extending the welcome to their Majesties who reappeared shortly after, the tall sailor King, shaking hands with the ship's officers as he started down the gangway.

Landing On Canadian Soil.

Once on the pier, the King and Queen took their places on richly-decorated dais where they received uniformed Canadian Privy Councillors, members of the Dominion Government, Provincial and Civic leaders.

Leaving the Queen on the dais, surrounded by Cabinet Ministers, the King inspected the guard of honor formed by the Royal 22nd Regiment. His Majesty walked slowly through the rows of the French-Canadian troops, smartly attired in busbies and scarlet tunics.

Your Majesty, and to Her Majesty the Queen, the sentiments of joy, respect, loyalty and affection of the entire province of Quebec and, in particular, of Canadians of French descent.

In varied circumstances, it has been our privilege to hail the passage among us of illustrious persons, even of princes of the blood, but never until this moment have we enjoyed the signal honor of receiving the visit of our august sovereigns nor the happiness of conveying to them by word of mouth our homage and our wishes. Unanimous in heart, then, we acclaim today the presence of Your Majesty in our ancient capital.

High Interest Emphasized

By deigning to visit, with Her Majesty the Queen, your subjects of North America, Your Majesty has graciously emphasized the high interest Your Majesty evinces in them, and this prized mark of benevolence and affection touches us as profoundly as it honors us.

In 1908, Your Majesty's revered father came to celebrate with us the tercentenary of the oldest city of the new continent and, previously, in 1901, the Queen Mother, always dear to our hearts had visited us.

We are overjoyed and privileged that Your Majesty has now commenced his official visit to the provinces of Canada at the City of Quebec, cradle of the Canadian nation, battlefield whereon our destinies were decided, arena in which responsible government was won, seat of conference whence emerged the entente between Anglo-Canadian and Franco-Canadian, a pact the British Parliament later was to ratify in giving us the Federative Charter which has governed us since 1867.

Faithful To Forbears

Always has our province been faithful to the crown of Britain; equally has it been faithful to traditions inherited from our forbears, to the pact of Confederation of 1867, and to that mission which British statesmen in 1791 confided to it—"To remain altogether French." This past we cherish in our hearts, and never shall we cease to consider the throne as the bulwark of our democratic institutions and of our constitutional liberties It is our ardent desire to rival the other provinces in making of the Canada we love a land happy, powerful, ever worthy of the most gracious and excellent princes it has pleased Providence to bestow upon us as sovereigns.

To the homage of those assurances and of our most profound sentiments, permit us to join that of our good wishes. May the sojourn of Your Majesties on Canadian soil be enjoyable everywhere and in everything! May heaven long preserve you in the respectful affection of your many and loyal subjects, and bless our heartfelt wishes for the happiness of Your Majesties and for the happiness of Their Royal Highnesses the Princesses Elizabeth and Margaret Rose, whose exquisite charm long since conquered all hearts, and to whom we respectfully address the salute of Quebec.

God Save Our Gracious King and Queen!

Telegram Sent to Prime Minister Urging Appearance Here of the King

Mayor Bone and F. R. Wotten, Chairman Bd. of Education, Send Wire Today

PLANS UPSET

Concerned over the fact that no definite statement has so far been given regarding the probability of Belleville and district residents being able to see the King and Queen on their visit through Belleville on Sunday, Mayor Jamieson Bone and F. R. Wotten, chairman of the Belleville Board of Education prepared jointly the following telegram which today was sent to Rt. Hon. W. L. Mackenzie King at Quebec: Right Honourable Mackenzie King, Quebec.

The City of Belleville has made repeated enquiries as to whether His Majesty King George and His Gracious Queen would make an appearance on the Royal Train as it passes through Belleville but as yet we have had no satisfactory answer. We did not press the matter too strongly due to the fact that many of our citizens had planned to go to Kingston for the day but now the curtailment of programme in Kingston will make that impossible and thus deprive thousands of loyal citizens young and old from seeing Their Majesties. We feel that it is very important and imperative that at least a few minutes stop be made at the Belleville station on the evening of May twenty-first and that Their Majesties appear on the observation platform so that thousands of our children and adults from this grand old United Empire Loyalist Territory be given the privilege if only for a few moments of doing honour to Our King and Queen. We understand that as a divisional point the Royal Train will stop at Belleville in any event and we sincerely hope that an early and specific answer "yes" will be forthcoming setting forth such details as you deem necessary.

(Sgd.) Jamieson Bone,
Mayor.
F. R. Wotten,
Chairman Board of Education.

Officials Complete Arrangements To Handle Crowds at C.N.R. Station

Snow Fences to be Erected Along Right-of-Way on Both Sides

PLATFORM CLOSED

Recent changes in the Royal Tour of Their Majesties, King George and Queen Elizabeth, have assured the stopping of the Royal Train in Belleville on the evening of Sunday May 21st., for a period of at least five minutes it was officially learned through Canadian National Railway officials at Belleville today. It was learned the Royal Train will stop directly in front of the Belleville C.N.R. station enroute from Kingston westward and plans to accommodate the large number of citizens from around the Bay of Quinte area, who will doubtless throng the local station premises, are already formulated.

Today Chief Kidd was in close communication with C.N.R. officials regarding the exact procedure of handling the many thousands, who will throng the Belleville C.N.R. premises in hopes of seeing the Royal couple. The railway right-of-way from the Cannifton Road crossing to Cemetery St., on the south side of the right-of-way, will be lined with a snow fence, as will the tracks from the Cannifton Road to the roundhouse siding on the north side of the tracks, Canadian National railway officials informed Chief Kidd today. No person will be permitted inside of these snow fences while the station platform proper will also be closed to the public. However, the snow fences will be erected in such a manner that along the station tracks ample room to take care of many thousands has been assured.

No Parking in Station Yard

Fred Chapman, in charge of C.N.R. special police, stated today that no automobiles would be permitted to park on Canadian National property, including the space usually used for parking purposes south of the Belleville station. "All of this available space will be utilized for the accommodation of the public, both on the north and south sides of the track, but outside of the snow fences," stated Mr. Chapman to Chief Kidd today as arrangements to police the entire section were completed. City and Provincial Police will augment under Chief Kidd's supervision to patrol the area immediately around where the Royal Train is scheduled to stop, with Great War Veterans, under the direction of James Lazenby, of the Army and Navy Veterans in Canada, Post 201. The veterans will patrol all railway crossing and bridges in the vicinity of Belleville and no persons will be permitted within a designated distance of such crossings and bridges, it was announced.

Children Given First Consideration

"The children must be given first consideration when the Royal Train stops at Belleville. We are endeavouring to provide the best suitable position for the children, where they may be able to see Their Majesties, if they appear on the Royal coach platform," stated Chief Kidd today as he added that final details regarding the stop had not been made official or announced as yet. However, only officials with Royal arm bands and badges, as provided by the Dominion government and uniformed police officers will be permitted inside the snow fence enclosures surrounding the Belleville C.N.R.

Unofficially it was announced today that Mr. C. A. Cameron, M.P., was endeavouring to have Their Majesties appear on the observation platform of the Royal Train so that all present may have an opportunity of seeing them. The official time of the arrival of the Royal Train was not made public, but it is believed the train will arrive sometime after 9.00 p.m. city time on Sunday night.

Notice is hereby given that the Banks in the City of Belleville will be closed on the following dates: SATURDAY, May 20th.; MONDAY, May 22nd.; WEDNESDAY, May 24th. May 20th. and 24th. are Dominion holidays and as such must be observed by all Banking institutions, while May 22nd. has been declared a Civic Holiday in Belleville.

BURGLARS TREAT HOUSE WIFE WITH CONSIDERATION

Detroit, May 17 (CP)—Mrs. Vivian Sanchez, who was bound and gagged for three hours after two men ransacked her apartment, described the thugs today as "very considerate." The men stole $40 and 48 suits owned by Sanchez who planned going into the clothing business.

They did not remove my engagement or wedding ring. Neither did they take a silver dollar which I told them was a keepsake from my mother," Mrs. Sanchez said.

MOTHER AND DAUGHTER EXECUTED BY SOVIETS FOR ESPIONAGE

Moscow, May 17 (AP)—A mother and daughter convicted of espionage on behalf of a "foreign Fascist power" were executed at Kiev, the army newspaper Red Star disclosed today.

Testimony before a military court showed the daughter had, through marriages, obtained information from officers in the important Ukrainian border district.

Says Propaganda May Militate Against Success

London, May 17 (CP Cable)—German propaganda in the Canadian Middle-West may militate against success of the visit of the King and Queen to that district, according to Rt. Hon. R. B. Bennett.

The former Canadian Prime Minister told a Toc-H meeting yesterday that the Middle West had a large German community where propaganda could be circulated freely.

"We know that propaganda is controlled from Chicago and that its effect on the younger German settlers is considerable," he said. However, the older Germans valued their liberty in Canada too highly to be influenced by propaganda.

Mr. Bennett described Their Majesties' trip to the Dominion as a "sacrifice", pointing out they would be required to spend long hours on the train and at official functions.

If Britain ever was attacked, Canada would rush to the colors, the former Prime Minister predicted.

Stirling Business Men Organize New Association

Clifford Hatton. is Chosen to Head New Organization in Village

D.S.T. DEFEATED

Stirling, May 17 (Special)—About fifty Stirling merchants and business men gathered in the Stirling Council Chambers on Monday evening May 15th when the matter of organizing into an association was discussed at some length. It finally decided to form an organization under the name of the Stirling Businessmen's Association and the following officers were elected: President, Mr. Clifford Hatton; Vice President, R. A. Patterson; Secretary Treasurer, A. E. Strickland.

After a lengthy discussion to holding May 22nd as a holiday it was decided, that it be observed as a holiday in honour of their Majesties and thus make it possible for several of the citizens to attend the ceremonies in the neighbouring cities, and on Wednesday, May 24th to have the usual half holiday. A motion moved that the association recommend to the village council use of daylight saving time to coincide with surrounding communities was defeated by a large majority. It was thought by many, that daylight saving time while advantageous to city and town residents was a disadvantage to the farmers and for that reason it would be unwise to adopt it in Stirling which is the centre of a farming community. The matter of closing all business places at eleven o'clock on Saturday nights was also dealt with and with opinions on the matter divided no action was taken. Another regulation definitely established was that stores would remain open on the evening previous to any holiday.

Clean Pool Regularly

The members also agreed to request the village council to have the children's community swimming pool cleaned up periodically for the benefit of the children's health.

With regard to the matter of the Dominion Day holiday 1st of July, which falls on Saturday, it was decided, that the association would suggest to the council celebrating the holiday on Monday rather than Saturday. A discussion dealing with the dust problem was next dealt with and several merchants dealing in food products voiced their disapproval of the dust, which is allowed to accumulate on the streets. A motion was passed that the organization request the council to wash the streets once a week with Friday being the day preferred. The matter of decoration in honour of the Royal visit was left in the hands of the executive under the leadership of Mr. Hatton.

The meeting was well attended and each person freely expressed their views on matter concerning the welfare of the village. A drive to encourage shopping at home would later be adopted by the association it was thought. The meeting adjourned and prospective members will be admitted to the organization from time to time by communicating with any of the officials and paying the small membership fee of fifty cents per year.

Senate Leader Welcomes King In French Language

Quebec, May 17 (CP)—Folowing is the text of the address of Hon. Dandurand, Government leader in the Senate, spoken at the Federal Government luncheon in Quebec for the Kink and Queen:

"May it please Your Majesty:

"It is fitting that you should be welcomed in the capital of New France, and that the respectful homage of our whole population should be offered to your charming consort, in the language of Champlain who founded Quebec in 1608, and of the descendants of his heroic companions whose pathways of exploration, as far as the Rockies, will be followed by Your Majesties. The explorers and early pioneers of Canada belonged to a race which is not unknown to Your Majesty, since you claim not without pride, a common, though distant ancestry.

"Indeed, they came directly from that celebrated Duchy of Normandy which gave to its leader, William, 50,000 men for the battle at Hastings which established his domination over England. It has the descendants of these Anglo-Normans who, in 1760, came to join here their Franco-Norman cousins.

Building Permit Issued for More Store Improvements

Face Lifting of Belleville Business Section Continues — More Building Permits Taken Out

Some one suggested that Belleville business section was having its face lifted—new store fronts going in steadily, one after the other, while coats of paint and new and more attractive signs add to the brilliance and attractiveness of the streets. Latest to join the parade of progress is the Artistic Ladies' Wear Store, 301 to 303 Front Street, J. Abramsky, B. A. manager, occupying its own building. Work has started on the reconstruction and remodelling of this building, and the store premises will be practically torn down and reconstructed, with one of the finest business fronts obtainable and a complete modern interior comprising the very latest in salesroom fixtures, pleasing to the eye and making shopping easy and delightful. While the reconstruction is going on the Artistic stock will be moved to the store premises across the street formerly occupied by the A. & P. store, opposite Victoria Avenue.

NEW HISTORY

In the gray morning light, under clear, promising skies, the little cove presented a scene of orderly and well-calculated activity. Police officials were at their posts at daybreak. Shortly afterwards communications officials arrived and took up places in the 1,400-foot-long shed alongside which the Empress of Australia docks.

In the early morning light the gay bunting and multi-colored decorations stood out with sharp brilliance—bright reds, deep blues and rich gold—turning the bare, vast shed into a warm and hospitable place.

Many Historic Spots

Not far from Wolfe's Cove is the ever-remembered spot in Canadian history where on a September night 180 years ago General Wolfe elanded his men — regiments of Grenadiers, Highlanders, and two battalions of Royal Americans — and massed them after a perilous climb up the heights of the Plains of Abraham where they won their battle against the French almost before it began.

The King sets foot thus virtually at the spot where history decreed that New France should one day expand into a great Dominion under his rule.

Infinite police precautions, taken by the Royal Canadian Mounted Police in collaboration with Provincial and Civic Police, were in effect. To get his position here a correspondent had first to don a numbered red armband; had to show a white card identifying him as a newsman and finally a special card to admit him to the cove.

No Undue Movement

Police knew where every man was to be stationed. Provisions were made that there should be no undue movement inside or around the shed. Newsmen were cautioned against leaving the enclosure to which they were conducted. A limited number of messenger boys were allowed to carry the reporters' copy, which they wrote standing up, to telegraphic instruments more than 150 feet away.

Gather on Terrace

On the heights, 350 feet above the St. Lawrence, which has earned for Quebec the name of the "Gibraltar of America" crowds were assembled along, famous Dufferin Terrace. And thousands stood along the Plains of Abraham, once a gory battlefield, but today a peaceful park.

It was estimated that about 1,000 police, under the direction of the Royal Canadian Mounted Police, were deployed in the area of the royal arrival.

There were 350 provincial traffic officers, including khaki-clad squads on silver motorcycles, more than 300 provincial police in addition to detectives and "Mounties", and squads of plain clothesmen.

At 6.30 a.m a busload of 42 handpicked mounted police, resplendent in their uniforms, drew up at the west end of the shed where the liner docks and for the next half hour went smartly through their paces, were inspected and received final instructions.

Among the first arrivals in the vicinity of the shed, seeking a point of vantage from which to view the ceremonies was a French-Canadian family from the northern village Jonquieres, Que., near Chicoutimi, father, mother and children had motored all night.

At 7 a.m. E.D.T. all general automobile traffic to and from the wharf was cut off. Thereafter, only cars carrying special authorization from police were allowed along the three-mile stretch from Upper Quebec to the Cove.

Arrival Outside

Provisions were made for two landing points, one inside the shed in case of inclement weather, and the other in the open air. As the sun mounted, it became increasingly clear the arrival would take place outside. Workers were busy removing coverings from the small stand erected at a point just to the right of where the gangplank is let down.

A symphony of sound reached the ear outside the shed. Tolling church bells, calling the faithful to morning prayer, came over the placid St. Lawrence. Nearer the cacaphonous roar of motorcycles, speeding from point to point, mingled with the occasional blast from some tug down the way, ready for action.

Ships in the harbor, to the east of Wolfe's Cove, were decked out from stem to stern.

Green Carpet Used

The centre of the city stirred shortly before eight o'clock as Government limousines bearing notables to Wolfe's Cove sped away from the Chateau Frontenac bearing their first loads. But there was remarkable quiet in Place D'Armes, the Square before the Chateau, which has been the busiest spot in Quebec in recent days.

Most of Quebec's 150,000 population and her thousands of visitors had risen earlier to go to the Cove. White-helmeted city policemen stood on street corners receiving final instructions from their sergeants.

Once it was determined the landing would be made in open air, no time was lost in making final preparations. A green velvet carpet was laid on the stand where government leaders assembled to meet Their Majesties. Scarlet runners were laid from the point where the gangplank lowers.

Beautiful Flowers

Potted palms were placed about the stand, and hydrangeas, roses and other flowers. In the centre, against a background of cloth of gold, stood the small thrones. To the right of the King's throne and left of the Queen's small tables were placed, covered with scarlet.

High on the summit overlooking Wolfe's Cove hundreds could be seen jammed along Grey Terrace, beyond which lies Battlefield Park. Some had been standing there since 4 a.m. to get a bird's eye view of the landing.

Dotted at different points on the cliffs persons could be seen clambering about in search of satisfactory observation points.

The whole area at the east end of the shed resembled a military camp. More than 100 frontiersmen in their blue and khaki uniforms took up positions on either side of the stretch of roadway leading from the wharf to Champlain Street which skirts the cliffside.

An ever-increasing throng gathered in the area reserved for spectators, about 100 feet away from the reception platform and directly facing it.

A Hustling Business

Restaurants throughout the city did a hustling early-morning business as residents and the visitors grabbed hasty bites before rushing off to witness the arrival.

Crippled war veterans had gathered around Quebec's Cross of Sacrifice opposite the Provincial Legislature Buildings where the King and Queen will pass on their way to their official welcome by the Province.

Taxi-cabs raced hither and thither answering rush calls and traffic police on their roaring motorcycles sped to and from Provincial Police headquarters.

At 9 a.m. E.D.T. the liner Empress of Australia hove into sight of the thousands lined along the terrace that skirts the old embattlements, and hundreds of others gathered in windows of the Chateau Frontenac.

Two Royal Cars

At 9 a.m. the two Royal cars, accompanied by full motorcycle escort and all the cars of the Royal procession, drove into the shed and came to a halt just near the east exit.

Atop the Royal car, still to be unfurled, was a small Royal standard. Below it—just above the windshield—was the Royal Coat of Arms.

It was a distinctly chilly morning with the sun appearing and disappearing, behind clouds. There was no wind.

Shortly after 9 a.m. official press cars arrived bringing scores of correspondents representing the press of the world and they began to take up positions assigned them a few feet from the Royal stand.

Suddenly, the bells of Quebec's numerous churches began a tumultous welcome. From some sections of the city, the liner and her escorts could be seen rounding the Island of Orleans.

A Deafening Roar

The drone of airplanes overhead, the ringing of the bells, the screeching and roaring of marine whistles, the shouts of persons thronging every roof, balcony and any other spot habitable, made a deafening roar.

At 9:20 a.m. E.D.T. the Empress was directly opposite the centre of the city.

At that point she was just a little more than a mile from Wolfe's Cove. The Canadian destroyers were on either side of the Empress with the Glasgow and Southampton following in the white ship's wake.

In a few minutes she was out of sight of those watching from the centre of the city and the church bells ceased their pealing.

Excitement increased at the Cove as the crowds strained to catch first glance of the Royal Armada. But the huge shed hid most of the river view.

By now, most of the official welcoming party had gathered, talking in small groups and pacing the fenced-off area. Privy Councillors in full uniforms added a brilliant touch to the colorful picture.

Crowd Orderly

The crowd was orderly and for the moment demonstrative.

At 9.45 preceded by tugs, the nose of the Empress came into view of those assembled on the dock. Its white bulk loomed majestically.

Prime Minister Mackenzie King arrived on the dock ready to be the first aboard.

The first line was thrown from the ship to the pier at 9.55 a.m.

Their Majesties appeared on deck and smilingly responded by waving to the cheers and shouts from the crowd. The crowd maintained its roar of welcome and the King and Queen continued to wave hands as the liner snuggled into her berth and the rest of the lines were thrown to the pier.

Commander A. R. Meikle could be seen on the bridge, remaining at his post to give the last order that made fast his royal-chartered ship and brought to a close a momentous voyage.

Scandinavian Conference That Rejected Hitler's Repuest

Pictured in conference at Stockholm, Swedish capital, are the foreign ministers of the four Scandinavian countriees, who met to draft a joint reply to Germany's request for mutual non-aggression pacts. None of the four northern nations wished to commit itself but the reply that resulted from the conference was tantamount to 'no'. As in the last war, the Scandinavian countries wished to keep apart from Europe's feuds and maintain a strict neutrality. The foreign ministers, seen at the conference table, are Juho Erkko, Finland, and Halvdan Koht, Norway, on the near side of table, and Peter Munch, Denmark, and Carl Sandler, Sweden, across from them.

PRIME MINISTER

stitution made provision for a council to be styled the Queen's Privy Council for Canada.

Today, all the privy councillors of Canada have been invited to meet Your Majesty, including members of both present and past administrations.

First Time In History

It is the first occasion since Confederation, apart from the meetings of the first Cabinet, on which all the members of the King's Privy Council for Canada have been brought together. It is the first time in the history of Canada that the Ministers of the Crown and, indeed, all members of Your Majesty's Privy Council, have been assembled in the presence of their King.

Today, as never before the throne has become the centre of our national life.

Under the shadow of the Great Rock of Quebec, there has passed, in the course of years, a continuous stream of men and women, seeking and finding new homes and new opportunities in this favoured land. We rejoice in the thought that, for a time, our King and Queen will follow the path of those adventurers and pioneers. Your Majesties will discover not only—as they did—forests, prairies and mountains, but thriving villages, towns and cities, all eager to extend their welcome.

We hope there may be opportunity as well for Your Majesties to see and to enjoy something of the natural beauty of Canada's many rivers and lakes, its vast spaces, its clear skies and golden sunshine, its national parks, its quiet countryside and its peaceful homes.

Not Unmindful of Sacrifices

We are not unmindful of the sacrifices involved in your long and arduous journeys over land and sea, and in parting for the time being with your children—these cherished children of the Empire, the Princesses Elizabeth and Margaret Rose. May the sincerity and warmth of our welcome be some compensation to you during this temporary separation. Your Majesties will find other children in this land longing to press around you, children who in turn, will hand on to a future generation the memory of a great moment in their lives. Here, too, you will be in the heart of a family which is your own; a family of men and women of varied stock and race and thought, who, in free association with other members of the Commonwealth, but equally in their own way, are working out their national destiny.

Of One Household

We would have Your Majesties feel that, in coming from the Old Land to the new, you have but left one home to come to another; that we are all of one household. Free institutions and democratic ideals are as dear to the hearts of your people in Canada as to the peoples in any other part of the empire. We regard their preservation and perpetuation as the common concern of all.

May I, in conclusion, be permitted to say that the warmth of the welcome Your Majesties will everywhere receive is bound up in a very special way with the admiration that all Canadians feel for the qualities of heart and character which you possess—for what you are in your selves. In your daily lives we see exemplified the things we value most—faith in God, concern for human well-being, consecration to the public service, delight in the simple joys of home and family life. Greater than our sense of the splendour of your state is our affection for two young people who bear, in so high a spirit, a responsibility unparalleled in the world.

CANADA WELCOMES THEIR MAJESTIES

His Majesty King George Sixth, descendant and inheritor of the mighty line of Kings, dating back far beyond the days of William the Conqueror, and Her Majesty Queen Elizabeth are now in Canada. Today, therefore, will go down in history for on this memorable seventeenth day of May, 1939, the first of Britain's Kings and Queens begin their sojourn among their people of this nation of Canada. They have come over thousands of miles of ocean, gulf and river to be at home with our people.

This morning when Their Majesties first put foot on Canadian soil at Quebec, a scene never to be forgotten was enacted. The King and Queen had come to a people of one of the great free nations of the Empire. To the Prime Minister of Canada came the high honor of welcoming the King and Queen .The warmth and spontaneity of the welcome at the Wolfe's Cove Terminal when Prime Minister King who had gone aboard the royal liner to greet Their Majesties, preceded the Sovereigns down the gangway to the terminal where presentations to Their Majesties were made of prominent citizens and later when the royal procession started for the Quebec Legislative Buildings along the streets crowded with thousands of cheering Canadians are but an indication of the triumph of the coming royal progress to the west coast and back to the east coast which awaits Their Majesties, whose course since they came to the Throne has endeared them to the Empire and to this nation not only by reason of the exalted office they hold but also for their selves. In the happy weeks to come they will be travelling across the vast stretches of territory which is Canada, meeting their subjects in a country which extends from the Atlantic coast to the shores of the Pacific Ocean and from the Forty-Ninth Parallel and the Great Lakes to the Arctic Sea.

A great day which Canadians memorialize as Dominion Day is July 1st because it marks the union of the Provinces into a united Canada, but today with her King and Queen at home among them is another great day for it marks a step in that path of destiny this country will follow. Today is historic because the King and Queen are in a free nation within the Empire, a New World nation which has taken her place among the great of the earth. Britain and her rulers have done royally by Canada and it is not to be wondered that the people will acclaim and pay homage to Their Majesties because the royal visit is an inspiration to Canadian nationhood and ideals. This democratic young King and his gracious Consort will find in Canada the evidence of that same British liberty which has built up a noble Homeland and whose history is a way of progress of liberty and democracy and which has gathered about it the Dominions and Colonies, which rejoice in their heritage of British liberty, British justice and British civilization. Here they will find in Canada the same love of freedom which developed in the Old Land and which has made the Motherland the greatest power for democratic civilization in history. Here the King and Queen will be among the noble sons and noble daughters of noble fathers and mothers and grandparents, representing every portion of those happy isles of Great Britain and Ireland and also a noble race which had its origins in France in the great days of the French colonial expension, a people who are related by Norman ties of blood to the British people.

They will find that Canadians have not lost any of the virility, faith and sense of honor of their great ancestors who are remembered at this hour, as Canadians again dedicate themselves in loyality and devotion to British ideals whose highest representatives are the King and his gracious Consort.

Through the pomp of ceremonial will run the sincerity of the spirit of the Canadian people whose goodwill the Sovereigns will see exemplified on every hand and in every demonstration in their honor.

Though the tour will be exacting from the number of public appearances and ceremonies in which they will take part, it is the fond hope of Canadians that everything will unite during their stay in their Dominion to make this one of the happiest events of their lives.

At this time it is pleasant to note that the King and Queen lose no opportunity to meet the young children, the pupils of the schools, and students who will receive the deepest inspiration from this visit. The Rulers, happy parents, think of parents in every part of the Empire and are thought of by them.

The King and Queen coming from an island of supreme beauty will see in Canada one of the most happy lands on earth, a land blessed with the noblest political heritage ever handed down, a land with infinite resources, a land of infinite appeal from the standpoint of scenery and climate and a land inhabited by a people whose inspiration is British ideals and in the opportunities this Dominion offers.

This tour has been auspiciously begun and it will henceforth be the chief thought of the Canadian people, of the peoples of the Empire and of the Homeland as well as of nations outside the Empire. Canadians trust that it will be an inspiration to the Rulers to whom they now pay tribute and homage.
